A NEW VIEWPOINT ON MAN'S HISTORY DURING THE PAST 10,000 YEARS

What happened to mankind after the Atlantean civilization was lost? How did humanity react when Nature went mad? Where did the seeds of human culture survive? When did the world begin to recover from the effects of catastrophe? Who initiated the process of rehabilitation? Has knowledge of the source of world progress been suppressed and withheld from maturing mankind?

This book presents a scholar's answer to these and many other questions. Historical facts long obscured by Roman and Mediaeval propaganda have been examined and evaluated against an unusual but never fanciful background. The result is a new picture of mankind's history during the last ten thousand years.

MEN OF MYSTERY WHO ARE THEY?

One of the themes discussed is that the course of history has been changed abruptly, from time to time, by certain unusual men who have suddenly appeared upon the human scene. They have been few in number, but their thought and action have influenced succeeding generations. Sometimes this influence has been violent and drastic, at others it has gone almost unnoticed, unappreciated and under-valued by both contemporary observers and historians.

Human progress has been the gift of this inspired minority. Isolated by their genius and extraordinary in their abilities, they have demonstrated a marked difference from the ordinary people of any period in time.

What sort of men were these? Most important of all, to us and to our future, how has mankind utilized the knowledge these men have brought into the world?

EDITORIAL

THE BEST laid plans of mice and men . . . they say. Well, this issue is a case in point: we planned to tell you more about the war of the Condor and the Serpent, as per the cover and its wonderful Indian painting, but we can give you only a portion of it, simply because we misread a III for a II. This article (presented in unedited form) is taken from the book "The Ancient Atlantic", the book we've been promising you for years, by L. Taylor Hansen, which is now developing into such a tremendous work that it would run more pages than we can put into one volume. Obviously it has now become two books, but we will publish them simultaneously, and sell them only as one unit. However, to get on with our "plans" that went awry, we have still to receive Part II of the book(s), so we are giving you only a portion of the entire story of the Condor and the Serpent, but at least you will find some fascinating information about the Flood in this issue.

While we are on the subject of "The Ancient Atlantic", we might as well describe it a bit more, so you know what's in store for you. This is a scholarly work, a work of a lifetime. Yet, it is a tremendous adventure story, written as it is in L. Taylor Hansen's distinctive personal style, and therefore grippingly interesting to the most lay of laymen, as well as the most erudite and learned of scientists. This is pure research, plus amazing theory, plus high adventure in the true tradition of high adventure. When you read "The Ancient Atlantic" you are reading the absorbing story of the past of that ancient sea, and its fossil story of the civilizations that lived around it, and in it (now under it, for many of those civilizations existed on its sunken floor). You will find, tied together and documented and rendered totally understandable, all the mystery that the Atlantic has for centuries presented to the archaeologist, the geologist, the anthropologist.

The story of our planet's past is perhaps the most absorbing story of all, to we who are alive
now, and wonder how we got here, why we are as we are, and what developed our present culture from misty beginnings that we have long suspected existed, but never before could prove, as they are proven in this book. L. Taylor Hansen has spent a lifetime opening this window into ancient times, and this book is certain to become a classic of research, possibly unequalled in modern times. It not only opens a window on the past, but a great wide door into new understanding of Man and his Planet and his History.

You who read SEARCH will be particularly interested, because you will find in this scientific work, proof of the "unknown" things we have long studied together, from the mysteries of such things as the ancient Inca, the giant pyramids of Egypt, the sunken cities sometimes glimpsed by fishermen along the Atlantic shores, the legends of Atlantis (was there ever such a continent?), and the legends of the Indians who we now know existed in North and South America untold thousands of years before scientists were willing to place them in time. Once, not many years ago, we were sure the Indian barely went back to 800 A. D. Now we know he goes back at least 12,000 years, and we suspect, as much as 25,000. We find proof that he knew the ancient Egyptians of 3,400 B. C. (or even earlier), and possessed also a knowledge of such things as astronomy more perfect even than our own vaunted modern science. Such things as the observatory of Stonehenge, which predicted eclipses so accurately, and also the equinoxes, the so-called Venus Calendar, based on a numerical system related to the planet Venus.

