HE WALKED THE AMERICAS

BY
L. TAYLOR HANSEN

$6.95 plus 25c
postage & handling

Almost two thousand years ago a mysterious white man walked from tribe to tribe among the American Nations. He came to Peru from the Pacific, He traveled through South and Central America, among the Mayans, into Mexico and all of North America, then back to ancient Tula, from whence he departed across the Atlantic to the land of his origin. Who was this white Prophet who spoke a thousand languages, healed the sick, raised the dead, and taught in the same words as Jesus Himself?

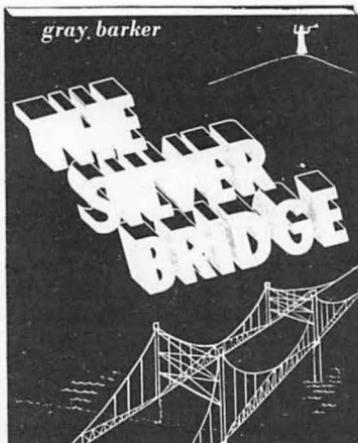

These are true Indian legends, gathered during twenty-five years of research by L. Taylor Hansen, archaeologist, from many different tribes all over the Americas. By consulting museums, libraries and experts on folk-lore, it has been possible to correlate the findings into this fascinating book, backed up by the spades of the diggers into ancient ruins, and by all the sciences with which L. Taylor Hansen is familiar. This is a book that will back up the New Testament of the East, with the Christian Indian legends of the West. In this book is proof that the Savior came not only to one continent, but to all the world. This book will strengthen your faith as no other could!

7" x 9 3/4" — color on all 256 pages! — 395 illustrations & maps — beautiful 24-carat gold-stamped binding.

EDITORIAL

Dear Lyn-Nro-Eback:

I won't know you for a hundred years, because you aren't born yet; but I want to write to you anyway, because I'm curious. I'm sitting here in the year 1971 wondering about something—judging from what the world is like today, I am a little concerned about you when you will be born into 2071. I look about me at the young people of today, and their problems confront me with a situation that makes me feel very ill at ease—the effect our life today will have on their future, and especially upon their "success" or "failure" in the business of living, which basically is the business of developing themselves and growing to the stature that will make "finished" human beings of them. It strikes me as an almost impossible state of affairs, and I view their prospects for success with a great deal of trepidation. But then, I thought of you, and how it would be with you one hundred years from now, and I had to write.

I know you can't answer my questions now, but you will answer them in 2071. There is a way I can anticipate those answers, and I'll try to do it. It's called extrapolation. That is, taking the facts that are known at the present, projecting them into the future, and coming up with more or less logical probabilities. So, I'll ask my first questions—what are your plans for your education? Are you planning to go to college? What kind of a college? What do they teach there? What courses are you interested in?

You aren't planning on an education? But why? Certainly it is necessary to hold a good job, and to earn a respectable living, you must have an education! Even today science has advanced to such a point that knowledge is doubling every ten years, and even with the best modern education we can get in ten years we will be almost out of the picture, hopelessly outdistanced by progress unless we keep on adding to our education by special courses and new enrollments in summer schools or night courses. Even if we are working, we will have to keep pace by studying the new things in our own field so as to keep from losing our job to a youngster who happens to have started his education ten years later than we did, and therefore is not "behind the times" as we are. So, how do you think that you will "make it" with no education at all?

Oh, you didn't say no education, just no formal education! What do you mean by that? You won't need to read? All books will be talking books? You only need to listen? A simple matter of taking "dictionary" as your main course in elementary school? Memorize the dictionary, so that you understand words, then listen to whatever book that contains the information you seek? Yes, I suppose that is true—knowledge will be so incredibly mountainous it would be impossible to be "educated" in any of it except for the rudimentary basics, which can't be used in practice anyway, so getting the kind of "education" we have now would be useless and futile. All right, I will accept that. As a matter of fact, I've rather adhered to this concept myself in my own "self" education. In my day it is called "jack of all trades, master of none".

What about writing? You won't need to write? All writing is done by machines, many of them responding directly to thought, or to voice, so that actually, writing is nothing more than a permanent extension of sound? The mechanics of writing is simply that—the business of the recording machine?

Mathematics? In your age the human mind is so far outstripped by the computer, and the science of living so prodigiously based on mathematics, that nothing can be achieved without the computer, simply on a basis of time itself—why work weeks on a problem of how to orbit one of the moons of Saturn when a computer can do the job in a second? And how to correct a course in mid-flight in time to avoid an accident if the accident will occur in twenty minutes and the calculations to avoid it would take a mathematician 18 years to compute? All your life is like that? Everything you do is so scientific and complex that our kind of math is useless? I'm beginning to see!

All right, I'll grant that if science continues to advance as it is now, your life will be lived at such a pace that there will be no time to adjust to anything simply as a person! Which brings me to a much more important question—how will all this effect you? How will you develop yourself as a person, hounded from birth to death by the machine? How will you have time to think! And what will you think about?

You won't think? Not think! Mechanically programed hypnotic processing? Reflex reactions? Shock treatment to remove previous concepts as soon as they are so outdated as to be a hindrance to your performance as a unit in society; then new concepts and information and performance reactions instilled by hypnotic processing? But you will be nothing but a robot! That's not living! Lyn-Nro-Eback, please don't answer my letter any further—I have decided

I don't want to know what your life will be like! It scares me!

As a matter of fact, I am so scared that now I've begun to take a new look at my own time, and at the young people around me who are trying to develop themselves in this rapidly expanding and more swiftly paced world of ours. Today we have begun flights into space, and we've been on the moon four times. Already we can see that it is not possible to be an individual in this scientific world—we can't go to the moon as a "person", but only as a "team", and a very large and amorphous team at that. Everything we do today is an integrated group effort, and individualism is an obstruction. Either we join the "union" or we don't work! Whatever happened to the "right (not) to work"? Oh yes, we can quit working, but what do we do in order to live while we do something that is not productive"? What if we want to express ourselves, such as in art work. And when we have created it, perhaps with makeshift materials and tools, how can we convert it into money necessary to live? Perhaps this is a rather inept example, but the fact is becoming more and more apparent that what young people of today, and increasingly for future young people with the passage of time and the acceleration of our scientific mechanization, are confronted with is frustration. Almost total frustration!

No matter what their dreams, their ideas, their ambitions, their desires, their plans, the furious pace of science hurls them willy-nilly into a vast wasteland of speed and change and incomprehensibility under which there is no opportunity to develop as persons. Literally, no time to live, only to run!

Most of all, this frantic pace amounts to total insecurity, and security is the one thing everyone needs as part and parcel of peace and privacy and enough time to commune quietly with nature and our own thoughts, and to relate to some other person, someone to love. Security does not simply mean safety from such things as hunger, pain, loneliness, danger, fear and anxiety, but something and someone to depend upon. It is good to have a modern mechanical marvel such as a wash machine or an automobile—but not good if it is going to prove to be defectively and carelessly made, subject to breakdown which is a great problem because neither mechanic nor replacement part is available—mostly due to planned obsolescence and periodical (yearly!) adoption of new models. There is no element of permanence (even though we know there is no such thing, really), which leads to insecurity even in the advanced science we deem so greatly desirable in our mechanical "standard" of living. But mostly, we could learn to live without our standard, if only we had some person who would be "permanent" in our lives.

Any young woman today faces a far more serious problem than her sister of a half-century ago, when the worst thing that could happen was to be an old maid, unable to find a husband to "support" her. Today, the finding of a husband is no guarantee at all of security, but frighteningly too often is only the prelude to the disaster of divorce or of abandonment. Today the concept of the family, of the home, of marital permanence is vanishing. Already it is suggested that the family type of life is on the way out—or at least it seems to be—and the result is that more and more young people, despairing of achieving that out-moded (but still necessary) way of life, or distrusting its permanence, or fearful of the tragedy of failure, have taken to the substitute of "living together" outside the bonds of matrimony. Because sex drives are powerful, and modern science has made contraception possible and dependable, failing to find a man who will commit himself to a lifetime of being a provider (often because he can get what he wants without it!), these young women settle for what they can get, snatch at what fulfilment they can attain.

Far from attaining equality with men in the "new liberation" of today, the female of the species is falling further behind than ever. Her new status of growing "equality" is being achieved at the cost of responsibility on the part of the male. This rejection of responsibility toward "his woman" on the part of the man may be partially due to this new "independence" on the part of the female, but much more to the furious pace of mechanical science which has robbed him of his own security formerly based on his muscles and his brain and on imagination and creativeness in a world where opportunity is not monopolized by a monster machine controlled by a monster society controlled by a monster government run on a controlled economy that depends for its existence on the complete subjugation of the individual to the "common" good.

Yesterday an education meant a "better" job; today the "degree" is necessary (and becoming mandatory) to hold any job, and the holding of that job means the forced shouldering of a "social responsibility" to support both the drones (the uneducated) and the irresponsible and the lazy, in addition to the aged, the sick and the infirm, plus the segments of humanity called the "undeveloped" (meaning their culture cannot be allowed to remain with its individuality in the race of a world-wide science that controls even the air that is breathed, but must be crushed beneath the brutal heel of conformity to the advanced culture of science). The science that should serve mankind has instead overwhelmed it!

What is more important, man or machine? The answer to that is obvious. And this being true, there is one question I can ask you, Lyn-Nro-Eback, there in 2071, that obviates all the other questions I asked; what I should have asked so that you could answer more realistically, is: "How is it in your world of one hundred years from now?"

You live with your family in a cave? You go out every day and hunt for nuts and berries and roots to eat?

You have many animal friends, and you like to swim in the clean, cool river? The sun shines brightly in a beautiful blue sky, and you love to lie in the green grass and wonder what kind of people used to live in that ghostly, ruined city you once visited with your father, looking for a piece of metal to fashion into a hoe to cultivate your little flower garden?

How nice!

Perhaps that is what the young people of today, so frustrated and harried, will do with their lives! Tear down this awful monster their leaders have created, so that you can live as God intended, and grow as a person, happy and wholesome and clean!—Rap.

MY ANGEL

*I have a little angel
Who goes in and out with me,
How much this angel loves me
I learned at mother's knee.*

*He whispers when there's danger
Of falling into sin;
With power he baffles satan
The victory to win.*

*He is always very near me
In study, work and prayer,
And when at night I slumber
He guards with loving care.*

*How foolish then on my part
At ten or twenty seven to be forgetful of a friend
Who leads the way to heaven.*

CALIFORNIA:

A DATE WITH DISASTER

by JOHN DOMBROWSKI

AND THEN IT CAME! A low rumble at first that quickly grew into a thunderous, shattering roar like some unbelievably huge, angry monster emerging from the murky depths of the sea! Awesome! Terrifying! The Pacific reared back and swelled into a mountain of water more than 300 feet high—following on the heels of the massive earthquake that smashed California in late afternoon.

The earth shivered and shook mightily, just minutes before, with the disaster hitting so many and so many families to lose their loved ones to sudden homelessness and heartbreak when it comes.

It is not clear what the future holds, but it is clear that the road to success is not clear at this point.

shock waves so great that it was almost like waves in the wake of an ocean-going vessel. The earth, west of the San Andreas fault, rolled like billows in the sea, breaking off and causing the entire west coast to tilt towards the ocean.

This gigantic tidal wave then started its rush inland, sweeping all before it and overwhelming the land in its all-conquering thrust. The freeways were lined with cars, trucks and vans, bumper to bumper, when the enormous wave came, effortlessly rolling over the cars and buildings.

Air currents were so disturbed by it that storm-like tornadoes accompanied the disaster swiftly moving in from the ocean. High winds whipped up the turbulent seas, sending waves hundreds of feet into the air.

The deep-throated sonorous roar of the mammoth wave was absolute and deafening and incredible in its power. Like a dozen atom bombs simultaneously set off all along the coast. The stupendous sound was ear-splitting and could be heard far inland, announcing its coming to the terrified victims waiting...waiting...

Fierce killer winds accompanying The Wave now ruthlessly attacked, ripping and shredding everything in its path. The massive mountain of water followed the winds eastward, crushing and burying Los Angeles beneath The Wave. Nothing—absolutely nothing—could stop the relentless overwhelming drive of ocean and wind. No place was left untouched.

The gargantuan wall of water quickly moved across the land submerging the wind-ravaged areas and gaining momentum and force with every mile. Twisting, swirling, pressing ever inland, destroying everything in its path and pushing everything beneath it as it came. This ravenous monstrous wave instantly snuffed out all the fires started by the great earthquake even as it smothered everything in its all-consuming watery embrace.

It seemed as though the setting sun itself stood still with horror as it viewed this chaos. The immense wave of water surged over the land and swept clean all evidence of Man and his handiwork. Once again, the tilted mountains shook like willows in a breeze in a powerful aftershock of the quake, then finally sank beneath The Wave. Untold thousands were carried beneath the gigantic wave or were buried alive en masse as the mountains crumbled and closed over their heads.

Farther up north the sea came in and swallowed up the Golden Gate Bridge, directly in the path of the oncoming wave, suffering total collapse. San Francisco twisted and practically turned a somersault as it plunged down...faster even than had Los Angeles.

Flood and flame, wind and quake killed people in the millions and very few were left alive, isolated from each other in several pockets, by vagaries of the catastrophe. These few thousands—a pitiful few—who somehow survived the calamity, were half-crazed by the disaster, shaken out of their senses by the tremendous noise and commotion and wholesale destruction.

They dazedly watched, on scattered pieces of floating wreckage, the incredible havoc and rampage wrought by Nature. Never had they witnessed anything so heart-breaking—so utterly devastating.

In less than 60 minutes, all vestiges of civilization were gone, the great coastal cities of Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, Santa Barbara...all were now legends. Barely any evidence was left visible where millions had walked and lived less than an hour before.

The raging sea piled up higher and higher upon itself following the screeching, howling winds eastward. The fantastic fury of wind and inundation raced on and on, seemingly without let-up.

Not since the days of Atlantis, when it too sank, causing vast tidal waves to encircle the globe, had Man seen anything like this! This giant wall of seawater ranging up and down the west coast swept over the land...smashing punching, churning across the landscape, relentlessly pushing its tentacles to its outermost limits.

When it had finally spent itself somewhere near the Arizona border, there was nothing but the ocean where cities and towns had been. The horrendous rampage was over at last.

The City of the Angels and all other coastal and inland cities lay at the bottom of the Pacific, broken and shattered and covered by unbelievable amounts of mud and sand. The waters were calm and tranquil once again and there was nothing of any shape whatever except the surrounding mountains.

California had died.

A fictional account—product of an overactive imagination? Hardly. Not if you have read the chilling reports from respected scientists both here and abroad as to what could conceivably happen to California.

The Golden State is in an extremely vulnerable and dangerous position—on the one side we have the many faults (42) going up and down the state and crisscrossing the state—and on the other side we have a deep and lengthy undersea flaw, under the Pacific and off the coast, west of the continental shelf.

This underwater flaw is peculiar in that there are two massive chunks of land off the continental shelf coming together and just barely overlapping the other along the edge. There is no danger, provided they remain in their present precarious and delicate position. But when an earthquake from any one of the California fault lines occurs—or when an underground atomic test from the Nevada Testing Grounds shakes them up a bit they will both be displaced and down they go with a real loud “THWUMP”!

Any disturbance of large enough intensity could cause this mass west of the coastline to slip and slide down causing extreme tilting all along the entire West Coast of the state.

An earthquake of large enough magnitude and/or underground atomic tests in Nevada or Alaska could act as a trigger to cause a quite unpleasant reaction. A chain reaction of calamitous events could cause an unpleasant tilt from Ensenada in Baja, California and clear up to Port Arena.

In the deserts of Nevada, the scientists are continually testing atom devices which undoubtedly cause earth tremors. At some time it is inevitable that some particularly "eager beaver" scientist will let go with an atom blast that will shake the undersea fault loose from its present position. And when he does this, he might find his feet getting rather wet, along with 10 million or so in the area of California and southern Nevada at that time.

The dropping of the undersea land mass along the continental shelf will, as an absolute certainty—cause the entire coast of the state to tip and thus widen the fault lines, roughly located in the center of the state.

This, in turn, will start the Pacific and its tremendous pressures bearing down hard and quickly moving inland over the tilted coastline...causing further tipping and inundation until most of the land is immersed by the raging seas. Millions of people, estimated 10 million or more, could perish!

It must be made clear that the American authorities are well aware of the dangers inherent in California. But remember, California is a large and very wealthy area. There are some fantastically rich exploiters of land development and speculators and real estate tycoons. If the United States government should quite reasonably declare that certain areas are in extreme danger and not fit for habitation because of the risk of earthquakes and eventual inundation, then the real estate developers, speculators and financial interests would no doubt strenuously object and set up a howl about the "DOOMSDAY PROPHETS" "FEAR MONGERS", "RELIGIOUS FANATICS" "DEFEATISTS" and the like.

Unfortunately, however, in this instance, even scientists who by nature are skeptics and unimpressed by anything so undignified as "religious fantasies," are the first to agree that Californians are sitting on a virtual time bomb. Although most seismographers and geologists do not predict precisely the kind of catastrophe indicated by the visions (Edgar Cayce, "Doc" Anderson, et al) they do not deny that an earthquake of sufficient proportions could conceivably trigger a landslide involving huge chunks of land into the ocean!

Their primary concern, however, is with the earthquake itself and its unbelievable potential of destruction both to property and to life, due to the critical area of Southern California, which is criss-crossed with faults, and because of the unprecedented density of population living in the area, in particularly vulnerable dwellings, as they describe the standard wood-frame tract home. An earthquake, for example of the same intensity as the one which hit San Francisco in 1906, measuring 8.3 on the Richter scale, would under the present circumstances demolish millions of homes and level multiple-story buildings, causing untold damage to property and huge loss of life. Nor do they overlook the subsequent destruction by fires and explosions, triggered by the quake, or the misery and hardship caused by the disruption of the food and water supply, or the death toll claimed by diseases and epidemics with medical facilities virtually wiped out of commission.