We've wondered about all these things, and now we are going to have a book which explains them all! A book that will so broaden your understanding that you will want to etch the name L. Taylor Hansen on the sunken mountains of the Ancient Atlantic themselves! Don't forget to make a mental note to watch for its publication. Those of you who followed the original work of L. Taylor Hansen, way back in the 1938-49 period know what is in store for you. Those wonderful articles were only tidbits of the masterpiece to come.

The book has many wonderful paintings by Indians, in full color, many wonderful and illuminating maps, also in full color, and we, as editors and publishers and printers are simply staggered by the amount of work we are having to do to bring this book to a printed reality. You will pardon this editor for his enthusiasm, which you will understand when the day comes when you hold the finished product in your hand. Here is the book that explains so many mysteries. Even the Shaver Mystery, Oahspe, such things as Hansen's "He Walked The Americas" become meshed portions of a total concept that is almost beyond belief.

An Ancient Legend Comes Again To Haunt The Halls Of Science

(THE AMERICAN INDIAN REMEMBERS IT AS THE WAR OF THE CONDOR AND THE SERPENT)

OUT OF THE profundity of antiquity and through the burning of ancient documents, like a ghost from the ashes, comes a legend of a sunken land long lost to volcanism and subsidence, which once existed in the center of The Atlantic Ocean, and from almost impregnable ports, ruled the earth.

Science has tried to slay this spectre, as St. George slew the dragon, but somehow it manages to return. Each time it does, science is a little less certain of its ground, for a multitude of puzzling facts keep stealing its weapons. The most potent sword it carried was rusted out by the discovery of an old parchment map, while tiny microscopic animals eleven thousand years after their death, point like the hands of a giant clock to the Date of The Cataclysm.

From the sensational forthcoming book
"The Ancient Atlantic" by L. Taylor

Now, to live in the musical world of one's grandfather might indicate a good musical education, and to live in the literary world of the last two generations as they looked into the past, might indicate a fair general education, but to live exclusively in the scientific world of the last thirty or forty years betrays one as a poorly educated man. Yet there are scientists who are doing just this. Furthermore they are teaching the youth without having kept up with the advancing horizon of their subject, and for the purpose of showing them how they have fallen behind the general march of new facts, I have chosen to write this book on the most controversial of all scientific subjects - The Place of Atlantis in the Probable History of The Atlantic Ocean.

The story came down to us from the volumes of Plato, who incidentally, is not a writer of science-fiction. It has been treated like a fairy-tale told to beguile children. However, it was never meant to be that. Solon who first heard the story from the Librarian of the incredibly ancient collection of papyrus manuscripts which made up the Alexandrian Library, was a Law-Maker of Athens and far more interested in local politics than ancient history. However, he left the notes and the manuscript which he had partly finished. They never survived to our time. The notes were inherited by Critias and (pronounced Cree-shus) then handed down in turn to his grandson Plato who was also interested in law. Plato started a manuscript but never finished it. He shelved it for a dry dissertation on law and a just state. Both have survived but one only wishes that he had a bit more of the historian in his makeup and less of the philosopher. Neither Solon, Critias nor Plato were fools and the Greeks of The Golden Age were hardly to be compared to children. Nor can the ancient knowledge of The Egyptians (from whom the story came) be written off as inconsequential. Egypt is the one great bridge leading back from historical times into the legend of pre-history.

Thus from voices over two thousand years old comes a story translated from an ancient history which no longer exists. Just because we no longer have this book, should we say that it never existed? Or should we withhold our judgment until all the scientific facts are in, even though that may take many years of research? So far, The Ancient Legend is winning. If you do not think so, then you are not as informed as you should be on recent scientific discoveries.