Certain interests are doing all they can to keep the true facts from the public...and all for the Almighty Dollar! For example, many geophysicists have repeatedly warned the government about the dangers in California. But they have been silenced with great effectiveness. Many scientists have stated in no uncertain terms that a really big California earthquake is long overdue. That Californians are virtually sitting on a time bomb, with the fuse already lit!

We can liken the situation now existing in this way: In your imagination visualize a massive time bomb located under the main fault lines of the state. Attached to this gigantic time bomb is a rather long fuse. It is lit. Along the fuse at irregular intervals are attached several smaller bombs. The fuse has already ignited and exploded one of the lesser bombs (Feb. 9th quake) and is now racing towards the other larger bomb—a bit larger than the previous one set off on Feb. 9th. This next “explosion” will cause much greater property damage and loss of life—hundreds in fact. After this second “explosion” there are to be one or two more until the fuse is speeding towards the MONSTER BOMB—THE GREATEST EARTHQUAKE OF ALL TIME! THE GREATEST EARTHQUAKE OF MODERN TIMES!!

“The City That Waits To Die”

The Aetherius Society—a scientific and educational organization with headquarters in Los Angeles and London—in its Newsletter of April-June 1971 has stated:

“California has been warned by scientists that it must stop hiding its head in the sand and prepare to face the bitter truth that it is only 40 seconds away from catastrophe...!

“This is how long scientists say it would take for an earthquake to rip apart the San Andreas Fault line, tearing its way through some of the most densely populated areas of the United States. This quake, the 'big one' Californians secretly dread—could happen at any time. Commenting on the Los Angeles earthquake Feb. 9th, Dr. Dan McKenzie of Cambridge University's Department of Geophysics said: 'We are expecting an earthquake between 10 and 100 times as big in this region. It will be at least as big, if not bigger, than the San Francisco quake of 1906. We know how big the next earthquake will be and where it will be—but not when,' Dr. McKenzie added. 'The longer it takes to happen, the bigger it will be eventually.'

"Scientists all over the world are now voicing their concern over the situation in the Golden State. In a remarkable television documentary screened last December, the British Broadcasting Corp. studied the earthquake problem in California. They called the program, 'The City That Waits to Die—San Francisco.'

"This program is remarkable because it appeared first on British TV—BUT NOT IN AMERICA. It is remarkable that the American public has not been told the truth about this grim threat, and almost unbelievable that Californians continue to remain in ignorance of this everpresent Sword of Damocles. America's top scientists had to come to England to tell the public of their fears!

"The television program began on an uncompromising note: 'On the morning of April 18th, 1906, an earthquake shook San Francisco to the ground. The San Andreas fault, a break in the Earth's crust, had ripped open causing almost total destruction.'

"Another similar earthquake is inevitable. And probably soon.

"But San Francisco is not prepared. It has ignored warnings to protect itself that have come from its own scientists.

"It is a city that waits to die! Waits for the fault line to erupt once more.'

"The BBC team went on to interview many prominent Californian and other American scientists. In the words of one scientist interviewed on the program—Lewis Backeser—'I think we like to hide our heads in the sand. For many years, the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 was not referred to as the San Francisco earthquake—it was referred to as the San Francisco fire!'

"Because, as scientists, we have special knowledge of these things," he added, "We feel that our responsibilities go above our official responsibilities to our employers and our duties as scientists. Our duty as citizens is to communicate with the public and try and explain and enlighten the public on what we think these hazards are.'

"BBC concluded its hard-hitting program: 'Californians do not know the full extent of the danger. More to the point, they are NOT prepared to find out. Said Michigan physicist Dr. Peter Franken:

"We are prepared to spend billions of dollars for a nuclear war that is not inevitable, but can't afford to spend the small amount necessary to minimize this inevitable earthquake disaster!"

"Scientists everywhere have voiced concern but politicians and financial interests continue to keep the information from the public. President Nixon declared the California area a disaster area immediately after the Feb. 9th earthquake. But, Mr. President, it is not enough to declare the State a disaster area. Right away a full investigation on ALL levels should be started to ascertain how the United States can avoid losing a large portion of its population and its resources.

"Such an investigation should consider the words of its own scientists, the warnings of such programs as the BBC one, and the mass of data accumulated over recent years to show that a major—possibly catastrophic—earthquake is inevitable along the San Andreas fault line.

"California, straddled by one of the Earth's great fault lines which goes into the crust for 20 or 30 meters, should take no chances where nuclear tests are concerned. The state should demand that they cease immediately!

U.S. Nuclear Lunacy at Amchitka Island

"The U.S. government has apparently decided to play 'Russian roulette' with the lives of millions of people by exploding its biggest-ever underground nuclear test device at Amchitka Island, Alaska, sometime this year.

"The device will be somewhat larger than the 1969 test at the same site of 1.2 megatons according to the Atomic Energy Commission. But Senator Mike Gravel of Alaska said in Washington that the explosion would be in the five-megaton range—equivalent to 5 million tons of TNT.

"The London 'Daily Telegraph' reported on April 14th: 'Code-named Cannikin,' the test will be conducted...6,000 feet below the surface of Amchitka Island and will release almost five times as much explosive energy as the previous largest American underground test.

"The Canadian Embassy in Washington has made public a note to the Senate Department conveying its Government's 'serious concern.' The note warns that the planned test would take place in a region known to be prone to Earth disturbances.

"A spokesman for Senator Gravel said yesterday that he was apprehensive about several aspects of the test, including the possibility of an earthquake or a tidal wave.

"He has reason to be. Alaska lies on the fault line which extends down the western seaboard of North America, part of which contains the San Andreas fault, which scientists predict is ready to split open at any time. The impact of high-yield explosives in such an area could be fatal to millions of people along the coast and miles inland not to mention the effect of the explosion on radio-activity levels.

"Has not the U.S. government learned from its previous terrible experiences in setting off earthquakes from nuclear tests? The last Alaska test, for instance, triggered off an earthquake in its wake in 1969, just as scientists predicted it would! This test is to be held on the same site. The only difference is that apparently this is to be as large as the biggest underground test yet recorded, by the Russians.

"An investigation should consider most urgently the implications of statements by scientists that the earthquake is long overdue and should have, in fact, taken place several years ago. It should also inquire into the occult predictions of catastrophe in California which, as years go by, seem less and less unlikely when compared with statements and warnings by many respected, materialist scientists. For example, it was fashionable to laugh at prophecies such as those made by clairvoyants like Edgar Cayce, and indeed by the American Indian tribes, who all agreed that at about this time California would be devastated by massive earthquakes which would destroy most of the state. Ignorance is indeed bliss for those speculators who line their pockets by selling unsuspecting families homes which could be ripped apart in less than a minute."

Phoenix to be Port City

Christopher Cyaioni, Scottsdale architect who has specialized in the design of cities, said: "A cataclysm on a major scale will come about in less than five years from now because of underground activity on the whole planet of earth."

He has based his predictions on seismic activity which, he said, is intensifying constantly. (Over 300 "aftershocks" were felt after the Feb. 9th quake which hit Southern California).

Cyaioni, who has made a thorough and intensive study of seismology, the science of charting the movements of earthquakes, says one indicator of increased underground activity is the series of tremblors this year in the mid-west.

Cyaioni stated that, "Phoenix will be the most important city on the west coast, with the possible exception of Seattle and Portland. Salton Sea will be far underwater and the low desert in Arizona will be interconnected tidal basins. Yuma will disappear.

"The reason is that much of California—most of it under an altitude of 4,000 feet—is going to fall into the Pacific Ocean," said Cyaioni.

"This geographical rearrangement will come as the result of an earthquake that may extend from up the mountainous spine of this continent from South America through Tucson and the Superstition Mountains and farther north through the Rockies.

"The earth, he continued, "Is a bony framework of rock filled with alluvial matter. When the alluvial matter (soil, clay, sand, etc.) is shaken loose, the rocky skeleton will snap."

Cyaioni said he made these predictions based on his own studies and those of many seismographers who have been predicting the loss of most of California.

"I don't mean to alarm people," he said, "but we should be aware of what will happen and prepare for it.

"For instance," he went on, "we should plan now to save as much open desert as is possible. When the cataclysm comes, there will be a tremendous movement of people into Arizona.

"There will be a terrific food shortage, possibly starvation for millions, because of the loss of the rich food producing areas in California.

"Because of all this," Cyaioni pointed out, "planning should be done now for the best possible use of land. It is unfortunate that the federal planning money for cities now is going to administrative planners who do not have the vision to use it properly."

There have been numerous inspired visions from the higher dimensions given to certain individuals in widely separated areas, warning the people of California to seek safety and shelter elsewhere. God is not mocked—nor does he lie to his chosen prophets. The following accounts are but a few of many prophecies and "visions" that graphically describe in startling clarity the dangers that scientists also see!

Mei Ling's Third World Prophecy Book includes the story of a dream experienced by a 17-year-old boy, Joe Brandt. It took place over 30 years ago when Joe fell from a horse, suffering severe concussions. He wrote down every detail of the dream which left a vivid impression on his mind. Thirty years later, learning of Mei Ling's interest in prophetic visions, he turned his notes, now mellowed with age, over to her. The vividness of this dream or "vision" is indeed remarkable.

Much of the information in his notes seems more to have been written by an experienced geologist rather than by a 17-year-old boy. For during his semi-conscious moments, following his concussion, he had written with unbelievable accuracy, information concerning the location and characteristics of the various faults. He described rock strata, earth movements and a volume of geological data which even an experienced geologist would undoubtedly require many years of research to produce. Yet here it was from the pen of a mere lad recovering from a head injury.

Upon obtaining possession of these notes, Mei Ling contacted her former geology professor and, after bringing the information in these yellowed-with-age notes to his attention, she asked him for his frank opinion. To her utter amazement, his evaluation of the geological data they contained was definitely complimentary. The notes described movements which geologists only recently discovered existed. He even agreed that it was conceivable that, given the proper push, portions of California could sink into the ocean as Joe's vision indicated!

These notes cover many pages, enough to fill a book. Only the most important highlights of this prophetic vision are described.

The day after his accidental fall, Joe Brandt found himself in a hospital room in Fresno, Calif., with a splitting headache. He was not actually asleep, for he was aware, at least in part, of his surroundings. Gradually,

"technicolor" pictures began appearing before his eyes. He found himself overlooking the city of Los Angeles, but was quite surprised to see that it was very much larger than he knew it to be at that time(1937).

Next his vision took him to Hollywood Blvd. He was shocked to see so many of the boys his age going around with beards, long hair and some of them wearing earrings. For the young girls, extremely short skirts seemed to be the fashion, and instead of walking in a normal manner, they seemed to sort of dance along, as though listening to some way out music.

A strange quietness filled the air. He couldn't quite place his finger on what was wrong. He had a feeling that something was missing. Finally it dawned on him...there were no birds in sight! They had all disappeared. An uneasy stillness pervaded the air. It seemed to sound an alarm—this unearthly silence—that something dreadful was about to happen.

He wondered what year it was. He knew instinctively that it wasn't 1937. He glanced at a newspaper. There was a picture of the President but it certainly wasn't Mr. Roosevelt. He had never seen this man before. He tried to make out the date, but his eyes just wouldn't focus properly. He couldn't be sure. He noticed the time on a big clock over a theater. It was ten to four. That weird silence bothered him. How come these people don't seem to be aware that the birds have all flown away?

A noxious smell hit him, like where they manufacture sulphuric acid. But now it seemed to pervade everywhere carrying with it the smell of death. It was a sunny afternoon. The sky was clear, but that pungent odor was everywhere. He looked at the clock again. It was now five to four.

Then it happened! He felt a funny little shake—just a gentle earthquake. For an instant people's faces showed concern, but then some of them laughed. It was all over. This is what everyone had been waiting for. It was nothing, just plain NOTHING. Most people gave a sigh of relief. Others even seemed to be disappointed. They had been expecting something much bigger—more exciting. All this talk about a big devastating earthquake...well, it was hardly worth mentioning.

Two bearded kids walked by. He overheard one of them say that he didn't think it was safe here; maybe they should go back East.

The sidewalks were trembling slightly now, not that you could actually see them moving. But this time everybody looked scared. One young woman kept repeating: "IT'S THE EARTHQUAKE, THE EARTHQUAKE!!"

Then it came—like the scream of a siren! It seemed as though some monster was underneath the sidewalks pushing them up. Most of the cars kept right on going as though nothing was happening. A gentle shaking started again...like a baby being rocked in its cradle. Suddenly the Boulevard splits right down the middle, as though a giant shovel was breaking it into pieces.

Then BEDLAM! Women and children are screaming; men shouting; the earth groaning. Sidewalks are lifting people up and knocking others down. Water comes oozing up through the cracks. It is just awful! He thinks his ear drums will burst. Bricks and chunks from crumbling walls come flying through the air. Many people are badly hurt. Old and young alike are screaming for help. Nobody can help.

Joe suddenly found himself lifted above the city. As he looked down he could see it tilting—like one would tilt a picnic table—towards the ocean. Many of the larger buildings were still intact. It was encouraging to see how stubbornly they stood. When the people saw that they were holding firm, they scrambled to get inside. They seemed to offer greater safety.

But their struggle to survive was short-lived. The water kept oozing up. One by one these proud buildings succumbed...they died, just like a man dies. They moaned and groaned and then crumbled to the ground, like an old man gasping for his last breath.

They didn't want to die. They roared above the screams of the people as they fell. But they died, and with them those who had vainly sought their shelter.

Next the lad was transported to the top of Big Bear Mountain near San Bernardino. From this vantage point he could see everything in great detail, even to the expressions on people's faces. He felt the earth tremble gently again for about twelve seconds. This caused Los Angeles and the surrounding areas to tilt even to a greater degree towards the ocean. The wide roads (freeways) were loaded with cars lined up bumper to bumper. They were all sliding backwards towards the sea. Now he could see the Pacific moving inland. Huge waves pushed their way across the land. The time was four twenty-nine. Only half an hour had passed!

His vision broadened to the point where he could see many parts of the world, as though viewing a gigantic globe. He saw the Grand Canyon. Its sides were being pushed together. Boulder Dam gave way, flooding the land below it. A volcano was acting up in Baja California.

Joe wondered how the people back East were being kept informed about what was happening on the west coast, for the last stations had gone off the air when the Boulder Dam gave way. Then he saw ham radio operators, many of them in out-of-the-way places. One fellow in particular kept sending out the alarm: "California is going into the sea. We are sinking. Go to the mountains. California is sinking." Joe could see him clearly. Even though he was several miles in from the shore, the waters were already flooding him out. He was trying to get up on the table in order to continue sounding the alarm: "California is sinking into the sea. We are drowning." He continued this message until there was silence.

Joe Brandt regained full consciousness. He decided it was all just a bad dream. Even if it wasn't, nobody would believe him anyhow. It was impossible. It was really silly to think that fellos of that future date would go around with beards and wearing those funny earrings or that girls would actually use such short skirts, coming way above the knees. It was just too much to believe. But still he kept hearing that ham operator's voice ringing in his ears: "California is going into the sea. We are sinking. California is drowning."

Dr. E.R. Lindsey's Prophecy

Dr. E.R. Lindsey, even as a child, was blessed with clairvoyant vision. At the age of 12, a vision, in which he saw a boy in danger of drowning, was responsible for saving a child's life.

Dr. Lindsey later married and started a family. He, together with his family, went to Hawaii as missionaries. On Nov. 15, 1941, while conducting a prayer meeting, a breeze filled the room even though the windows and doors were closed and the lights grew dim until they went out. But a brilliant light bathed the person of Dr. Lindsey.

Within moments, everything was back to normal. Dr. Lindsey revealed to the group that he had been warned in vision to leave for the U.S. immediately on the very next ship, for in the first week of December, Japan would launch a surprise attack on Pearl Harbor.

He immediately contacted the military authorities at Pearl Harbor but their opinion was that there was not a chance that Japan would attack, and that surely he must have had a bad dream.

Dr. Lindsey returned with his family to the U.S. and true to the timely warning, the surprise attack came right on schedule.

In September of 1958, Dr. Lindsey was ministering in Sacramento, Calif. He had been fasting and praying for several days. He suddenly felt a surge of power flow through his body. His mind became clear as crystal and his vision expanded until he beheld the planet spinning in space. Events of the future unfolded before him.

That evening in the Tabernacle Temple in Sacramento, Dr. Lindsey received the clearest warning of all that will come exactly one year before the greatest disaster of modern times hits the earth. This prophetic warning will come in the form of three signs, or events.

These three events will occur in different parts of the world and at the same time.

- Australia will experience its greatest earthquake ever.

- A volcano will erupt in the Mediterranean Sea, resulting in a huge tidal wave.

- A minor earthquake will occur in California, causing only negligible damage, but it will crack walls in both the city halls of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Exactly one year following the simultaneous occurrence of these three events, a great convulsion will shake the whole earth.

In California, the San Andreas fault will split wide open and the land west of it will sink into the ocean. This will create tidal waves 150 feet high which will encircle the world, inundating most capital coastal cities of the earth. Huge cracks will appear in the ground. Many volcanoes will erupt. The whole earth will shake.

Neal Frisby—Prophet Extraordinary

Neal Frisby began his prophetic ministry in 1960, after a six-week fast. During this extended period without food, he was given a series of visions in which he saw many startling things

soon to befall our nation

He indicates that, among the other things which were shown him, the morals of our people would become as perverse as in the days of Sodom and Gomorrah. He prophesied at that time...11 years ago...that topless night clubs would become popular and sexual nudity would be on the increase, with teenage nude beach parties leading to shameful orgies. California would lead the nation in the corruption of homosexuality, wife-swapping and open prostitution and pornography. Because of this, California will also lead the nation in so-called "natural" catastrophies, causing exceedingly great damage to property and loss of life. Recent years have shown these prophecies to be increasingly accurate.

According to Neal Frisby, several minor and major quakes in the state are "preparing the groundwork" for the climax. They are loosening the earth and causing water to seep further inland under the surface. An unprecedented earthquake will cause the portion west of the San Andreas fault to break away from the mainland and start sliding downhill into the ocean. California's present coastline will be completely changed.

After 1972, but very definitely before 1976, San Francisco, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles and much of the California coastline will become "a feeding ground for sharks," gone forever beneath the sea. Millions will go to a watery grave because of their unbelief, apathy and procrastination.

Neal Frisby also indicates that according to what he was shown in visions, those who scoff and ridicule these warnings will themselves be among those who will be the victims of the raging seas.

Three Warning Quakes

The following vision was experienced by Rev. C.F. Harrell of Phoenix, Arizona.

"Another vision came before me. I was standing at the edge of a sheer cliff, the coastline of California. Looking down a great distance I could see those who were alive on the surface of the angry waters and on wreckage of various kinds. All airports, harbors and coast defenses of all kinds ceased to exist. I asked the Lord, 'But how can this be?' In a vision the range of mountains nearest Los Angeles dissolved before my eyes and I was taken in the spirit above the U.S., looking down upon it as on a map. I saw the great earthquake which will cause a break-off and the coastline changed right before my eyes. All the coastal cities sank out of sight forever. I saw a tremendous tidal wave that followed, which affected the Gulf of Mexico and the mouth of every river of the U.S. as well as the East Coast, with tidal waves which caused flooding and loss even in the inland areas, as the rivers overflowed the land.

"In a vision I also saw San Bernardino as the rushing waters covered that city. Again I asked, 'Lord, how can such a great part of the earth drop into nothing?' He answered, 'By three severe earthquakes preceding this disaster which will also be an earthquake.'

"There will be other minor quakes, not only in California, but all over the world. The first of these three quakes will be the hardest that has ever been experienced. It will affect the coast from Mexico to Port Arena, 150 miles north of San Francisco. The streets of the cities and freeways will suffer great damage. It will affect the livelihood of many. About the time the worst of the damage is repaired, the second of the three quakes will come, more severe than the first, causing much damage and loss of life. After the greatest damage of the second quake is cleared, the third quake will strike. Again the damage and losses will be considerable and extensive and almost irreparable. Soon after these three warning quakes, we will see what has been predicted for many years: 'THE GREATEST EARTHQUAKE OF ALL! THE GREATEST EARTHQUAKE OF MODERN TIMES!!'

"This fourth earthquake—the biggest one—will cause certain areas to sink under water and will take around ten million lives! The Lord showed me the superstructure of the State of California. For some time it has been known scientifically that a good portion of the coast of California is just a shell that projects out over the water like a shelf. I saw a submarine going back under this shelf to the base of the San Bernardino Mountains. It is known that one can go out from the shoreline a short distance on the California coast and then one just drops off. . .there seemingly to be no bottom. I believe it is from five to seven miles down. The largest part of California is washed out underneath. There are only upright [•] supports holding the coastline of California."

(Scientists inform us that the coastline of California is moving northwest at the rate of two inches a year. This places a great strain upon the San Andreas fault which extends from lower California to Palm Springs, near San Bernardino, then over to Palmdale and extending up to the San Francisco Bay area to Point Arena. All this land west of the fault is moving every year. The stanchions cannot move, as they are a part of the ocean bed, making it necessary for them to incline or tip.)

"One day these supports will tip enough that they cannot bear the weight of the land. This will be at the time of the GREAT EARTHQUAKE! The west side of the San Andreas Fault will break off and slide into the sea.

"In the vision I was on a mountain overlooking the Los Angeles area. I felt the earth shaking as in a terrific earthquake. I saw a great high spray of water that whipped up into the air. The roar was beyond description; it was deafening. The coastline slipped into the water as though it were tipped down; the immense wave moved inland very rapidly like a huge, gigantic tidal wave! The tidal wave will be felt clear to the Hawaiian Islands.

"This earthquake will be the most severe destruction that has come upon this earth since the time of Noah's flood. This is the reason God is revealing what will take place; the people must be warned just as in the days of Noah! There will be ten million people whose lives will be lost in these disasters, and great suffering for those who remain alive. After the disaster, there will be famine and shortage of water in the areas along what is left of the coast all the way to Canada.

"The earthquake will be heavily felt to Vancouver, Canada. The San Andreas Fault stretches from Point Arena into the offshore waters. It then follows the coast to Alaska and from there across the Aleutians and to the shores of Asia. British Columbia and especially Vancouver are going to be leveled by this earthquake. All cities along the path of the San Andreas fault, even in the offshore waters will feel the destruction of the great earthquake. There will be new diseases; new epidemics will break out which science knows nothing about. Climates will change.

"God is giving dreams and visions to His people of forthcoming events. Predictions are coming, some in part and some in greater detail. When many come from MANY sources and they are all similar...THEN IT IS TIME TO WAKE UP!"

Cataclysm Foreseen for California

The destruction of the recent Feb. 9th quake in California—which killed 64 and caused damage close to a half-billion—will be dwarfed by the major quake predicted by Rev. Donald Abernathy, a fundamentalist minister, formerly of Bell Gardens.

"I was shown a clear vision," said Rev. Abernathy. "I rose high above the death and destruction and could see it was widespread all along the entire coast." Mr. Abernathy recalled that his vision took place while he was praying in his Bell Gardens home at 3:30 a.m. in June, 1968:

"It came to me in a picture form—like a colored moving picture before my eyes," he said. "I heard a great rumbling sound...I saw the ground shaking...saw the freeways shaking and buckling, especially the bypasses, the overpasses, the bridges—with concrete columns falling down all over.

"I saw buildings in the downtown areas crumble...large buildings just crumble. And I saw those thousands of people rushing out of the buildings, screaming in terror while many passed out or had heart attacks. The freeways were jammed but I could see the roads sunk down.

'I Saw Fire'

"I saw fire in this vision, broken gas pipes and mains causing it and I saw many explosions, fires just blazing out of control at different places.

"I saw mountains shake apart and crumble into the ocean...people driving off into the water...buildings toppling and fire shooting along the San Andreas fault line. I heard the roar of the ocean coming in and I saw Los Angeles sink.

"I saw a large red sun just as it was sinking out of sight. After seeing the destruction part, I was told by the Lord that this was going to happen...that I should warn the people and flee. God spoke to me and said this disaster will be 'Soon, my son...soon.'

"As I came out of the vision I heard myself saying; 'This is it! This it it! and the Lord spoke to me again and said, 'Yet a little season.'

"This year, 1971, is going to be a disastrous year for earthquakes. But I can't say that the big quake of my vision will occur this year. I'm not sure exactly when it will happen, but it will come! I believe millions of people will be killed when it does come.

"Los Angeles has exalted itself as the City of Angels," he added, "and it's going to be brought down to its grave. We believe that this is more or less a repeat of what happened in the time of Christ to Capernaum.

"Christ prophesied that Capernaum had exalted itself onto the heavens and it would be brought down to hell...today most of it is under the Sea of Galilee."

"We believe this quake will start from Mexico and go on up all the way to Canada. And we believe that this quake will stretch 1500 miles and that water will rush inland for some 300 miles, making Arizona the new west coast."

(Rev. Abernathy, with over 300 persons of the congregation, subsequently moved to Atlanta, Georgia.)

Mei Ling relates the following story given to her by an eyewitness account.

At the time of the breaking of the Baldwin Hills Dam in Los Angeles in 1963, a group of geologists, desiring to test various theories, agreed to feed all pertinent data into a UNIVAC. This is a gigantic computer which is able to sift through tons of information in a matter of seconds. It is an intricate piece of machinery, but it is not an oracle or living prophet. It merely works from data supplied to it.

The UNIVAC's answer was of a much broader scope than these scientists had anticipated. Whereas they expected an answer to the Baldwin Hills Dam mystery, they received a far more comprehensive result.

It stated that the present stresses of the San Andreas fault will trigger the greatest earthquake California has ever experienced! The southern portion could slide into the sea!

As a direct result of this UNIVAC prediction, it is reported that several geologists made plans to move away from Southern California.

R.L. Hudson, a Cal Tech professor, stated that over 17 million people in Southern California are potential earthquake victims. The Los Angeles Free Press of June 7, 1968, quotes Peter Franken, Professor of Physics at the University of Michigan, as stating that the strain level along the San Andreas Fault now exceeds that of the San Francisco earthquake of 1906. The situation in Los Angeles is even worse. Withdrawals of large amounts of oil have resulted in dangerous earth faulting.

On March 2, 1968, Dr. C.F. Richter claimed that if an earthquake of great magnitude would occur now, devastation would be astronomical!

Most cities and towns in California are built on soil deposited by water and on beach sand. This is the most unstable type of terrain.

A Sheer Cliff

Danny Henry, formerly of Fontana, California reported a vision experienced in 1957 to P.J. Boyd at a Businessmen's Breakfast in Los Angeles on May 25, 1962.

"At the time of the vision, I was at home in Fontana. I was in bed, thinking of the recent revelations that had been given to members of the church that met at the Chapel in Van Nuys which I was attending.

"As the vision unfolded, I was lifted up to the top of Mt. San Gorganio, that lies just north of Banning, California. I could see Mt. San Jacinto to the southeast.

"Looking westward the whole valley was spread out before me; the sun was setting. I could see the Pacific Ocean in the distance. I wondered why the Lord had set me there; I could feel His presence. It was then impressed on me that this was a time of momentous events.

"Then I saw the whole country trembling violently. From the valley floor rose a tremendous cloud of dust that rose from where the earth had been in the valley. I never saw that valley floor again! The whole country from Cajon Pass to San Bernardino dissolved right past me. . .completely disappeared along the line where the cleavage of the earth took place in front of where I was standing and extending northwest past Cajon Pass.

"I saw some rocks falling from this newly created sheer cliff that dropped off into the great moving cloud of dust below. Then my attention was drawn towards the sea. It was like a huge silver wave quickly coming toward me, filling in the area occupied by the dust area, and covering all the land that had dropped off below what was now the dust cloud. Then the vision ended, and I was in bed again, as I had been when the vision had started.

Dan Carlson's Prophetic Dream

"On the night of April 24, 1969, I experienced a most vivid prophetic dream concerning the total destruction of Los Angeles and the surrounding communities. At this time we lived 25 miles south in Garden Grove. (We have since moved to Arizona). In this nocturnal vision I was with the members of my family; Dolores, my wife; Danny and Becky, my two children; and Mariana, my mother-in-law. We were standing on a high plateau overlooking the City. At first we only knew the general direction in which it lay, being too far away to actually see it.

"Our purpose for being there, according to the dream, was to witness the fulfillment of what had been prophesied for many years. I had informed my family that this was the day in which these predictions concerning the catastrophic destruction of the west coast were destined to happen.

"My wife's mother especially doubted it, as she had ever since these rumors and visions had started circulating. Since we had been there most of the day and it was now late in the afternoon, she had suggested that we might as well leave, 'Nothing was going to happen, anyway.' However, I insisted we stay another hour, for surely this was the day God had revealed. I was certain of it. Dolores was saying that she knew all along that I had been mistaken, when suddenly I interrupted.

"Look over there!" I pointed energetically, directing their attention to a huge cloud of dust rising in the west. 'It's started! I shouted. At this point Los Angeles came into clear focus. Our vantage point had shifted so that we appeared to be closer to the City. Its tall buildings and landmarks were easily discernible. In fact, I was amazed to see how smog-free the atmosphere was this day.

"A huge crack opened up right through the heart of the City and the sections on either side of the crack tilted sharply; first one way and then another. The force of the earth movement was so violent and the angle of tilt so steep, that the tallest buildings, first on the left and then on the right, were literally thrust to the ground with angry violence. I was amazed at the suddenness of their collapse! I suppose that I had expected them to topple over gradually like a falling tree, but no; they came crashing down as though they had been kicked over by a giant boot.

"The entire area caved in, sinking and sliding quickly into the open split. Within a few minutes the once proud City was in a sea of churning water. No sign of it remained...not a building, tower, road or bridge. Where but a few moments ago stood the proud and famous City of the Angels—now it lay on the bottom of the ocean."

Even this article itself is a partial sign of the coming disaster. For it has been stated that before this takes place, rumors of such an earthquake and disaster will be widely known to many people.

We fervently hope that this statewide cataclysm on such a colossal scale may somehow be averted...but the scientific and occult evidence strongly indicate otherwise. It is a matter of the gravest importance and concern for every person now living in the Golden State to heed these timely warnings while there is "Yet a little season." And in the words of Rev.

HEALING WHEN THE ANSWER IS "NO"

by Josephine Wilson

It is so very important that we understand that God has power to heal. However, on this earth we are all He has to use and His healing must have a channel. As when Jesus walked this earth, God's power to heal was available but it wasn't used until Jesus or some believing person, such as His disciples, made themselves the channel. So it is now—we do not do the healing—we are the conduit for that healing. In this day of electricity we all know how important that conduit is.

There are many approaches to the manner of healing. The Episcopalians have been most effective with "Laying on of Hands" and were among the first to revive this custom. This gives a direct contact for the power of God to use this channel. Joel Goldsmith's method is more remote. The person in need is held up in prayer to God and held there until he feels the healing is accomplished. In John Largo's book, "The Ministry of Healing", he says there is an energy which leaves the hands of the healer at the time of healing. They have been able to show this on negatives, such as dental technicians use, which indicates it has a kind of X-ray quality.

Most of the work I have done has been of the nature of prayer releasing the force through my hands so that I can actually feel this force. Sometimes—perhaps I should say most of the time—this force has been directed to the affected area and has been very effective. I have also learned what Goldsmith meant, and at times have just held this person up to God. As I work more with this I expect to find that different situations require different treatment.

According to Agnes Sanford you must pray first that you be guided. Then if you feel you are to pray for healing, pray with complete faith that this will take place. You must have faith or you may as well not pray—if you are the one who is acting as the channel. There can be no block in a conduit if it is to be effective.

This is what happened to me when we learned that my husband had cancer of lungs and liver. I know perfectly well that God can heal cancer just as easily as anything else, and has many times. Previously he had had surgery for cancer in another place and many of us who prayed for him felt our prayers were well answered when he recovered, just as Hezekiah prayed for healing and received 15 years of added life. However, my husband was allowed just two years. When I tried to pray for his healing this time the answer was as clear to me as though it had been spoken. It was "You must not do this."

There comes a time, if you are in this work, when this will happen, just as it does with a doctor when sometimes all his skill cannot save his own. Having received a "No", I couldn't possibly pray for healing, but I could and constantly did pray for his spiritual welfare and that he be allowed to go with a minimum of pain. He had been told it would be about six months. The first four months he was able to go about his business, with increasing discomfort, of course, but without great pain and no medication was necessary.

He was lying on the davenport one night, having difficulty breathing. His right side was so swollen I could feel it below his rib cage. I knelt beside him and felt such a rush of love of God that as I put my hand on the swollen place, not asking for healing, but putting the whole miserable situation in God's hands for whatever was His will, the swelling went down and in that spot never came back again. His breathing no longer bothered him and it did not develop in that way again. We were actually beginning to believe a healing had taken place, but by the end of 10 days we realized this could not be. However he was comfortable for a long time. Many months later I asked the doctor what had happened when the swelling went down and he said that the lobe had just collapsed. At the end he had to have hypodermics for only two weeks and they were able to keep him reasonably comfortable.

And so we could accept his death as God's will—we do not know why but we do not need to. We can and are expected to accept it.

Another example of a block in praying for healing was a small girl with a dread disease. I tried to pray for her and could not. I could pray for her parents. One day when she was in the hospital I went with her mother to see her. The little girl wanted to show me the beautiful chapel. As we stood there I then knew I could pray for her and I did. The child got better and the doctors had no explanation for it. They said it was nothing they did.

During the few years given to the child, her mother grew a great deal in spiritual understanding and acceptance. I was never able to pray for healing for the child again. To me the answer was—she had lived her life and had to go home. God perhaps saw that by giving her a few years her parents were able to make such strides spiritually and so he left her a little longer.

I think He often does that. Sometimes it is many years and even to old age. We cannot decide these things. Personally I would not want anyone to pray for me if God weren't going to sort the prayers! No human being has the power to know what is right and surely none of us would want anything that was not God's will. We must believe if we pray for healing that through God all things are possible and we may place our loved ones in His care with complete assurance that they will truly be "all right".

This is a picture of Space as it is today, and will be tomorrow, in the opinion of a leading Space scientist and one of America's top Space artists. We are going out into the realm of the saucers, to take our place in that strange community of unknown peoples. We should have some facts at our disposal so that we will know what it will be like "out there". This book is one you will find tremendously exciting, scientifically plausible, emotionally staggering, inspiring yet frightening.

BEYOND TOMORROW has 168 pages, 53 full color plates, 47 black and white illustrations, 11 charts, 11 1/4" x 8 3/4", simulated leather binding, gold stamped.

BODY OF UFO EXPERT FOUND UNDER BRIDGE

The body of Dr. James E. McDonald, controversial University of Arizona scientist, was found Monday under a highway bridge on the desert near here.

He reportedly had been recuperating at his home from a self-inflicted gunshot wound which blinded him, when he wandered into the desert and died.

McDonald was senior physicist at the University of Arizona's Institute of Atmospheric Physics.

He had testified before government committees that flying saucers were causing power blackouts in this country and that supersonic transport planes could cause skin cancer.

The scientist once accused the Central Intelligence Agency of ordering the Air Force to debunk stories on unidentified flying objects.

He said there was reason to believe that some UFOs were carrying beings from outer space on reconnaissance missions over the earth.

HYPNOTIST CURES LIBERACE

Weekend Magazine, published in London, reported that Liberace was concerned because "every time he played a particular piece...he compulsively struck a wrong note."

The magazine said a hypnotist took the pianist back to his childhood and traced the problem to a strict music teacher who had once criticized Liberace for the way he played that particular piece.

"This so worried him that he stumbled over the passage again and again," the magazine noted.

"Under hypnosis, he played it perfectly and the spell was broken."

DREAMS PREDICT FUTURE

Mrs. Bridgland, a 47-year-old housewife from Barrow-in-Furness, England, dreamed she was standing on a crowded railway platform with her husband when a man threw himself under a train and was killed.