During the eighties of the last century Ignatious Donnelly wrote a book called "Atlantis and The Antediluvian World." It was excellently researched for its day and the mistakes it made were due to the fact that science had not yet enough material to entertain a different viewpoint. However, Donnelly tried to do a scientific work which certainly is more than many writers upon the subject of the sunken land do. Most of them shy away from oceanography and try to get their facts from either a medium or a ouija board. Such "facts" will convince no one except spiritualists and psychologists and their point of view will differ.

However, when Donnelly tried to get answers for his questions from scientists, they covered up their ignorance with laughter. The book promptly became the point of endless classroom caustic wit. And Donnelly, completely frustrated, was silenced.

Since the time of Donnelly, science has moved forward, as it always does, over the stepping stones of exploded hypotheses. Why? What explodes a chosen hypothesis? Facts. Newly discovered facts. Any Hypothesis must fit facts or it goes into the discard. Some of our scientists are not even aware of these facts and therefore they are not aware that their pet theories are no longer admissible. It is time that these men came out of their ivory towers. In fact, ivory towers have no place in science. That is its challenge and its glory.

In this book we shall discuss some of those facts - the Great Sunken Land on the floor of the Atlantic and other mysteries of that ocean such as sunken fossil rivers, and sunken cities, sunken water falls, and the strange planetary features which we call rifts, as well as the curious change of climates and water levels throughout the ages. We shall inevitably raise far more questions than we can possibly answer for science has not as yet, found all the answers. It is finding more answers every year, and it will continue to find them. Yet it is also true that too often an answer to the first question then raises half a dozen new questions, for some of which science now has no answers.

Here, working in laboratories and in ships drilling upon, or sounding the ocean floor, are the explorers of today and their adventure into the unknown is twice as fascinating as the adventures of our exploring ancestors of a few hundred years ago. Nor is it all arm-chair discovery. Sometimes it entails great danger, but the lure of the unknown is an ever-present lure. Science has no place for the mind which knows all the answers for as some wit once said "If you know all the answers, then it is obvious that you do not know all the questions."

For example, if you are one of the scientists who learned your viewpoint upon water-lockup in ice from a teacher who in turn was taught during the eighties and has not studied much since, and you begin to argue against the possibility of an Atlantis upon the three hundred foot level which was supposed to have been the water withdrawal at that time, you may be asked in turn to explain 1) the lava which solidified under air, torn from the Ridge at the nine thousand foot depth? or 2) the tremendous rebound of glaciated lands which is far greater than it should be considering the presently estimated ice weight? or upon the other hand, 3) asked what about the Daly remark in his "Floor of The Oceans", that a Russian scientist had confided to him that an immense sheet had once covered Siberia and cartographers were just now discovering its range?

The latter statement reminds me of the time when the present writer was in a party coming up the Mackenzie River from the Circle in Canada, and had met just such a group of cartographers.

These Englishmen were jolly fellows with whom we shared our food and exchanged ideas. One of our party asked them; "Tell us the name of that large river which we just passed."

"It has no name yet."

"Oh come now. It must be the size of The Columbia River."

"Yes, it probably is. We are on our way to survey it. We have it marked as about five hundred miles in length."

"Where does it rise?"

"We are not certain of that. Two old miners or part-time trappers were our informants, only they could not agree about the source. One said that it arose from a large lake and the other said it began in a spring on the side of a mountain."

"It could be that both were right," one of our men observed,

"only one had penetrated the country farther than the other."

"That is possible also," the Englishman conceded. "However, our worry is whether the river is frozen solidly enough so that we lessen the chance of breaking through, and are able to cover as much territory as possible before the spring thaw."

Ah yes, there is unknown territory in the vast stretches of Canada, much less Siberia. Yet it all contributes to our problem of the Pleistocene (Ice-Age pronounced Ply-stoh-scene) ice sheets and the amount of water which they drained out of the oceans. Of course, up to the time that Daly dropped this bombshell, no geologist had dreamed that Siberia might have had an ice-sheet! And considering the rapidity with which information trickles out of Russia, it may be some time before we find out anything more on the subject

Only one fact is certain, as sunken bank after sunken bank is discovered to have had its own Pleistocene sheet, or have been covered from the nearest land - the estimated water level in the time of the Pleistocene is steadily going down.

Up to the time of Donnelly's book, science had not known about any land in the Atlantic, and of course, was only amused by The Legend. However, the English Research ship "The Challenger" made a profile of The Atlantic from coast to coast, and it was this profile which caused Donnelly to begin his research on The Legend. Not only was a land to be found there, but running as it does, from five hundred to a thousand miles wide, and the entire length of The Atlantic from its head, Iceland, which is still out of the water, to where it curves around Africa, The Ridge made it obvious to Donnelly that The Egyptian priest could not be so far wrong when he said that once it was as large as Libya and Asia put together. Of course, by this he meant Asia Minor since it is to be doubted if the Egyptians were acquainted with Asia proper, or called it by that name. Yet, if Asia Minor and Libya - (the land from the borders of Egypt to the Atlantic) are molded slightly, they will not only fit upon the Great Central Ridge of the Atlantic but leave enough room for an England, Japan and Ireland also - laid end to end. How science began to combat these facts, until new discoveries silenced their voices, will be taken up by later chapters in the book.

There was also the problem of The Biblical Flood. For this, Donnelly received no help from the scientists of his time. Since the day of "Atlantis and The Antediluvian World" science is discovering much about The Flood. There was indeed a flood of cata-clysmic proportions which ended the Pleistocene. However, there were also floods which heralded each retreat of the ice, although not of the cataclysmic type of the final one. For the evidences of this Donnelly made a masterly work of researching world legends but he forgot or ignored the evidence of paleontology. If he had looked into this, he might have gotten the uncomfortable feeling that the cataclysm of the Pleistocene is not yet over.

Of course, when Donnelly was researching his book, the anthropologists and archaeologists did not dream that the ice sheets with their advances and retreats took place in the time of man. But then these are the laggard sciences. Whenever man is concerned the sciences become ridiculously conservative. Perhaps this is because they are themselves emotionally involved or the pressures from an emotionally involved public limit their scope of research until facts are thrust down their throats as it were.

Take for example the case of Mt. Mazama or Crater Lake, Oregon. Geologists had just gotten out a bulletin on the subject, which I have in my possession. The bulletin insists that the great Mt. Mazama (Indian name for the Firegod) blew its top into the clouds long before the time of man - probably during the Mesozoic or very early Cenozoic (the time of Middle-life or the days of the dinosaurs, and Late-Life respectively), therefore, it was not to be considered as part of the Pleistocene Diastrophism. Then the remains of man were found. The burned mummy was sealed in a cave by the outpouring of lava from Mazama. Immediately another bulletin followed saying that the mountain erupted very late and therefore this body could not be considered too old. We are awaiting the results of carbon-dating on this one.

There are many other questions which will be taken up in turn as we try to see scientifically, just what happened in The Atlantic Ocean. However, it is true that the men of anthropology and archaeology (from the Greek words anthropos or man and ology study of, as well as archae - ancient - in this case cities), are shielded by the other scientists from the shock of new facts. This is not exactly in concern for their feelings, but due to a sort of conspiracy. As one geologist put it: "We never learn anything new from them and some are even so far behind the times that they don't believe in carbon-dating. It might upset their ivory tower you know. So when they come into the room where one of our debates is in progress, we simply postpone the arguments and discuss the weather. That is a good non-controversial subject. As a result they learn very little from us. Too bad in a way, but natural."

"How about excessive rain caused by rapid glacial retreat, or earthquakes along rifts?"

"We never discuss such things with them."

"Have you ever hinted what might happen if an ice sheet suddenly melted because of the outpourings of lava? Or if Japan which leans precariously over one of the greatest deeps on the planet, should slide in on one of her rifts?"

"Oh no! Those are strictly for us - not them."

"I should have thought the subject might naturally come up in the discussions of the Alaskan shake of 1964."

"And the tidal wave? An no. We do not discuss either rifts or tidal waves."