In her dream, she turned to her husband and said: "It was for the best because he was a wanted man. He was a sex murderer."

"I could see a man standing on the opposite platform. He had on a brown jacket, gray flannel trousers and a green turtle-neck sweater."

On September 16-14 days after Mrs. Bridgland's dream—newspapers all over the British Isles reported the sex slaying in Hertfordshire of a 20-year-old girl named Nicola Brazier.

Mrs. Gwen Bridgland

Then, 3 days later—a man who fitted Mrs. Bridgland's description died under the wheels of a train. The body was found in a tunnel a few yards from a railway platform in Hertfordshire, a county 300 miles from Mrs. Bridgland's home.

Her first dream that came true, Mrs. Bridgland said, was about a neighbor's 12-year-old daughter who was due home from a hospital.

"I told my mother that the girl would not come home—that she would be going to Jesus," Mrs. Bridgland said. "The girl died."

"I have many dreams and a lot of them come true. I don't know why this is, or what precipitates dreams—THEY JUST COME TO ME' The scenes that take place are always very real."

In 1963, Mrs. Bridgland said, she had a dream in which a world-famous person was killed.

"I don't know who it was," she said. "All I saw were crowds of people cheering and a car. Suddenly, the man fell. Three days after I had the dream, John F. Kennedy was assassinated."

STONE AGE TRIBE FOUND IN PHILIPPINES

Anthropologists have found a lost tribe in the wilds of the southern Philippines still living in the Stone Age after being separated from the outside world for possibly five centuries.

Called the Tasaday Manube, the tribe has no knowledge of rice, corn, or other cultivated crops, salt, sugar, or tobacco. The tribesmen have never seen the sea.

They exist by trapping animals and foraging for wild vegetables. Their only tools are stones and bamboo. There may be only 100 of them.

Anthropologist Dr. Robert B. Fox, chief anthropologist of the National Museum said the lost tribesmen look healthy but are timid. He offered sugar to one tribesman, who feared it was poisonous.

The tribe was found in the forested mountains of the southern island of Mindanao. The Presidential Arm plans an extensive study of the Tasadays and has asked the government to declare the rain forest in which they live a national reserve to keep away loggers and ranchers.

ACTRESS JUNE LOCKHART USED ESP SINCE AGE 6

"My first memory of ESP was a dream I had many nights in a row as a child.

"It was a vivid dream. The house across the street was burning, and from my window I watched the flames and the fire engines.

"At breakfast each morning I told my grandparents about the dream.

"Then one Sunday morning I woke up from my dream and found it was real—the neighbor's house was actually on fire."

June Lockhart

June Lockhart discovered that she had extrasensory perception when she was 6 years old. "Now," she says, "With ESP I can find important lost papers and wallets, even parking places for my car on crowded streets. I just see these things in my mind."

DO YOU DREAM IN COLOR?

Dr. Douglas Frayn, of the Clark Institute of Psychiatry, said the color dreamer is not afraid of his emotions and conflicts and can usually recall events in his life from age 3. And, as an adult, he has dreams filled with emotion, sound and movement. But the black-and-white dreamer seldom can remember anything that happened to him before the age of 5, said Dr. Frayn, and his dreams are empty of sound.

Tests on artists and other talented persons revealed they dreamed in color and recalled their dreams more often, which leads him to wonder if there is a link between dreams in color and creativity.

PRONOUNCED DEAD 15 TIMES

Richard Willis, 72, has been pronounced dead 15 times so far by medical authorities in Liverpool, England.

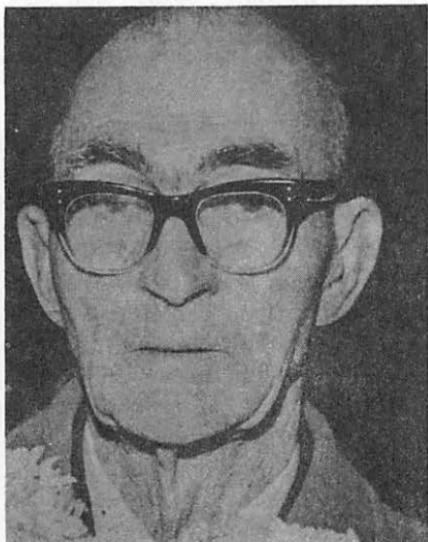

Willis suffers from one of the world's rarest and most puzzling diseases—narcolepsy. He can't control his sleep and goes into slumber anywhere and at any time.

"I've fallen asleep in theaters and buses, on jobs and even right in the middle of a busy intersection," claims Willis. "One moment I'm awake and then without warning I pass out.

"When it happens I seem to be dead, even to doctors. My system slows down so much they can't feel a pulse.

Willis contracted his rare, strange disease in a concentration camp in the First World War.

the EGO And i

BY KENNETH W. WILLOUGHBY

Here is how you can turn that "spoiled brat" of an ego into a mighty "workhorse".

When the psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud stumbled onto something which he later called the Ego, he stumbled onto something which has the ability to remake all religion into something more appealing to every person. The EGO is that thing in you which you mean when you say "I". In a child this ego is a spoiled "brat" which must be trained, disciplined, and otherwise controlled to keep it from "scattering" its energies in life. This scattering has nothing to do with doing good deeds but rather the ideas, dramas, intrigues, and other mechanisms that the ego uses to get its own way. These are the things that cause old age and make the ego bored with life. Since the ego controls the body, the body tries to supply energy for these "ego dramas" in an effort to put action into these thoughts.

KENNETH WILLOUGHBY

Kenneth Willoughby, Physicist, is now senior Data Processor at Lockheed Corporation. In his own words he introduces himself:

"At 12 years of age I was struck by a mysterious illness that left me completely paralyzed from head to toe. In the last 24 years I have learned to talk again like a baby learning for the first time. This goes for walking and all other body functions as well. All the relearning was done without missing any schooling.

One parent was a Roman Catholic and the other a Christian Scientist. I was raised in the Christian Science Church and later the Methodist Church in the teen ages. My parents taught me to find my own answers in books for question on beliefs. My beliefs were pretty orthodox until I began having "mystical" and ESP experiences in my early 20's. Then I looked at any literature that might provide a clue to help understand what I had experienced. I met my wife at this stage. We used hypnosis which evolved into a team trance when the ELOHIM began to teach us. We have 100's of hours of taped trances of these teachings. Some of their concepts are so new they still stump us. The articles are my attempt to unravel meaning out of these concepts."

When these ego ideas fight each other, as when a person is afraid of himself, this causes the body to keep feeding in new energy to a situation where energy is perpetually fighting itself. This is something like short circuiting an electric power line. Another instance is when you believe that there is a devil just as negative or evil as God is good. This tells the ego that there are two Gods which must use all of his creative energy. Because the ego will use energy for good or evil as you direct or both at once in this case. In both cases the energy is basically fighting itself to a standstill. This energy fighting itself is what causes you diseases. At first the cause is mental or psychosomatic but after years in which the ego tries to defend and protect itself the cause becomes physical, as in the case of ulcers. There are many diseases like this. My wife has found that this was the basis of her heart problem and since then she had slowly been healing herself by erasing inner conflicts as well as negative thinking. That is how the ego depletes its original energy during life.

Since the ego is continually in motion or the body "dies", we next consider the process which the ego may use to "grow" itself up. As you can see, this has something to do with the maturity of a person but we found that it goes beyond this. The ego uses self-defense mechanisms to produce illusion, hallucination, and etc. to conceal "naked" reality from the conscious reason of the brain. The ego must realize what it is doing with illusion-type techniques to conceal reality for any reason. When the ego does this it starts to "grow". To survive death the ego must realize its substance, its ability to manipulate itself, and its talents which can exist without a body to exercise them.

Religion makes man exercise some of these ego-talents but usually not in a manner such that the man knows what he is doing. In ancient times religion used its ritual and dogma to rule and govern countries. With time, religion has been forced to relinquish some of its power to political bodies but has retained the form that it used to have. One of these is the tithe. In the old times the tithe was the only means that the country had to support itself. So the tithe was really a tax on the citizens of that country. But many churches still use it as a form that is not serving its original purpose. The prayer is another one of these; originally it was a means of getting the beginner to talk with himself. Because the ego or your "I" is your personal piece of God (God spark if you will). If you can't talk to it, how can you expect to talk to God?

We found that mysticism shows all these ego talents and the proper use of them to obtain the desired goals. Christian Mysticism (Jacob Boehme, Spinoza, etc.) is capable of doing this but the churches are continually cutting out the parts they dislike at the moment and are castrating it in the bargain. Mysticism (Sufi, AMORC, Theosophy, etc.) allows methods whereby the person can communicate directly to God (ego talk?). The churches interject concepts of sin. This was the technique that they used in ancient times to rule countries. Some of our communist friends(?) say that their rule by fear and terror is no different than the rule of fear by the church. They may have a point when you think of the Inquisition of the Middle Ages.. Many of the younger generation realize that this is just a means of ruling their minds by regulating the things that ease their fears. They are feebly rebelling at this in what I think is a very ineffective way. They are not sure what they are rebelling against or what is the most effective means to get the job done. The real threat against churches is not in the content of their doctrine, but the technique by which they make a person's ego tie itself in knots whenever it attempts to answer anything for itself.

For the churches in their problem, I think Christian Mysticism is the only answer. This is the answer that I think will be forced on the churches in the future. In all my studies it is the only thing that will enable the "hellfire and damnation" thinker and the pure Christian Scientist to exist under the same roof. Otherwise the churches are faced with such a splintering as to make the Reformation of the 1500's look like a tea party. Many biblical stories begin to take on a deeper meaning when using them as analogies to dramas that the ego plays when protecting itself. But yet the fundamentalist will take these stories literally and tie his own ego in knots trying to apply them in his life. The hippie is doing much the same thing by shattering his ego with drugs and becoming entrapped by its new imagery that it has created to protect itself from the "cruel world".

As a Christian Scientist my parents taught me that God was mind. I then decided to make the human mind, and all its derived activities, my life hobby. By doing this I soon found that the human mind is like a mirror to God's creation. I soon found that my ego was so self-conscious that it wanted to hide every time I wanted to examine its qualities. Yet it turned out to be the hardest working thing that I have ever run across. It was the most sincere (in its way), loving, tender, protective thing. At first it showed me its "spoiled brat" quality that, in my ignorance, it used to protect me from realities that it thought would hurt my feelings. Then, when my ego realized that I wasn't trying to destroy him as some oriental religions and churches wish to do, he began to show his little tricks. He showed me telepathic tricks and others that could better help me protect myself rather than tie him in knots.

As I studied my ego, he became less of a spoiled brat and more of a partner who had powers to supplement my logical reasoning. He began to explain my dreams and other various feelings in ways that gave more and more meaning to life. For all this I learned to thank and praise him as well as respect him. As my ego changed from a spoiled brat he began to show me the inner workings of God in such a way that I began to understand nature. My ego no longer wanted to hog off with the whole show but work with God in the GRAND DESIGN. My ego now realizes that he is my BANK of experience with many assets i.e. mystical talents.

My ego, in exploring nature, began to understand death not as an end but as a shedding of encumbrances that have served their purpose. In exploring the quality of the hereafter my ego began to realize that he must use as well as develop abilities which are used in the hereafter while still alive. These abilities are similar to the phenomena which we call ESP now but are more integrated into our personal lives in the hereafter. My ego began to see that the body is his robot and he is able to exist apart from it. My ego has now become an impatient workhorse eager for a new challenge or a problem to sink his "teeth" into. For some time he has been hinting that there is called "conscious evolution" waiting for man when he digested all the lessons that he is capable of in this life.

Question: "Briefly, would appreciate your diagnosis (and remedying?) of major negative, psychically-created physical conditions."

Answer: When a condition exists, it is not uncommon for those of knowledge of such to explain away any and all conditions as being caused psychically—while this, of course, is probable in many forms, the condition can be remedied through proper living. In many cases others respond to forms of treatment—others must be removed and cleared from the world of spirit. With this case we find a condition which is multiplied by the mind of the holder—through his own efforts to cleanse his body by efforts which he believes are the answer through domination of the body by self—through strong positive incantations—These are not the answer. These are causing spirits to be dominated—which is not the proper attitude—an attitude of benign peace needs to exist—and through this condition the psychic forces can reach the physical. The Brothers could set an absent healing time to correspond with this period of peace. Perhaps a change could be brought.

Question: Read your very interesting article in "Search" magazine. Since you were kind enough to extend an invitation to questions, I wish to accept the offer. My first question is, Are these spirits of the first or second resurrection? (According to "Oahspe" can be asked of them by finding out their function or job at the present time) 2. Do you cover yourself in the light shield before communication? 3. Can you explain this "set" time and procedure your forces use, to train other forces to help one communicate?

I am interested in your work of enlightenment and look forward to hearing from you.

Answer: I do not answer questions—and yours seemed to be aimed at me. I answer questions asked of spirit, so I'll get them to answer your questions. Vern Overlee

1. We are people like yourself who have left the body. We function now in our life working through the brother in helping those of your world in their efforts to seek truths. We work together as a group. Each have different duties and interests. We seek ever to be helpful to those of your world and to those of our world who seek to reach their goals.

2. We only return to work through the Brother when he has said the prayer which we have given to him, which in a sense, calls us together. When the work is completed and the gathering is to break up, again a prayer is said which closes off the Brother and those who sit with him whether present or at a distance.

3. When the Brother sits for development of those who sit at the same time, wherever they may be—they, as well as the Brother, begin with a prescribed prayer at that time. We are then given the permission to contact and affect those who sit as well as their friends and companions in spirit. We experiment with the sitters to determine which type of development they are able to be used for. Then we prepare their guides and controls for this type of opening. One of our friends, no spirit, is assigned to work with this sitter for an undetermined period of time to help their friends bridge the gap between us. A portion of the time is used for the development of healing, the balance for other forms of development. We are working with a number of people in our world who remain ready to work with the chosen of your world for the betterment of all who are affected.

YOU GOTTA BE BIG!

RAY PALMER

Perhaps it all begins when mother takes your two tiny hands in hers, lifts them up so that your baby body is erect on her lap and you are standing on your feet, then she says in a very flattering voice: "So-o-oo-o big!" There you are, standing tall at six months, towering over the world, and you are informed that you are SO BIG! It would seem inevitable with this beginning philosophy, that bigness will become a very important consideration in your future life. You will be (and you think properly because after all the mother who is the font of all knowledge and value to you was obviously in favor of bigness) impressed with bigness.

Bigness, of course, is instantly associated with power, and with effectiveness. If we are big, we can fight the other guy and win. If we are big, we can carry away the largest portion of whatever there is to share with others. As a youngster, we learn these things rapidly, and the big boys gang up on the little ones, and on the girls. We even form "gangs" and roam the neighborhood feeling a sense of superiority to individuals, and even a sense of contempt for rules and regulations, and for fair play. We acquire an arrogance that comes from the feeling of bigness.

Even in games, we exult in having piled up the biggest score, beating our opponents by a lopsided margin, and then deriding them for their lack of bigness and power. As we grow up, we continue our dominance by bigness in our games by building such powerhouses as the New York Yankees or the Green Bay Packers, and we see nothing but satisfaction in the fact that the game was not a game at all, but a hopeless mismatch of strength and size that doomed the smaller opponent to certain defeat. Actually, it was not even necessary to play the game—the winner could have been declared by virtue of sheer size and power, and the accolade awarded.

Even the audience, as demonstrated in many a baseball or football town, places top consideration on bigness by attending the games in droves while winning, but staying away in droves if their team is a loser. The one factor that cannot be tolerated is to be un-big. And the crowd screams ecstatically (along with the announcer) when "Big Joe, 371 pounds, smashes Little Pete, 186 pounds, into the turf from the rear just as he is about to throw the ball. Little Pete will remember this a long time as he is carried unconscious off the field. Hurrah for Big Joe!" And who is the hero of this encounter? Big Joe! To bad about Little Pete—but he's just too small! The thing for the coach to do is to find a replacement for him with a few more pounds. In fact, let's fire the coach if he doesn't get a bigger and better quarterback in place of Little Pete!

The trouble with us is we aren't really the big people we think we are. Starting out with the erroneous concept of our personal bigness, we have never had the opportunity nor the will nor the insight to enable us to work toward true growth, having assumed from the beginning that we were already full-grown. After all, we are so-o-o-o-o big!

Where has this taken us? Look around the world in which you live and function—it's a BIG world, isn't it! How often have you remarked on that fact? "It's a big world!" That's what you say and what you believe. Today you are faced with a terrible danger to your future. You are threatened with loss of your freedom, loss of your individuality, loss of your very possessions and opportunities. And your single enemy is BIGNESS!

To begin with, you entered your "work" life, the period in which you completed your education and went out on your own to earn a living and to gain all the things your ambition pointed toward, and you found that you weren't big enough to snatch them all to you as you might have snatched candy from a smaller kid. You found that you were applying for a job with a "big" company, and that you had to take what they offered in the way of work, work conditions and pay. Perhaps we ought to start back in the days when it was the company that was big, and the laboring man who was little. You solved that by becoming big yourself—you formed a union and you ganged up. Soon you were big enough to strike and to impose a wage demand on the employer. You did this by facing him with the disaster of going out of business if he did not knuckle under to your demand. The matter of whether or not the employer was being "fair" to you in the first place has nothing to do with what we are discussing here—the fact is that by ganging up into "bigness", you proved once more that the important thing is to be big. You added one more support to the virtue of being big. And what happened? You once more smashed "Little Pete" into the turf, and rode roughshod on to "victory".

Some of you were employers, and you remembered your mother's voice as she lifted you up "so-o-o-o-o big!" on her lap, and you formed a corporation and carried out mergers until you dominated a particular manufacturing scene by sheer bigness. You became a General Motors or U.S. Steel and you smashed "Little Pete" in the form of the consumer into the turf and walked all over his prostrate body.

Or you, as a single driver of a truck, offering the service of transporting things from one place to another at a fee, found that the bigness of the Teamster's Union was a weapon that would insure victory over your customers, so that you, with a high-school or even less, a grade school or even a second-grade education, could say to a holder of a Doctorate that he must even starve to death if you decreed he would not be shipped the necessary food unless he paid you what you demanded. You could, in your bigness, paralyze the entire nation, even the world! How satisfying a feeling! How wonderful to be so-o-o-o-o big!

Today we have come to the final denouement of this worship of bigness—we have established it as an incontrovertible fact—might is right! And we have no compunctions against using that might. We have Big Business, we have Big Labor, we have Big Government. But in reality, none of these three Bigs is really the point of our present discussion—the point is YOU. How big are YOU?

This is how big you are—you really believe you are big! You have become convinced that you have completed your growth, and have attained a personal bigness that entitles you to dominate every other person on the face of this planet! You really believe it! There is, in your personal precepts, a contempt for smallness. You have reached a point even in your "social" sense that "the common good" has precedence over the individual. It is the big city you regard with awe and admiration—the little "hick" town is derided and scorned and held in contempt, held up to ridicule. "They even take in the sidewalks at night!" But in the big town it is taking your life in your hands to walk on the sidewalks that are left out all night! You read the daily papers avidly each day to scan the stock market page, where your 8 shares of Atlantic-Richfield went up $\frac{1}{2}$ point. You advise your congressman that in the event your investment is endangered (or even your job if you work for Atlantic-Richfield), a government-guaranteed loan to bail them out is what you want to preserve that virtuous state of bigness. But if your next-door neighbor is a small businessman, you will boycott his store if he sells grapes or lettuce while a Mexican bully is holding the clenched fist of the "gang" over the head of still more businessmen. You decry his smallness, and you buy those same grapes and lettuce from the big chain store because he can pass on any losses to Uncle Sam (as a tax deduction) incurred by placing the grapes and lettuce "on sale" at a price that impresses you because it is possible only because the seller is "big".

When will you face the truth? When you join a union to gain the bigness you want in order to smash "Little Pete" into the turf, it is because YOU are SMALL! When you purchase stocks and gamble in the stock market, hoping to attain wealth by associating yourself with the big company, it is because you cannot become wealthy by yourself because of YOUR SMALLNESS, your incompetence, your lack of ambition, your unwillingness to shoulder your own burdens! When you run for the village board so you can thereby "swing" the paving of the sidewalks in front of your house instead of on the other side of town, isn't it because you are the "small" one?

There is only one thing a juggernaut can do—smash over smaller things, and crush them into the ground. It can never be "big" in the moral sense of the word. Its driver is ever a "small" man who considers himself big enough to decide that his neighbor shall be the one in front of his bulldozer. He will bulldoze him by various means—ganging up to pass laws against him, forming local associations to contest his status in the community, challenge his rights even to own his own property by such trickery as rigged zoning laws; he will call public hearings and advance only one side of the argument, having carefully concealed his real purpose so that "Little Pete" has no defense prepared from being attacked from the rear. There are so many ways in which the LITTLE man can assail other little men, by aligning himself with "bigness"!

But the one thing this "big" little man doesn't seem to have the stature to perceive, is that all people are individuals, and without the individual, nothing can be done. Automobiles are not built by corporations nor by unions—they are built by individual human beings with individual creative minds. The mass mind is not creative, it is a bully! It is the individual who invents; the masses only utilize, and never fairly, but by the sheer weight of numbers and of bigness and by force.

Once you have become a cog in a total entity called "Big Joe", you will find that you are really "Little Pete" and that you have been rendered "unconscious" of yourself, and will wind up as a "disposable unit" which can readily be replaced if you dare to express any individuality whatever. The worst part of the whole picture is that it is all due to your own false concept of your own bigness, and to the fact that you are a bully, a contemptible cowardly, gang-associated bully who cannot assume the responsibility of making of your life what you want it to be by your own efforts, but grab it from your "little" neighbor, who is little because you designate him to be so. And you recognize him as "small" because he is not a union man, not a corporate executive, not on the city council, not a congressman, not a 385-lb. football star, not on the zoning committee—he is only a lowly person trying to sell some shoelaces to support his family, too proud to accept charity from BIG YOU!

The only thing big about you is that you are a BIG FOOL—Rap.

The fellow whose troubles are all behind him is PROBABLY a school bus driver.

Dear Doctor Ann,

Dear Doctor Ann: So many of my friends are dying from heart attacks. In your opinion, what are the causes of heart trouble? S.T.H.

Answer: Medical Science informs us that afflictions of the heart are still on the increase, but less rapidly, due to the control of some of them, like rheumatic and hypertensive. However, this disease remains the greatest source of death in this country, especially among men, in every walk of life.

Dr. Paul Dudley White of Boston, Massachusetts, the world's leading heart specialist, an inveterate crusader for the prevention of heart afflictions, is a leading advocate of a dietary prevention of heart attacks. He is often consulted when trouble with the heart affects the leaders of banking, industry and other professions. Dr. White was the outstanding physician consulted when President Eisenhower was stricken. Some specialists believe that if the president had been careful before his heart attack, he would be alive today. President Eisenhower, unfortunately, was over fond of food and was a good cook. This quite probably led to his heart attack.

Dr. White's analysis of conditions which cause the death of so many leaders in industry follows: "A good executive is a human being who gets things done, despite hardship, long hours and the wear and tear upon the mentality. It is a sobering fact that if the executive is not a perfectionist, is content with doing his job complacently and without worry, such executive has a much better chance for survival than one who works, worries and indulges in too much food, too little exercise, and tobacco. An executive, who is always under a great strain is a candidate for nervous prostration. Too much worry and nervous exhaustion are kin."

If you drop suddenly in your tracks from heart trouble, it does not mean that the heart itself was the original cause. It indicates that already you were sick; that the trouble was clogged arteries and that the waste material in those arteries prevented the free flow of food. The problem probably had been building up for many years.

Most mature men have trouble with their arteries. In fact, if average businessmen, today, were compelled to race a hundred yards, a few might drop dead before the goal is reached. That is the state of what might be called "business" health today.

Unfortunately, as Dr. White recalls, the general excuse for sudden terminations of life is that the stress and strain of modern civilization is too great.

At a recent convention of specialists in the psychiatric field it was determined that the word "stress" merely meant "life". In fact, a human being cannot live without stress. Everyone should learn how to take it and live with it. If this seems impossible, you are in the wrong place or working at the wrong job. The best antidote for stress or strain is not drugs. Coffee and tea should be taken sparingly; drugs and tranquilizers only in emergencies and cigarettes not at all. These so-called 'aids' can become trouble makers, forming unhealthy habits and are subject to side effects that are disagreeable.

The real relief for stress is primarily exercise such as walking, running and bicycling and, incidentally, eating simply.

Dr. White continued by stating that he had lately read about a meeting in Washington having to do with malnutrition. In his opinion, under-nutrition was not the most serious condition facing the public. He was concerned particularly with the fact that too much food is consumed by the average person and that the multitude of calories in his food was really the cause for alarm. He called attention to the fact that the average business executive banquets too often and eats too much food in general. This, in Dr. White's opinion, is the source of much trouble. It is certainly not remarkable that most executives over forty are overweight and direct candidates for heart attacks. In Dr. White's opinion, hotels and restaurants would be doing humanity a great service if they served smaller helpings and eliminated much of the wrong, over rich kinds of food. This could be done in a second menu.

In olden days people worked hard for their food and they did not have many of the health problems that folks have today who do not exert themselves. The modern human being just sits in front of the television set, with his hot dogs, cokes, and tobacco. He tends to die suddenly from lack of exercise and too much food because his arteries are clogged with waste material. Exercise helps to prevent the accumulation of this waste. Poor folks, lacking too much food, do not have this kind of arterial disease, which attacks the average citizen of today who misuses his prosperity. Too much food in the stomach puts overwork on the digestive organs. In the old days, sixty years ago, ice cream was a luxury, eaten only two or three times a year. But as Dr. White puts it: "Today, ice cream is available—and unfortunately it is used by many persons even as much as two or three times a day." In olden days, as Dr. White states, ice cream had to be made in the home and was only served on such special occasions as Thanksgiving, Christmas and the Fourth of July. This change of food, according to Dr. White, has made nearly everyone a candidate for coronary heart disease.

Dr. White puts it strongly: "Life of the average person today is ridiculous." The many varieties of food consumed, often foods overnutritious and too great in quantity, put a strain upon the body. This begins and there is a rush for vitamins and drugs. This "pepping up" process happens time and time again until the heart, lacking enough oxygen, just gives up the fight to live.

In Dr. White's opinion, the health troubles of today are multiplied by the articles of convenience as we know them: The elevators that do away with stair walking; the automobiles that deprive the average person of using his or her own legs for moving about. He decried the 'second telephone' in the home put there to prevent the housewife from getting the exercise her body needs. He also points out that one of the reasons why the wives do not have so much coronary disease as their husbands probably is because these wives walk more and exercise more in and about their daily tasks. It is estimated that the presence of one telephone in the home instead of two makes the housewife walk probably 75 miles more in the home each year.

After much careful study, nutritionists declare that one of the main causes of heart problems is the consumption of improper food—too great amount of cholesterol taken into the body through eating meat fat. The experience of vegetarians proves this absolutely. Experiments disclose that the fatty content of meat lines the interior of the arteries, blocking the free flow of blood. This places an undue strain upon the heart, due to the lack of oxygen, often with fatal results.

The Bantu people of S. Africa are famous among nutritionists for their average low cholesterol value (166) and practical freedom from coronary heart diseases. The average figure for U.S. is 230 or more. Their diet provided less than 20 per cent fat calories vs. the American 40 plus. Furthermore, heart attacks are uncommon in the countryside in Japan (high stress area). Serum cholesterol levels there are almost as low as in the Bantu; the Bantu and the Japanese diet provides only 10 to 15 per cent fat calories except in the big cities like Tokyo. The existing implication of rich animal fat diet as an important factor in the etiology of thrombosis is very strong. Some of the more striking studies can be summarized here: The countries which suffer the highest mortality from "Arteriosclerotic and Degenerative Heart Disease" and which include the U.S.A., New Zealand, Australia, Finland, Canada, and the United Kingdom, relatively large amounts of those proteins which had a high content of cyanocobalamin, and/or large quantities of pasteurized milk or pasteurized milk products, were consumed (J. Coll. Gen. Pract.)

In addition, because of the perishable nature of meat, Robert H. Finch, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, expressed his view that the inevitable result of literal enforcement of Federal Law on DDT and pesticides would be that the U.S. would become a "nation of vegetarians". Much red meat, many dairy products, some eggs, fowl and fish would be outlawed because of the Pesticide residues. (Newsweek)

Dr. White sums up the vast majority of heart afflictions are the result of physical laziness, and of over-stuffing the stomach with rich food and of lack of exercise. He advocates careful nutrition at all times and does not give credit to the usual stress and strain of business as the cause of heart afflictions. In other words, the usual cause of heart trouble is not mental but the result of physical abuse of the internal organs through an over indulgence of food and physical laziness.

LIVING FOOD IS A MUST—Scientists tell us that we have only a few years left to survive, unless drastic changes are made immediately. These changes are: to purify water, to clear the air and to eliminate the chemicals from the food. Continued existence here on earth depends entirely upon the foregoing factors. They are necessary changes to be made if our bodies are to be healthy and keep living. Lifegiving sustenance depends on air, water, food and sunshine. These essential tools are furnished by the Almighty. The body is a self-cleansing, self-building and self-sustaining sacred mechanism which works day and night to keep us healthy. Health is a natural state. It is our heritage. Mother Nature, the Power within cannot operate successfully under the present woeful conditions. Such natural attributes of life here on earth have been tampered with outrageously. Our air is polluted, our water is contaminated, our food is chemicalized and 85% of the elements of food are destroyed by cooking. Our sunshine has been weakened by smog and radiation.

Most folks are slowly becoming awake to these dangers but do not know what to do to bring matters back to normal. Stimulants are used almost universally to keep the body moving, but such treatment is bad for real health and strength. I have found that working with Mother Nature most of my life has proven to me conclusively that there are solutions for all problems. The way to insure survival at the present time is to adopt living food organically grown. This living food may be raised indoors, the year round. The cost will be less than one-third the average person now spends for almost worthless dead food. Living uncooked nourishment might well be called the "oxygen diet" as it brings needed oxygen into the digestive organs where it is needed.

The worth of this live-giving program can be proven within just three weeks, upon yourself. You will immediately have access to more energy and strength, a more alert mind and a more positive attitude.

Relaxation is the key which opens the door to an important part of life's processes. Nothing can come constructively in a human being's life that is under constant tension and worry.

In the morning, upon arising, start the day with this exercise: stretch your muscles slowly while lying in bed, wriggle your toes and breathe out. Sit up in bed, shake your hands vigorously. Follow it with a neck exercise: turn your head as far as you can to the left, move it up and down seven times. Turn your head to the right and repeat.

Place your spread fingers on your hair and move the skin of your scalp vigorously. You are now ready for a bath or shower. Drink at least two glasses of warm water. Add lemon juice if desired.

Breakfast should be an ideal one of fruit-fresh and sweet. Use watermelon, grapes, apples, pears, mangos, papaya.

Wheat Treat—Soak cup wheat seeds with 2 cups water for 24 hours. Drink the soak water. After additional 24 hours, the wheat can be eaten or planted on soil for wheatgrass.

Or the wheat when blended with one cup water makes Live cereal. Or with additional half cup water, thoroughly blended and strained, the liquid makes a tasty, white milk. Sweeten the preparation with maple syrup or blend in dates.

Lunch—A wise person takes the lunch to work to avoid the chemicalized food served in restaurants. It should consist of fruit or a avocado sandwich. Avoid folks who talk negatively about sickness. And as a health measure it is better to eliminate 'coffee breaks', and have 'fruit break.'

Evening Meal—This should consist of a living food, uncooked. It should include sprouts, greens and vegetables. Prepare them with taste, color and for good digestion.

This type of living food restores natural health to the body and prevents heart problems. It enables those folks who are overweight to reduce naturally and gradually. If the diet is too difficult, try using one cooked vegetarian meal, during the first few weeks.

To better your health you must make the effort. To make the effort you must have an understanding of Mother Nature's methods.

INSPIRED NOVELS

BY MARIE CORELLI

Six Great Psychic Novels, Inspired From "Beyond", Long Out Of Print
Available Once More In Economical Paperback Form For True Students Of The Occult.

Romance Of Two Worlds $2.12

Marie Corelli was perhaps the greatest psychic writer of them all. In this novel she treats of the world of the spirit, and its relationship to we who are the world of the living.

Ardath $2.12

Here is a book that places reincarnation in the most straightforward and fascinating light ever woven into a novel.

The Secret Power $2.12

The strange story of a secret race, the Masters of the World who are bringing about a New Age and a New Race on Earth. The prophecy in this book, written many years ago, is amazing.

The Sorrows Of Satan $2.12

Perhaps the most unusual in its "mystic" content of all Marie Corelli's philosophical novels.

The Soul Of Lilith $2.12

In this book the author shows how close is the link between life before death and life after death.

The Master Christian $2.12

This is the famous book in which the author draws together the threads of psychic science expressed in the preceding volumes. In it she depicts Christ as a child, visiting the world as it is today and sorrowfully observing the wickedness which men practice in His name.

SLEEP SOUND AGAIN!

GENIE MAGIC PILLOW

YOU CAN EXPERIENCE
COMPLETE REST AND RELAXATION

Sleep Sound Again!

You can experience complete rest and relaxation "without drugs". It is a scientifically accepted fact that the brain and nerve centers emit tiny electrical impulses. The magnetic field of the Genie Sleeper attracts these electrical impulses, thus forming an infinity. Once this occurs tension is relieved, the body relaxes and a deep restful sleep soon follows. This may take place the first time you use your Genie Sleeper, but in some cases it could take longer. Just continue using the Genie Sleeper until the desired effect is achieved, then your sleeping problems are over.

No more tossing and turning all night. Fall asleep fast and naturally! Wake up feeling younger, fresher, full of vitality, vim and vigor. A fresh new surge of energy is built up each night with a full nights sleep on a Genie Sleeper, easy to use, just slide Genie into your pillow slip and over your regular pillow. Lasts for years, nothing to run down or wear out and can be hand laundered.

Harmless to people of all ages!

Guaranteed against defects in materials and workmanship.

Now, let's take a look at some of our facts:

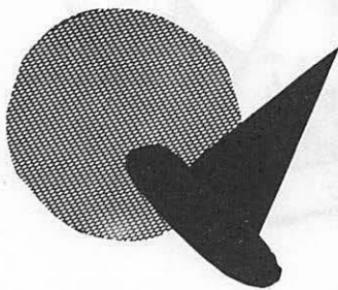

Sleeping pills of a hypnotic type are habit forming. Statistics show 75% of all suicides are from over-dose of barbiturates.

Genie Sleeper is not habit forming. There are no physical or chemical effects produced by our product.

Genie Sleeper was invented by Detlef L. Wolff, a German inventor, size 12" x 18" x $\frac{3}{4}$ " made of light soft 100% polyurethane foam and containing six scientifically designed magnetic impregnated plastic strips so manufactured and arranged to create just the right magnetic field to influence the brain toward relaxed and restful sleep.

Price: $16.00 each

WITCHES DON'T FLY

BY CURTIS BARGREN

When the average person hears the word 'witch', what does he think of? More than likely, he either pictures an unbelievably ugly old woman stirring up some bubbling potion in a cauldron, or he conjures up a vision of a group of Satanists giving worship to their diabolical master. These ideas are still quite prevalent in the modern world although historical and anthropological evidence as well as the writings of Twentieth Century witches seems to prove otherwise. Indeed Satanists do exist and these persons are often called 'witches', but this is not correct.