"No wonder they seem to pass over the eight foot drift of gravel which separates some of the ancient ruins in the Mediterranean as a normal geological occurrence"

"It wouldn't be worth an argument with them. They are still living back in"

"The eighties?"

"You said it. Remember I didn't."

"They have never discovered that over the stepping stones of exploded hypotheses, science advances?"

"Ah very well said. I must remember that."

"And they are still clinging to the theory before the theory before the last?"

"Remember you said it. I didn't," laughing mischievously.

"All this reminds me of a professor I once had named Reiber . . . He was a most inspiring person and a privilege to have known."

"Ah yes, we have all had a few like that. And it is too bad isn't it that we can count them on the fingers of one hand?"

"That is indeed all too true."

"But I interrupted you. What did he say?"

"The Bastile Mind sometimes fancies that he is a scientist. He may even have a doctorate in his specialty, which on occasions he dusts off and wears like a shining medal. Unfortunately, however, he has the type of intelligence which has come thus far and no farther. Once he has discovered an idea which his emotions tell him is favorable to the retention of all the creature-comforts that he enjoys, he grooms it, manacles and blindfolds it, and entertains it listlessly to the end of his life. Of course, he never changes his mind or reevaluates his primary ideas. His is the true Bastile Mind in which it is most difficult to get an idea into, and almost impossible to get it out."

Flying Saucers and Religious Fundamentalism

By Peter Kor

THIS IS an article about the impact flying saucers are having upon religious beliefs. It is written in response to a treatise published in the Sept. 1964 Search Magazine in which the authors comment upon the basic ideas Kor has introduced in connection with the flying saucer mystery. Some of the authors' points are well taken. Others arise from misunderstandings of what Kor has written. Intertwined with these two categories of opinion are sundry theological assumptions. By separating and evaluating these elements in their rightful contexts we will not only identify the issues involved, but will gain a valuable insight into the religious aspect of flying saucers.

To begin, a few general observations are in order. While authors Beasley and Erdmann are quick to associate Peter Kor with a supposed school of "modern rationalism" - and thereby pigeon-hole his conclusions - they are extremely reluctant to expose the nature of the belief which governs their criticisms. If we were to indulge in clichés as they do, we would say the Messrs. Beasley and Erdmann are religious fundamentalists, they believe that they are in possession of the One, True, Holy revelation as it is infallibly manifested in the Bible and unerringly interpreted through the Holy Spirit. That conflicting versions of this absolute truth are expounded by various sects does not concern them. Their understanding is correct, all others are wrong. Any Biblical interpretation which is inconsistent with the basic tenets of their belief - or any scientific findings which violate their convictions - are a-priorily wrong and/or inspired by Satan.

While the fundamentalist is perfectly willing to point out the historical forces which generated the concepts and rituals of OTHER religions, they insist that these natural laws were supernaturally suspended insofar as the giving, recording, and interpreting of the Christian revelation is concerned. New knowledge is, for the fundamentalist, irrelevant to the human condition. Everything relevant has been once-and-for-all revealed through Jesus Christ. Psychology, physics, history, mathematics, etc. - these are all interesting human diversions, but they ADD NOTHING to our basic understanding of the world. The entire existence of the fundamentalist revolves around a particular perspective of a particular holy book - a perspective which somehow satisfies the presence of an inner need.

Now it is not my purpose to ridicule fundamentalism. A man's belief is his own. However, it is pertinent to my purpose of evaluating the criticisms before us to state the theological necessities which govern the thinking of the critics involved. Since every thought, concept, or action which might conceivably conflict with the fundamentalist's convictions is a priori wrong, it is understandable that Beasley and Erdmann have seen fit to criticize Kor's flying saucer framework. That criticism is welcome. For an evaluation of it, let us now turn to the fundamental facts which underlie the framework in question.

Men are finite beings. Reality is apprehended through the awareness of men. Truth is a conceptual determination of the nature and purpose of reality. How we physically perceive reality and how we think about what we perceive serves to shape our vision of truth. The more we know; the more varied our experience; the more precise our thinking process - the more penetrating and all-inclusive will that vision be.