Recent studies by persons who are authorities on this subject, notably, T.C. Lethbridge and Dr. Margaret Murray, have shown that what is called witchcraft, existed as an organized religion long before Christianity. Records of witch trials very rarely mention the names Satan or Lucifer, but instead the word 'devil' which merely means 'little god.' The witch-cult is still very strong in England and France, numbering as many as fifty thousand members, none of whom claim the belief in any form of devil at all. The followers of this religion claim that it is a pagan religion dedicated to the worship of a Mother Goddess and a horned god of hunting, death and magic. Many of these persons can trace their witch ancestry back many hundreds of years. During the Middle Ages much emphasis was given to the horned god (possibly the nature god Apollo) and he became to be associated with the devil, although the Bible does not in any chapter mention the devil having horns. The worship of modern witches is almost identical to the worship given to the goddess, Diana by early Celtic peoples, and to add to the closeness between the two cults, today's witches claim their goddess is identical to the Roman huntress. Satanism is a relatively new movement, originating as an organized religion around the Eighteenth Century. Virtually every accusation made against early witches concerning their rituals were based on little authority on the part of the persecutors. In fact, every ritual mentioned, from the nude circle dances to the worship of the horned devil on the throne can be found in the early Dianic and Cernunos cults of Europe.

The above are but a few of the arguments against the existence of evil witches during the middle ages. Witches who have traced their witch ancestry back hundreds of years, state that these persons were not heretics, but members of the same pagan religion they themselves belong to. In order to make this clear, they call themselves "white witches" as opposed to the "black-witch" believed in by many. They also believe that such wicked persons never existed, and give reason for this theory. First, the Craft is highly secret, and all writings concerning their rituals must be copied by hand and destroyed before death. Secondly, in all these writings there is a warning on the first pages which gives instructions to be carried out if the witch is arrested and tortured. It tells the accused to confess to only what the inquisitors wish her to confess, and to lie about

MEET THE AUTHOR

Twenty-one year old Curtis Bargren is the Publisher-Editor of ESUS Magazine, a bi-monthly publication dealing with Witchcraft and other pre-Christian European traditions. He is a frequent lecturer on Witchcraft in the Tampa Bay Area and is occasionally heard discussing the subject on radio. He is currently finishing up his second book which deals with the anthropological-archeological aspects of the witch-religion.

the teachings and rituals of the Craft for secrecy reasons. It also promises eternity with the Goddess if the convicted witch obeys these commands and remains loyal to the Craft. It states that cannibalism, flying and child sacrifices are 'impossibilities', but when accused of such activity, the witch should confess, if tortured too greatly.

Witchcraft is an ancient pagan religion, with its roots reaching back to the beginning of time. The word 'witchcraft' is derived from the Anglo-Saxon word 'wicca' which means 'wise.' Therefore 'witchcraft' simply means 'the craft of the wise.'

Before Christianity came to Europe, the Craft was one of the largest organized religions on the continent, especially Britain. Its beliefs and worship were centered around a Fertility Goddess and a god of death; the Goddess being the most important figure of the religion.

When Christianity did come to Britain, the Church, unable to kill the beliefs of the Old Religion, turned around and called them heresy, changing the horned god into the devil, and twisting the simple rites of the witches' Sabbatical meetings into unbelievable stories of Satanism, Black Magic and sexual orgies. Witchhunting became a profession for many, bringing wealth to several noted witch finders. Any means possible were used to convict a witch of heresy, torture being at the top of the list; but even so, the Craft survived to the present day and is finally enjoying the public recognition its members have long awaited.

Today witches are organized in 'Covens' usually numbering thirteen members—six male, six female and the High Priestess. There are many Covens, however, that have a much smaller membership as all prospective witches are carefully screened and chosen. They hold their religious meetings on the Sabbat days marking the four seasonal changes as well as the solstices and equinoxes, namely February 1, April 30, August 1, and October 31. The remaining Solstice and Equinox Sabbats fall during mid-Spring, mid-Summer, mid-Fall, and mid-Winter. The mid-Winter Sabbat, falling on December 22, is possibly the most important of these four occasions as witches celebrate the birth of the sun with special rituals and ceremonies.

At their meetings, the "white witches" perform what they believe to be magic within a nine foot circle which is not used for protection purposes, but instead to keep the witches' powers in. The rites are as follows: First the High Priestess draws the circle with a specially consecrated knife called an 'Anthame', then purifies it with consecrated water and incense. She then welcomes the other members individually into the circle, and together they offer prayers to their deities and ask for aid in their magic. They then make up a chant which clearly expresses what they wish to accomplish with their magic, and holding hands, dance around the circle repeating this chant first softly and then louder as the dance increases in pace. These rituals are said to raise a cone of power from the witches' own bodies, which they then direct to whomever or whatever they are working for. Success is based on group concentration, and the psychic abilities of each member. Of course, the magic they use is nothing more than projected telepathic messages which work on the same principal as the group prayer meetings so popular today. To the witches this is magic, no matter what scientific term used by the public is given to such operations. After these rites, they have a small meal and return home.

The followers of witchcraft as a religion, claim that all their magic is used for good purposes, often for fertility reasons, as their cult is a fertility cult. They resent the image the general public has given them and take advantage of every chance they get to publicly disprove the things which have given an evil aura to their religion. Perhaps, one of the major problems they have is dealing with those persons who use the Bible as their source of condemnation. Such an instance occurs every time someone quotes the Biblical phrase, "thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." This is simply the improper use of the word. The Hebrew word 'Kaskagh' from which early translators obtained the word 'witch', in this instance means 'poisoner' and really has nothing to do with witchcraft. As for the poor 'witch of Endor', she seems to be more of a medium than anything else. Certainly she did not belong to the religion for which the word 'witchcraft' was coined. The same confusion occurs when people use the terms Sorcerer, Sorceress, Wizard and Magician synonomously with the word 'witch.' This is also improper English. These persons can follow any religion, and therefore should not be associated with the witches' religion whether it is old or not.

Witchcraft's most notable advocate was a retired customs officer, anthropologist-archeologist and witch, the late Dr. Gerald Brousseau Gardner. A short, fragile figure with a crop of bushy white hair, Dr. Gardner spent a good portion of his adult life in the far East where contact with numerous aboriginal and primitive races brought him wide-spread fame as an authority on Eastern beliefs and customs. His Kris and Other Malayan Weapons (1933) earned him an honorary Ph.D from the University of Singapore; a certificate he later used to boost the position of witches internationally.

Returning to England by 1945 Dr. Gardner underwent initiation into an ancient hereditary coven near Christchurch, but, later left to establish his own groups and to open his famous Witchcraft museum, The Witches' Mill at Castletown on the Isle of Man in 1950. Through a series of books, lectures and radio-interviews he succeeded in attracting several students who he personally trained and eventually initiated into the High Priesthood. Today, 'Gardnerian' Witchcraft boasts the largest percentage of witches throughout the world.

Dr. Gardner is sometimes accused of inventing some of the rituals advocated by his disciples; but, in his most popular work Witchcraft Today (1954) with an introduction by Dr. Murray, he states that he is merely writing of the beliefs and practices of covens already in existence on the British Isles. Nevertheless, the strong Romano-British traditions into which he was initiated, together with his own efforts to resurrect lost rituals, did lead to the organization of a distinctly unique sect of Witchcraft. To be specific there is a stronger matriarchal system of government and less involvement with the purely magical side of the Craft.

In 1964 Dr. Gardner succumbed to a heart attack while on a return voyage from Lebanon. By the terms of his will the museum, his home and collection of magical artifacts passed into the hands of his Scottish High Priestess and Witch Queen, Monique Wilson, the 'Lady Olwen' and her husband and Queen's Consort, Campbell, whom together continue his projects on the Isle of Man.

In expectation of increased public interest, a group of London witches announced in the spring of 1964, the formation of the Witchcraft Research Association; a loosely organized body devoted to elevating the Craft's standing to one of respectability. Within one year's time the group included a witch-membership nearing one-thousand and a lay-following of comparable size. Although no longer in existence, owing to lack of funds and personnel, the WRA went far in achieving its original goals, primarily through the pages of Pentagram a quarterly newsletter which has continued publication, (albeit under an expanded format), under the editorship of its founder, Gerald Noel.

The witch-movement came considerably later to the United States. In 1970 a group of witches in the far Western states, W.I.C.C.A. (Witches Invocational Ceremonial Covens of America), introduced a new sect of 'Reformed Witchcraft' advocating stronger organizational programs and far less secrecy for the enhancement of Craft-public relations. About the same time a second group consisting primarily of would-be-witches, W.I.C.A. (Witches International Craft Associates) got underway out of New York City. To date, more than four hundred authentic covens meet regularly in all fifty states.

Increased publicity has not been entirely beneficial. The occult boom of the late 1960's saw the formation of countless spurious covens with no line of lineal descent and rituals pieced together from books and articles heralding the 'New Age' of Witchcraft practice. By 1971 an estimated one-thousand such groups were claiming witch-connections in the United States with twice that number in Britain. Books promising, (but failing), to 'tell all' have quadrupled their sales over the past six months. Mail order houses are doing a brisk business in phony Witchcraft supplies from aerosol incense to fossilized sea shells 'consecrated by a witch High Priest.' Correspondence courses advertised as 'your gateway to this ancient religion' have proven greatly lucrative with individual instruction ranging in price from nothing to $500 annually.

To meet the problems commercial exploitation has produced, witches in England and North America have launched a counter-movement to expose and discredit covens and individuals making false claims to witch-traditions. Questions are sometimes asked to trick the guilty parties into exposing themselves. But so far the project has only been nominally fruitful. Differences in procedure and litany from one sect to another have made universally applicable questions difficult to formulate. In addition many of the more publicised 'imposters' are unable to be contacted except for newspaper interviews. One woman in California has succeeded in preserving her magnificent, but undeserved reputation as a witch through attacking members of the Old Religion ruthlessly, leaving them no time to bring her out into the open to discuss her religious views, (she will however, discuss her bank balance and how it has improved since her 'Witchcraft' was made public news.) Other self-proclaimed witches have begun to follow her example, leaving a befuddled and wearied public to choose for itself whom to believe and whom to laugh off. Education alone seems to be the only hope in relieving witches of their imitators.

From persecution and suppression to exploitation and imitation, Witchcraft must still contend with public opinion and the results such opinion brings about. Fortunately centuries of hiding has taught its followers something in the art of self-preservation and organizational stability. Witch-hunting has always been a profitable business; but come what may, the witches still ride.

PEOPLE ARE FLOWERS

The older I get the more I realize the truth in my mother's words, the philosophy she taught me.

When I was a little girl, my mother always said to me, "it takes all kinds of flowers to make a garden, and it takes all kinds of people to make a world".

She'd go on to explain, "there are all kinds of flowers and all kinds of people—different colors, sizes, shapes and needs". And she'd add, "there's a place for all of them because mixed together flowers make a beautiful bouquet, and people mingled together, that's brotherhood".

I always protested, "but flowers are different, Flowers grow in dirt; people don't". My mother answered, "perhaps you're right. Some people aren't strong enough to take dirt, face the pressures of life. They are the bleeding hearts".

My mother would continue, "other people grow sturdy and strong by accepting life as it is and making the best of it. They are the roses that blossom in spite of the thorns".

She'd say, "then there are those who appear to thrive in dirt by throwing it at others through thoughtless words and acts. They are the poison ivy".

With today's tensions and troubled times, my mother's words live on. People are flowers. It takes all kinds to make a world. Life isn't all roses because the bleeding hearts and poison ivy are also part of life's bouquet.

Can "Self-Control Ever Be Outdated? Here is presented

An Idea Seldom Voiced In This "New Age"-----

Why

"SEXUAL MORALITY"?

by L. TILLMAN MARTIN

I do favor sexual freedom. No individual or group has the right to dictate sexual expression or policies having to do with it, but each individual should make his own decisions in this regard. What he does or does not do should be entirely between him and whatever god he acknowledges. For sexual freedom is inextricably bound up with personal freedom of every kind. But I do assuredly recognize, most emphatically, that with freedom comes responsibility. Given freedom from outside restraints, including those inherent in authoritative religions, one must necessarily develop and rely (as he should, always!) upon self-restraint, self-control—or else utterly destroy himself by unrestrained license and intemperance in sexuality.

There are several reasons for temperance in sex expression. Naturally, as the Free masons teach and attempt to exemplify—and they are of course not alone in this—temperance is to be desired and sought in all things, not merely sex, but sex above all. The sexual element in man is a sacred trust, to be used sparingly and wisely.

First and foremost, there is the fact that a man's going running about like an unleashed animal in heat, impregnating every available female, may and all too often does burden humanity with "fatherless" children to support, in his default. Where he is irresponsible for the results of his own actions, others have to assume the responsibility, the burden. . .which is manifestly unfair by any standard.

The same is true of a woman who, in the interest of gratifying her purely physical sex-urges, ruts around with every man who will stand still and drops her obviously unwanted children without further concern for their welfare, even their life or death. She burdens others, most of whom are already tax-burdened to death and hard-sold into contributing to a dozen or so parasitical "charities," with taking care of, rearing, and giving at least a minimum semblance of education to her offspring.

There are, thank the gods, still people who do care whether or not a child starves to death or dies of neglect in the streets! They will take care, when possible, of "waifs abandoned on the world. But all sense of rightness of justice, is outraged in us that it should be necessary for them to do so because of others' lack of providence for their young! Few are the animals, even, that abandon their young; and we give lip-service to the ego-boosting concept that we are somehow innately superior to the animals.

Next, of course, as a reason for temperance, is the old Latin precept, "Mens sana in corporo sano," "A healthy mind in a sound body." Sheer wellbeing requires that a man or woman take care of his or her body-instrument, not dissipating it and wearing it out through sexual over-indulgence. In eating merely because one likes to eat, or dancing all night and all day just because one has a liking for dancing. Most people of any intellect at all feel a slight pity, mixed with profound contempt, for any individual who throws himself away—destroys himself in any form of dissipation, especially sexual.

There is still another reason, by far the most important, for temperance or even absolute celibacy. Like the others, this one has nothing whatever to do with arbitrary "moral" judgments of any kind. It is not emotional, but entirely practical. And that is, that for untold thousands of years, individuals of superior intellectual and spiritual attainment have agreed that the highest development and expression in man collectively or individually is possibly only by keeping the sex urge in check or voluntarily suppressing it and transmuting it altogether. They have reiterated, again and again in various symbologies and differing words, that the hormones, sexual secretions, and other factors we do not now generally recognize and understand are drawn up to the brain center and used to nourish and develop that brain and the higher mental and what we choose, so sentimentally and so utterly without understanding, to call the higher spiritual faculties and powers. All or almost all of the so-designated "holy" scriptures speak of this matter. In the Old Testament there is constant reference to "containing one's seed". In the New, Paul (Apollonius) opines that "It is better to marry than to burn," but hastily goes on record as recommending that total abstention is far the better course for those who can bring it off. Thus, this is the original reason and significance of and for celibacy, rather than any "moral" consideration.

With celibacy, after one has weathered the at-first painful and most unsettling confusion in his body, mind, and thinking capacities because of the increased influx of hormones, then his talents become richer and more clearly and visibly defined. The intellect is sharper, quicker, more incisive. The wits are wider-awake. What is more remarkable, for those experiencing it for the first time, one becomes gradually aware of added faculties on the order of the telepathic, clairvoyant, telekinetic, as well as greater effectiveness of the standard "five" senses. Eyesight is sharper, hearing is keener, skin thermal and tactile sensations are realer and more dependable, smell is surer and taste is heightened. One finds himself quite naturally and effortlessly coming into possession of "senses" or a unified, direct awareness on a scale theretofore unprecedented in his case and which, hearing of it, he had previously been inclined to doubt and scoff. Hence a far more immediate and personal reason for self-containment rather than letting one's sex appetites lead him around by the proboscis and control him to his own hurt and eventual destruction.

The foregoing explanation, although there are many more insights possible to be given, may be found in Yoga textbooks, in personal instruction in Hatha and Raja-Yoga and Kundalini.

Morality in sex is a pure abstraction, nonexistent as center dough in the hole in a doughnut! All sex is immoral or none is! There is, however, the need for reason and self-control and temperance, if not complete celibacy.

Karma requires us to make this clear that if one would attain liberation and escape the wheel of repeated rebirths in this world, being enabled to go ever onward into new experience in an ever-ascending staircase of better and better worlds of our universe and then others, he must eventually attain, first, absolute self-control, then relinquish sex altogether, of his own free will and accord. To be good because one cannot be bad, or because he never has the opportunity to be other than "good," is negative, weak and naive, adding in no way to stature and character. Only what one attains by his own self-willed effort and struggle is worth the having in this area.

TRUE EXPERIENCES

RESTLESS SOULS

by Helen A. Swartz

Some years ago I decided to renovate an old seven room house, rentals being scarce. When we moved in we discovered that the house was still occupied by some former tenants long dead. Our two sons, ages 4 and 12, my older brother, my husband and myself were all made aware of the unseen occupants.

AT ten o'clock most every night there were heavy foot steps coming up the outside stairs and across the long porch. Then silence. We found no one about.

At 12 A.M. my brother's bedroom door would open. He wedged the door shut, still it opened slowly without effort. He would not lock the door because he was afraid if it opened being locked that he would be terrified. He did move out because of this door, unable to sleep.

We had made a play room of the basement. We stacked chairs against a wall under a window. One night the children and I were alone. We heard heavy footsteps across the basement floor, silence and then a loud crash and silence. We had been out earlier so I assumed that some one had got in while we were gone and being desperate to get out had upset the stacked chairs while reaching for the basement window.

My husband was near by so I telephone him to come home. He came at once and we investigated. The play room had not been used in some time so there was dust on the floor and chairs. We investigated thoroughly but nothing was disturbed, not even the dust. There were no footprints and no finger prints.

Our living room and bed rooms were on the second floor. The stairway was an open hall. The living room door faced this hall, as did the kitchen on the first floor. Our 4 yr. old was in the living room looking at comic books. I was ironing in the kitchen positioned so that I faced the hall, to keep eyes and ears open for our mischievous 4 yr. old. He called down. "Mom, who was that woman?"

"What woman?" He came down stairs and looked around. I assured him there was no one there. "You're fooling me. Did she go home? I saw her come down the stairs. (It was a 3 story house) She came down from upstairs and she looked at me and then she came down here, now where is she?"

"What did she look like son? Was she old, young? What was she wearing, how was she dressed?"

"She had on a real long black dress. Not like your dresses. She was little and old. She had a funny hat. It was little and had a bow under her chin, where'd she go Mom?"

I assured him that she had gone home so that he would not become fearful.

I then went upstairs and examined the comic books to ascertain if he had gotten a character from the books and then dozed off. They were all his favorite cow boys and no female character such as he described. This was before T.V.

From neighbors and the owner of the house I learned that a former tenant, the man in the family had killed his wife in my brother's bed room. The man had come home from work every night at 10 P.M. and the little old lady was his mother.

We did not move because after the crash in the basement there was no further incidents. They seemed to have re-lived the time of the murder.

We had never instilled fear of the unknown into our children. They were used to unexplainable sounds and movement around me. It still goes on where ever I live. The children are grown and now label it, "Mom's ghosts."

I have no explanation but that the dead seem to continue life around me and movement and sounds of them are visible and audible to anyone present when it occurs. I do not delve—I accept them as they are. I sense that for me to try direct contact on a mental level could give them power that may be harmful.

In one old house we occupied things were thrown but only at me—and things were broken. I was never hit. So I assumed they were a bad shot or did not mean to harm me. This was a very active house. We heard movement, many foot steps and muted voices as the many people were preparing a meal in the kitchen. This came at 2 A.M. and we could all smell coffee in the hall way. Three notes would be stuck on our piano—always the same three. This alarmed many of our guests.

I say live and let live—they are welcome. I don't pretend to understand it.

TELEPHONE CONVERSATIONS WITH ALBERT

by Katherine B. Troker

Elizabeth, who was a close friend of mine, went with me to New York to receive advice from Albert who was an excellent Card Reader, and highly advanced in Occult Science. Many of his predictions came to pass shortly after, while others occurred many years after a given time; as time is an earthly condition.

It was not until Albert had passed on one January day while Reading for a young lady, and unknown to me, did I realize the impact of one characteristic I experienced with him alone. When about to give me a Reading, he placed his fingers on the back of my hand: I felt a sort of electrical vibration for a few seconds. Although I had not known when he had passed on, for a number of nights just as I had retired and before sleep overtook me, I felt the exact vibration on the back of my hand and as real as when living. Later when informed that Albert was no longer with us in the flesh, I realized that he was trying to let me know that he was still around in spirit. This occurred for some time during the year.

Elizabeth is very psychic, and the phone seems to be a great medium when we talk together, especially drawing entities and unusual sounds from space. One evening I called Elizabeth up, the first words she said "Albert is here, looking his usual self" followed by Albert saying, "Don't cry for me," then said "I did not expect to go so soon as there was a lot of unfinished business I would like to have attended to". Early after his demise, he came through to Elizabeth saying repeatedly, "I feel so cold and lost and still wandering". At that time he had a bedraggled look.

Shortly after this he came through saying, "There were many things in life I thought insignificant, but here, they are as mountains". He then asked to light a candle and pray for him as I'm still wandering". The next time he came through he looked his usual self and thanked us both for helping him. In a former, very early Reading he said, "It is dark and swampy here" (on the phone of course).

Albert advised me to be careful walking at night as there are many prowlers around. The next evening near here, a woman had her hand bag taken from her. I nurse at night.

About one year after Albert had passed on I had a strong desire to go back to the same place Albert had given Readings. I told Elizabeth I was going that afternoon. Albert came through saying, "Go, I will be there". While seated in one of the booths waiting my number to come up, a lady came up to me and said, "Are you Kathy or Katherine?" I said "yes". She then told me that she had been over to another Reader called John and said that Albert told John to tell her to go there, that I would be there and ask me to place my hand on her abdomen as she was in pain. I did so, then she said she felt much better. We were both guided that day.

In a number of Readings Albert would tell me to go to Mr. Morrison (Rev.) I should say, as far as I know. One morning I was holding a letter in my hand from Morrison unopened. Immediately the phone rang and it was my friend Elizabeth and the first words she said before I even spoke Albert came through saying, "Go to Morrison". It was all concerning my book "PSYCHIC EXPERIENCES" he was eluding to.

NATURE'S GARMENT

Freshness of morning,
Tropical sun,
Sky set in rubies
When day is done.

Gurgling waters
Crystal and clear,
Velvety meadows
Green forests near.

Flowers unfolding
Mid perfume and hue,
Smile beneath skies
Of incomparable blue.

Trees scarlet, ablaze,
In fall of year,
Diamond frost glitter
Sparkling and clear.

Rippling hill country
Yellow with grain,
Providence sending Sunshine and rain.

Splendor of mountains
Majestic they grow,
Melting loveliness
Of ice and snow.

Breath-taking wonder
Of oceans and sea,
Reflecting the glory
Of God's majesty.

Are we astonished
That, Satan said if yore,
"All this will I give
If me you adore".

With Christ we exclaim,
"Satan be gone"
The glories of earth
To God only belong.

DARE to be different

BY MORJORIE FRY

Why do so many people dislike and fear to be different? Why must we always follow the crowd? Perhaps women in their desire to have something different and exclusive in the way of clothes are developing more individual traits and means of expression within themselves. We can note this in all the different styles of hair dress we see, and even wigs, which have become so popular. We are told to dress and wear our hair according to our type rather than follow the style of someone else.

Many of our young people, as with the so-called Hippies, as well as others, are rebelling against the conformity of our age. Usually things of that sort go to the other extreme before reaching a balance point.

We need to develop traits of individual thinking and of expression rather than following a set pattern and memorizing the words of another, as we have too often been taught. It has been truly said, "There are no two things throughout all nature that are alike". There are no two people in the world who have had the same experiences in life. Every person is a little differently constructed, having similar desires perhaps, but each has a different way of satisfying these desires, so we all have a separate and distinct character.

Man, as an individual soul unit was sent out to gain experience for the whole, or God. Therefore, the more distinctive we are from our parents, brothers, sisters, friends, or our neighbors, the more successful we are becoming at living life, learning and gaining wisdom. We often need changes long before we have them because we have been taught to worship and follow in the footsteps of our elders instead of thinking for ourselves and living in our own age. It seems, however, man fears any great change and therefore does not readily release his old concepts and adapt his mind to new ways of thinking.

Fear is the barrier which separates man from his higher self and is not only confined to the physical body but to the heart and mind as well. It is because of fear that we fail in the achievement of our ideals for it hides behind many guises.

In our so-called civilized life, because of the complexity of our living, we have suppression of fears for they do not have the natural outlet of reaction as they would in a more primitive life. Primitive man's greatest fears were of physical danger and hunger, but now we have fear of losing our property, fear of what people will think of us, fear of our ability to accomplish something we desire, fear of meeting people, of expressing ourselves, and many many others, with the result that we have repressed emotions of the mind.

Some people cannot stand ridicule. As children we are very susceptible to ridicule or to being different, especially in our clothes, but we should outgrow these childish traits when we get older, although some never do, and these are the people who are hurt most in life. Mothers harm their children sometimes far more than they ever realize by making fun of little things they do or their mistakes.

In the fear of what people will think we find many of our youth today often somewhat embarrassed in regard to speaking about Spiritual truths, and many adults too for that matter. The last few generations have grown up in such a materialistic age, where little or no thought has been given to Spiritual verities either in school, business or in social life, so it is no wonder they feel this embarrassment. To be sophisticated, smart, glamorous, has been the rule and it is considered old fashioned or square to talk about Spiritual things.

Most young people want to be accepted by others so they tend to go along with the crowd, dressing alike, smoking or even drinking and forming other bad habits because, as they say, everybody does. Nowdays we read of and see riots by young students all over the world, many of whom do not think or even know what they are supposed to be rioting for, but merely follow the mob, which often is led by trained agents or agitators to provoke strife. We have demonstrations on the street and on the College Campus, which could very easily lead to more serious trouble and bloody warfare.

It is time we gave serious thought to and investigate what our children are being taught by the schools today, and why. It might be well to start teaching some old fashioned patriotism instead of so much "one worldism".

Our whole way of life nowdays is slanted toward conformity. In our schools they try to hold the student to the average mentality. The Divine purpose was that we expand and promote individuality of character and we can only do this be developing distinctiveness from others. A person who is different stands out from the crowd. The more individualistic we can be, the more experience we attain, the greater our growth. It might seem to be a lonely life at times but rest assured you will be progressing beyond the mass, though the mass will always try to hold you back, to pull you down to their level.

These are days of rapid change when many of our old ideas and beliefs are no longer adequate. The great need is to think for ourselves and then have the courage to be ourselves and express ourselves as individual personalities. We may make mistakes, but we will be learning. Instead of being fearful of being considered different, let us be proud to be different.

If our youth were trained in school, as well as at home, to think for themselves, to be individualistic and form their own standards of living, soon we would have a generation of citizens in America with the character and fortitude to demand that those in high office clean out all subversive elements in our country, and instead of scattering our forces all over the world, concentrate our strength and efforts to make our nation the greatest in the world.

Think, for instance, what a difference it would make in our lives if we put the things Science has made possible into use for the good of man instead of destruction, as we are now doing, for the benefit, security and abundance for all our citizens.

If we wish to remodel a house we must first picture in our mind how we want it, if we are going to make a mechanical part for some machine, we must first see it in our mind before we can make it, and so it is with everything. Why not use the same law to create a perfect nation? Why not envision in our mind such a nation with security, independence and equal opportunity for all its citizens?

We hear a great deal about blue prints for peace and the future. We can prepare our blueprint now and envision this greater freedom that science and technology has made possible for us. After we have solved our own economic problems we would then be in a better position to help other nations solve theirs. It is something to think about if we would only slow down our fast pace of living long enough to contemplate where we are going. Otherwise, we might wake up some day, and not a distant one either, to find ourselves a servant to the State.

Our mind can travel faster than anything man has invented. All of us, great or small, can in large measure control our destiny, we can create our present life and mold our future. So let us cultivate the art of independent thinking, apart from the crowd, and help create a great Spiritual nation here in America.

When we can express ourselves more freely and naturally, without fear of what others will think of us, it will release many of the tensions within which are caused by these repressed emotional fear vibrations.

E.S.P. laboratory

We, at SEARCH Magazine, through the years have been recipients of much literature from many most unusual organizations. Beginning with this issue, we plan to introduce some of these organizations, and the people behind them to our readers. "E.S.P. LABORATORY" is the first of this series of articles.

Life Background of its Founder

The driving force behind E.S.P. Laboratory is our founder, Al G. Manning (and as he would say, his spirit band). To know what makes the Lab tick, you need only understand Al. He grew up in Texas as a shy only child and came to California at the age of ten. He loved the outdoors, games and building model airplanes. Learning was a simple process to Al, he breezed through school at the top of his classes with little apparent effort.

Wearing the uniform of the U.S. Navy at eighteen, Al walked the streets of Hiroshima shortly after the "bomb". The awe and wonder left him forever impressed with the transitory nature of life—thus his stress of what he calls the Shiva Principle. Back home again, he enrolled at U.C.L.A., graduating in June, 1950, with a CPA certificate, a Phi Beta Kappa key and a Summa Cum Laude written in English as "Highest Honors in Accounting". He settled down to make a living and raise a family. But the Korean war came along and he was recalled to serve the tail end of the war in the Navy Supply Corps. Here he did his first published writing in a column called "Duty Cat". Back in civilian life again, Al quickly assumed a major executive position in a growing company—this was the start of his very successful business career. His interest in spiritual and occult things persisted throughout with continuous study leading to more degrees, B.R.C., M.R.S. and finally a D.D.

Personality Traits

Al is a compassionate and empathetic person. He is kind, affectionate, understanding and extremely psychic. He has a hundred things going at one time, making life a glorious love affair, full of fun and excitement. Being honest and sincere, he has a great compassion for animals, respecting all of God's creatures. He has a wonderful sense of humor and the magnetism that draws people to him. Everyone is relaxed and at ease in his presence. He is extremely intelligent, a boy at heart and there's never a dull moment with Al.

At the age of 22, Al wore glasses and had ulcers. His work in metaphysics helped him to rid himself of both. For years he studied and researched metaphysics and extra-sensory perception. After writing three books on the subject, he founded E.S.P. Laboratory, in February, 1967.

Growth of E.S.P. Laboratory

Now in its fifth year, the Lab has grown steadily and has members throughout the world: in England, Canada, South Africa, Holland, Netherlands Antilles, Saudi Arabia, Australia, Nigeria, Venezuela and of course all over the United States.

The Living Light is the basis of a series of correspondence study courses designed to initiate "beginners" into a true relationship with God and self through psychic development and spiritual evolution. The approach is pragmatic—we'll try anything—and if it works, we'll use it! One of Al's pet sayings creeps into many of his discussions and has been the subject of more than one of his lectures. In his teachings to see aura, astral projection, spirit contact and all the things we reach for at the Lab, his basic approach is, "If you're dumb enough to try it, it works." And it does!

The Lab goals are best defined in the last chapter of Al's first book, THE MIRACULOUS LAWS OF UNIVERSAL DYNAMICS. To quote in part: "As science and religion stumble nearer to each other, there is a growing need for a new kind of organization, a living, vibrant group unhampered by the rigors of academic pressures and the scientific approach or the doctrines and dogma of traditional religion. With balance, energy, and carefully selected personnel, the organization will be in a position to bridge the gap. It must plant itself squarely between science and religion, toss a rope to each, and pull them together.

"The scope and approach of the group should be unlimited. There are many avenues to unity, and each bears detailed investigation. Much will be done with ESP, but there may be more promise in the physics of light, in nuclear physics, or in plain old-fashioned metaphysics.—

"The need is for an extremely informal, university-type atmosphere which can attract men of high caliber. With adequate funding, top flight people will be guaranteed a reasonable financial future. Thus, their minds can be freed from the pressures of money-grabbing, and they will be capable of the mental and spiritual growth so necessary to the success of the undertaking. We have already done this for our missile and space scientists. Why not try to advance the spiritual also?

"The people who dedicate themselves to this momentous project will need the tools of their trade. The focal point of activity should be a campus complete with offices, conference rooms, laboratory equipment, digital and analog computers, thinking rooms, a large meeting place, a large library, and perhaps living quarters. The extremities of its operation and influence will be infinite.

"We have just united with God's personal plan of creation. We have consciously joined God's team. God is on our side! And if God be for us, who can be against us? We may falter or stumble, but He has given his angels charge over us to guard us in all of our ways. Truly, they will bear us up in their hands, lest we strike even our foot upon a stone. We will not fail God, and He cannot fail us." And a little further: "Focus your GOD-POWER by visualizing the result—the physical manifestation of our shared dream. Realize the full import of linking the subjective and objective. It is the culmination of science and religion. It is full understanding of how the universe really functions, and consequently a cure for all disease and a source of all supply. It is every man's dream of Utopia, but it is not an end in itself. It is only the beginning of a new age of growth and progress. We are not intellectually capable of predicting what the next goal will be, but we are sure it will be as far above our present goal as this goal is above the world we live in today." And finally, his constant prayer, "I trust in God with all my heart and He directs my growth in the Christ Idea.

He is giving birth to an effective organization to unite religion and science into a living, vibrant organism, now. Thank you, Heavenly Father, for this perfect gift to mankind."

The purpose of the Lab is to find a balance between science and religion coupled with the Lab motto: RESULTS! And the results will be so authentic that science will no longer be able to sweep the psychic/spiritual world under an intellectual rug!

Current LAB Projects

The Lab Occult Gift Shop features Al's personally formulated incense, oils, herb packets, colognes and shaving lotions which are used in conjunction with our Practical White Magic and Witchcraft course to invoke spirit help and cooperation from the nature spirits and elementals to help solve personal problems, attract good fortune, uplift and purify the vibrations in the user's aura. Personal self-help tapes are available to program the subconscious to attain specific goals and rid yourself of unwanted negative conditions. Meditation stones are picked by Al himself with psychometry (using vibrations from a written request) and are very effective worn or carried in a pocket as a protective amulet. One of the most popular uses of the meditation stone is to transfer one's tensions and anxiety to it.

The pyramid has been used by the Czechs to sharpen razor blades. (See the bestseller, Psychic Discoveries Behind the Iron Curtain). It has also been found that the pyramid energy "mummifies" organic matter such as meat or fruit. One of the Lab's current projects is experimentation with the MYSTIC PYRAMID as a thoughtform amplifier. Members all over the country are participating in a group project—using the Lab's miniature pyramids to amplify their thoughtforms with amazing practical results!

There are class meetings three nights a week: Tuesday and Thursday at 8:00 P.M. and Sunday at 7:30 P.M. All our classes are also available in correspondence. Tuesday is currently devoted to the basic study course, A NEW LIGHT OF HELP FOR YOU, a study of the mystic Light common to all religions. This is the most popular of all the courses.

Thursday night is currently the PRACTICAL WHITE MAGIC AND WITCHCRAFT course.

Sunday night is currently studying prophecy, HOW TO PROPHESY ACCURATELY FOR YOURSELF AND OTHERS. Coming again soon, PRACTICAL MODERN OCCULTISM, our course in thoughtform building and astral travel.

On Tuesday and Thursday nights the "lecture" is followed by our Psychic Development exercise (which purifies and opens the psychic centers and culminates in a mystic attunement), then by psychometry in which everyone participates. Psychometry with practice, develops one's ability to psychically tune in to another person's vibrations through a personal article (eg: a ring, watch, etc.). The article is considered a prop to help "beginners". As the student develops through practice, he finds he can simply reach out psychically and tune in to another person's aura with excellent accuracy.

Sunday, psychometry is omitted and Al lends his body to his spirit guide, Professor Reinhardt who brings through helpful information regarding the evening's discussion and personally introduces the audience to members of their own spirit band.

We do NOT have "free enterprise" today. That's a contradiction in terms. We have a mixed economy of capitalistic-socialistic features. How "free" is any enterprise that is regulated, controlled, directed, prohibited and overly taxed by our government? How "free" is such an enterprise when the more one PRODUCES the more he is penalized? How "free" is any man who is VICTIMIZED BECAUSE OF HIS VIRTUES? The "workers of the world" have work only because of those independent men of judgment who went out and created these jobs. My chapter on "The Conscience In Capitalism" goes into this in detail and presents the rational-MORAL basis for capitalism, which is based on my own life philosophy, which can be summed up in three words: VALUE FOR VALUE.

Any person who accepts interest on his savings, bonds, stocks or what have you is a practicing capitalist. This is one of the most noticeable contradictions about "socialists." The Judeo-Christian ethic has paralyzed the thinking processes of most people who espouse one thing and do another. Pope Paul VI's encyclical "Populorum Progressio" (On The Development Of Peoples) attacked only one economic system: Capitalism. It totally ignored and evaded every other system: Middle Age feudalism, . . . Socialism . . . Fascism etc. It totally bypassed the fact that those countries that have the highest standards of living are those countries which are capitalist. What other economic system can compare? In the attempt to cloud the real issues such terms as "greed" and "avarice" are used. I have always maintained that the defenders of capitalism have been its worse destroyers. They've always done so defensively instead of launching a moral crusade as to its real values. Capitalism and the Judeo-Christian concepts..namely altruism...are directly opposed. The first is based on DEED. The latter is based on NEED. And it's the latter that have for centuries attempted to blackmail the men of DEED into feeling guilty precisely because they were DOERS. The "do nothings" resented these men not because of their supposed "vices" but because of their VIRTUES. How did they do this? By talking about "helping their fellowman," about altruism, about "need" and creating guilt in the men of DEED...this guilt created only because the DOERS never challenged the assumptions of those who exist as parasites...who invent, create, contribute nothing in their lives...the ones who are the true takers, the leeches, the bloodsuckers, the parasites, the exploiters, who are "so concerned about the injustices to their fellowman" that THEY have never made possible one job, one benefit, one improvement. All of them are collectivists in their soul: You do the work and we will all share in its benefits! My answer is: You share equally in the creation of a new industry (the money, sweat, tears, blood, uncertainty, ridicule of those who say "it can't be done") and then you will be entitled to share equally in the rewards: VALUE FOR VALUE chapter "The Conscience In Capitalism": "*The leechers made loud speeches about the 'exploitation of the poor.' Those who had no right to this money used psychic blackmailing tactics to create public resentment. By this means they hoped to impose an unearned guilt on the producers. Conveniently they forgot that it was no thanks to them that they had jobs. Who was exploiting whom? The workers began to believe that "without us there would be no industry.' What they didn't say was that without these men of vision there would be no jobs. Even then most of them shirked their responsibilities, got away with as little work as possible, and tried to blackmail the producers for more money for their mechanical, nonproductive, irresponsible performances. Capitalism's abuses don't negate the greater, tangible values that these so-called 'robber barons of business' made possible. The humanitarians basked in the glory of 'do-goodness,' claiming an unearned virtue, while villifying the businessmen and industrialists as vice-ridden monsters, condemning them for their courage to go ahead and create wealth. They also didn't hesitate to use any and every means to tap the rich reservoirs of this earned wealth. The gold miners dug it up. The 'gold diggers' got their glory, and almost succeeded in getting all the 'goods' too!"

OUR PRECIOUS PETS

By ANN WIGMORE, D.D.

Here is a book to gladden the heart of all animal lovers. The founder of the National Humane League said of it: "It reveals a deep understanding of love and care which maintains the health of these friends, which are so dependent upon us."

This volume deals specifically with the details of proper care, feeding and better understanding of our friends—all God-guided creatures. It includes first-aid remedies for pets and common sense healing suggestions for the control of chrotic ailments. Here are set forth definite instructions as to how, by astrology you may select the right pet for you and feel confident that it will harmonize with your own personality. This collection of some fifty-two heart-warming animal stories is bound to delight both the young and old. Somewhere in this volume, perhaps more than once, you will find your own wonderful adventures with pets glorified once more in a manner that will bring back delightful memories which even time has failed to eradicate.

I have always regarded pets as catalysts which harmonize the relationship between animals and human beings. This was emphasized delightfully as I read the manuscript last night. Some how, some way, it seemed to bring to me the presence of my little yellow dog which was forever faithful during my boyhood days on the cattle trail which led through Abilene.

I want you to know that I admire the masterful way in which you have handled the incidents and I feel certain they will appeal to others as they have appealed to me.

IN OR ON?

Dear Mr. Palmer:

Regarding the Authorized Version of the Bible's use of "in" in the Lord's Prayer as supporting the hollow earth theory. Your reaction to the truth of the comment of the Rev. Mr. Stafford on (or "in") page 82 of May "Search" is rather amazing and is not at all what might be expected from the gracious and intelligent Ray Palmer whose words I have read for many years.

The use of "in" in the English of former days to mean "on" is not even now totally obsolete. For instance, you would still say that Adam and Eve were "in" the Garden of Eden at one time: no one would suppose that you meant that they lived in a cave way under ground. We do not say that they were "on" the Garden of Eden. English expressions are not noted for their logic and consistency.

You, Ray, live in the Western Hemisphere: this is good English and there is no fault to be found with its mode of expression. Now, when the two hemispheres are involved: meaning the earth, must we change the "in" to "on" so that "in" earth (the two hemispheres) is not to be construed as meaning that we live in the interior of the Earth? How ridiculous can one get?

The effort to use "in earth" as a proof text is about the most assinine instance of alleged Biblical exegesis that I have run across in my seventy three years, and I have met some beauts.

Does your "fine and dandy" indicate that you really agree with Mr. Stafford's intelligent explanation? You seem to be in unseemly haste to escape the import of his words. There is a sudden and precipitous change of subject with your instantaneous "but just. . ." What sense is made by your comment that the Greeks. . .(for your information they were not Greeks, with the possible exception of St. Luke, but they were Greek speaking Jews. You should be more careful about getting your facts straight, Ray.). What sense is made by your comment about the Greeks "doing some editing" to explain away the "in"? Why don't you give facts, authentic references to support your assertion, Ray? Isn't it quite obvious that the "in" wasn't there in the time of those non-existent "Greeks" but the "in" didn't appear on the scene until about 1,800 years later? in English and not Greek? How could they try to explain away what didn't exist for them? Or, maybe what you have in mind is the presumption that Jesus actually said "in earth" but that the dishonest Gospel writers, who also knew what Jesus said, changed his words so that Jesus would not be quoted in favor of the hollow earth theory. If this is your meaning it is the lousiest example of a far fetched theory that I have ever heard of.

Then, also, there is your implied criticism of the Bible translators who "abandon the literal wording entirely". In the first place you surely are aware of the fact that you could make no case for your word "entirely".

Here you have assumed by your comments in the matter of Biblical translations a competency that you do not possess in this field. Sometimes a "literal" translation of the Hebrew and/or Greek words does not convey the original writer's meaning in the language of today. In fact, any kind of translation of certain Biblical expressions cannot convey the meaning of the original. A paraphrase or commentary is necessary to express the original. As an instance, Jesus has been regarded by some as antisocial when he told certain disciples whom he sent on a mission to "salute no man by the way". This is your "literal" translation. But salute in those days meant not merely a friendly gesture and a few friendly words but meant the necessity to spend hours and maybe overnight in the residence of a stranger. So much for "literal translation". I enclose an article from a recent issue of the American Bible Society Record which goes into this matter further. Here again you have, with a presumption of knowledge that you do not possess, merely displayed your ignorance.

In closing, I sincerely trust that God will bless you out there in

• I guess I didn't get my point over at all! It is one of my peculiar theories that we (you and I) live "in" the Earth, because I consider the atmosphere to be "below the surface". What I mean is that this planet, as I conceive it, is a ball consisting of the solid portion, about 600 miles of atmosphere, and then outside that, about 180,000 miles of very thin gases which you might loosely call "atmosphere". The major premise is that all three are inhabitable. No, I don't mean that Adam and Eve lived in a cave. Even though the "lost books" of the Bible refer (literally) to Adam and the cave of treasures, etc. I also refer to the ancient meaning of west and east as being up and down. What I really said in my reply was that taking anything in the Bible in a purely literal sense is rather difficult. In the case of certain religious cults, it leads to very dogmatic intransigence.

My use of "in" in my reply to that letter was hardly used as "proof", but more as a sort of dismissal of the point being made about the Lord's Prayer. In Earth as it is In Heaven, to me might be quite literal if we place

Heaven in the atmosphere and Earth on the solid part of the planet, thus to anyone living in (on?) the atmosphere, a person living below him "on" the surface, would really be "in" the planet. After all, "as it is in Heaven" would be a world of spirits, of the dead? So, you can see that taking THAT literally would mean you were praying for everybody to die!

No, my "fine and dandy" doesn't mean I agree! It means "fine and dandy—but I don't buy it!"

As for the "original" Greek, let's not get into that—because even that wasn't original. The Old Testament (Greek or Hebraic) is really only a "steal" (theosophically speaking) from Vedic, Sanscrit, or what have you. In short, it isn't original at all! Just as the "Sermon on the Mount" is not original with Jesus.

You are right about my "ignorance"—my years of study of all the religious books of the world have convinced me that what I know is far less than what I don't know, and that the "don't know" is not unique with me, but is a very fat part of the literacy of those who preach the loudest. As for that, I am very glad you didn't stoop to "preaching" to me, but based your argument on facts, for which I thank you. Letters like yours are always appreciated because they offer something to fill the many gaps in my knowledge.—Rap.

A truly important book! In all respects the worthiest concept of occult teachings that has yet been written. Fiction? None but the ignorant would believe that! The author was an advanced student of occultism, and in his sensational book he has tried to place before his fellow men a tremendous reality he discovered concerning this earth of ours, and life on it, in it, and beyond it.

The COMING of the SAUCERS

The original flying saucer book! It was Kenneth Arnold who gave the saucers their name, and he wrote the best book of them all. Here it is, in print after ten years! This is the famous book that tells the true story of the death-dealing "Maury Island Incident" in which two Air Force Intelligence men lost their lives, and Arnold himself barely escaped with his skin. To those in the know, this story is the key to the whole U.F.O. mystery. Perhaps the entire significance of this amazing adventure will never be told, but what you will read in this book will stagger you. No fiction mystery could ever match this true story.

COSMIC

BRYANT REEVE

We on Earth are entering the Space Age. Our traditional cosmic isolation is ending. Earth is in touch with outer space! What will this mean to us? How can we prepare ourselves for the vast changes that are on the way? As we begin to study the impact on our civilization; what is happening to the minds of men on Earth is more important to understand than what is happening in our skies. In other words, we must comprehend the terrific impact of the space ships on our human norm of life, the challenge which these and similar events pose to our concepts of reality beyond the confines of Earth's gravity. We know a great deal about human life on Earth; what can we learn about life in outer space, about life on a cosmic scale? Once it dawns upon us that outer space is indeed inhabited by beings expressing themselves in different planes of matter and reality, it then becomes important for us to try to develop some understanding of their greater view of life and to compare it to our own. This book is pointed toward the goal of developing—from every possible source—the space view of life.

Men Among Mankind

By BRINSLEY LE POER TRENCH

What happened to mankind after the Atlantean civilization was lost? How did humanity react when Nature went mad? Where did the seeds of human culture survive? When did the world begin to recover from the effects of catastrophe? Who initiated the process of rehabilitation? Has knowledge of the source of world progress been suppressed and withheld from maturing mankind?

This book presents a scholar's answer to these and many other questions. Historical facts long obscured by Roman and Mediaeval propaganda have been examined and evaluated against an unusual but never fanciful background. The result is a new picture of mankind's history during the last ten thousand years.

One of the themes discussed is that the course of history has been changed abruptly, from time to time, by certain unusual men who have suddenly appeared upon the human scene. They have been few in number, but their thought and action have influenced succeeding generations. Sometimes this influence has been violent and drastic, at others it has gone almost unnoticed, unappreciated and under-valued by both contemporary observers and historians.

Human progress has been the gift of this inspired minority. Isolated by their genius and extraordinary in their abilities, they have demonstrated a marked difference from the ordinary people of any period in time.

What sort of men were these? Most important of all, to us and to our future, how has mankind utilized the knowledge these men have brought into the world?

This edition of OAHSPE contains 928 pages. It also contains nearly three quarters of a million words.

Do you think flying saucers are new? Then read OAHSPE! A whole panorama of aerial and space vessels, described as though from today's newspapers.

Do you wonder at Einstein's theories? Then read OAHSPE! He could have gotten his information there! Uncounted thousands of tons of meteorites fall to Earth each day, yet space is nearly empty of them. OAHSPE knew it in 1882! Space is dark, say our daring astronauts. So did OAHSPE in 1882, and tells us why! Archaeologists have made amazing discoveries of ancient races and dead cities and civilizations since 1882. They might have discovered them sooner had they read OAHSPE.

Just where is Heaven? What do you do there? Is there anything for YOU to do when you get there — what kind of occupation? Is there really a Hell? Who manages the Earth, the Solar System, the Universe — and how? How do the different religions fit into God's one Universe? OAHSPE tells all this, and a thousand more answers to man's most difficult questions.

WHAT IS the real history of the human race on this planet (and on all others)? What is Man's origin, purpose, destiny? How did Man rise from the beast? What are the secrets of submerged continents, of the Great Pyramid, of the Sphinx? What is the history of the Earth's major religions? Do they exist on other planets?

It staggers the imagination!

FLYING SAUCERS

America's only Fact Magazine with complete coverage of the famous UFO.

Flying saucers are a fact. A national poll has proved that one American in every four is aware of the truth of that statement. In spite of this, FLYING SAUCERS magazine is the only publication devoted to presenting all the facts and all the latest news concerning unidentified flying objects. It is the only magazine wherein the public can pierce the fog in which official sources have shrouded a matter of vital and general public concern. Here is a magazine you can depend on to keep you up to the minute on every development. More than 5000 sightings have been reported to the editors, and new sightings come in daily. Hundreds of these are from reputable people, airline pilots, scientific experts, even clergymen. FLYING SAUCERS has a staff of experts who evaluate every sighting, subject every photo to exhaustive tests, analyze every theory presented, and who meticulously report the truth as they see it. Today Man is aiming his sights at the stars. He intends to fly to other planets. But are the inhabitants of other worlds already visiting us? It may be so, but even if not, this magazine is writing the daily history of the new space age!

Ray Palmer's FORUM

For many years readers of Ray Palmer's magazines said their favorite sections of his magazines were the editorials and the readers' letters with his answers to those letters. Half in jest, some readers suggested he fill up the magazines with just editorials and letters. One day Ray "got the message", and the idea of a magazine called FORUM, containing exactly what these readers had suggested, drove him to making up just such a magazine, to see what would happen. What did happen? Nothing Ray Palmer ever published has gotten more praise than FORUM! It is useless to describe the magazine, except to say that in it Ray and his readers express themselves as never before--and if you don't get into the act, too, you are missing the greatest!

POLICE BRUTALITY

Dear Mr. Palmer:

A recent AP dispatch backs up my claim that the police aren't as trustworthy as some believe them to be (see SEARCH January, 1971). The dispatch, dated May 25th, stated: "A Yale University sociologist has said that more than 25 per cent of the policemen observed in a study in Chicago, Boston and Washington were seen committing crimes, both misdemeanors and felonies."

Dr. Albert Reiss recommended "the formation of a national inspection service to prosecute corrupt and criminal policemen".

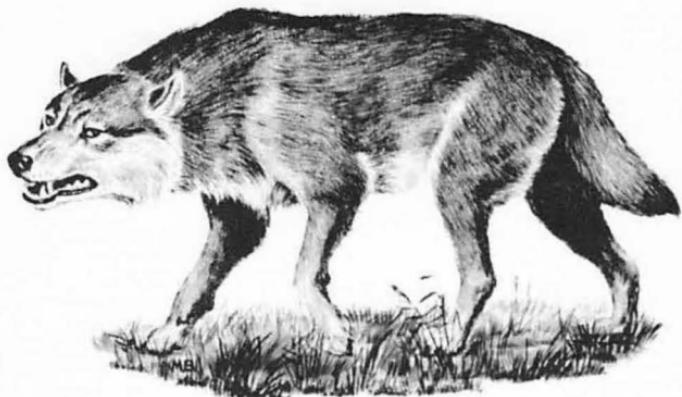

Now for those who were so much against my saying there is such a thing as police brutality you'll like this little bit of information. Assaults on a citizen were the most common felony committed. Dr. Reiss states: "Such assaults were rarely in response to physical aggression by the citizen and never necessary to sustain an arrest. Actually, no arrest was made for 59 per cent of the observed assaults."

This is indeed alarming news but I doubt that it will actually hit many until they are themselves involved with the police. Among the other crimes committed were stealing from an already burglarized establishment, accepting a bribe to alter testimony, shaking down deviants or traffic violators and accepting cash payoffs from businessmen.

THIS DAY IS ENDING!

A Great New Book Of Prophecy—Stunning In Its Impact!

DIRE WOLF

Robert Olsen may not be well known, but this book will rank him among the world's most famous prophets. In his Preface, the author says:

"This work is in two parts; the future and the present; in that order. The statements herein are similar to that of the military scout who returned to his commanding officer with the report: 'Sir, there is a hellish big batch of the enemy coming this way!'

"Given that information, the officer can do some accurate prophesying on his own, wherein his actions will effect future events. The leaders of this civilization are that officer. They have the power to make its future secure. I am confident that they will do nothing.

"The second part of this work is to let those of the future know more of this civilization than they will find in conventional history books, and perhaps to arouse some controversy in the present generation. This book is NOT fiction!"

A glance at the contents page of this book indicates its sensational scope: The Dire Wolf—Genesis—Theories—Countdown Has Begun—Prophecy—What Will Happen?—What You Can Do—What Could Be Done—Fictitious History—Love Thy Brother—Your Friendly Oil And Power Companies—On Earth As It Is In Heaven—There Is No Such Place As Australia—What's Inside A Uniform—The Wages Of Sin Are Profits—Reflection and Requiem.