We find, for example, that the Biblical narrative is permeated with the Jewish and Pagan thought forms which gave birth to it. Though the synthesis we know as Christianity is unique, the elements with which it is woven are familiar and understandable. Likewise, the existential viewpoint inherent in Buddhism is part and parcel of the Oriental's way of life. It could not be otherwise, for people are the molds through which reality must pour. Should we, then, be so astonished when religious truth yields traces of how it was fashioned?

Religious experience is not restricted to fundamentalists. It is the raw phenomenon of every religious sect or mystic cult. Though the fundamentalist makes the outright assumption that all but his experiences are hallucinations or Satanic inspirations, the facts testify otherwise. The facts reveal that the same basic types of religious experience occur within every culture, but that the explanations and understandings of those types take on the characteristics of the particular cultures involved.

To illustrate, one of the most prevalent types of religious experience involves a heavenly intercessor surrounded by a blazing light. This motif repeats itself throughout Christian, Buddhist, and other records. Although the basic phenomenon is essentially the same in all of these cultures, the intercessor is identified as the heavenly Buddha by the Buddhist, as the risen Christ by the Christian, and as Gabriel by the Mohammedan.

These facts greatly disturb the fundamentalist. For he cherishes the notion that only his "truth" is truly inspired and absolutely free of all earthly error. He would have us believe that fallible men have been able to receive through experience, transmit, and interpret an infallible revelation without infringing upon its infallibility. Convictions are not facts. Beliefs are not truths. Without an objective demonstration, the fundamentalist's thesis rests upon faith. For truly the burden of proof is his. The Bible is not infallible until proven fallible (though this is easily done); indeed, the converse is true.

Perhaps the greatest innovation in Kor's saucer framework is the suggestion that the saucer phenomena originate from the same realm responsible for religious manifestations. The apparent technical connotations to the saucer saga are overtones of our scientific culture - projections, if you will, of individual and collective patterns of thought which dominate this age. This realm transcends our three dimensional world and intervenes upon us under special conditions.

Specifically, some of the contactee stories exhibit the same "intercessor motif" mentioned above. Christ or Buddha has become a spaceman and the flying chariots have been transformed into flying saucers. Whereas the Christian's vision usually deals with Biblical insights and the Kingdom of God - and the Buddhist's experience deals with the attainment of Nirvana - the contactee hears a 20th century sermon dealing with atomic bombs and the prospects of peace on earth. Each participant explains the experiences of the other in terms of his own special understanding. It is no wonder, then, that Messrs. Beasley and Erdmann explain flying saucers as products of the Devil. Unable to commit the heresy of endorsing doctrines unspecified by their source book, they have no choice but to force the raw saucer phenomena into their Christian framework as falsehoods instigated by Satan. Their understanding of the saucer saga was predetermined by their fundamentalist commitment. This is, of course, exactly what Kor's hypothesis would predict.

On page 41 of their article,

Beasley and Erdmann claim that this hypothesis actually destroys itself - they maintain that if it is applied to Kor, his ideas can be explained in terms of the "modern rationalism" which pervades scientific thought today and maintains the relativity of truth. Several points must be made here. First and foremost, the hypothesis applies to the SPECIFIC EXPLANATIONS of mystical experiences, not to the phenomenal experiences themselves. Kor is not suggesting that the experiences are subjective creations, but that the understandings generated by those experiences are organized in terms of the psychic elements which are present.

If Kor were to come forth and fill in his framework by "identifying" who the "intercessors" are; by "locating" their point of origin and purpose in intervening"; and by explaining the flying globes of light which accompany them - then, indeed, his own hypothesis would testify to the relativity of his claims. But Kor has not filled in his framework. He has testified that intercessors, flying things, a hidden realm, and a master purpose DO EXIST. But that any attempt to ABSOLUTELY KNOW the what, how, and why will fail.

So the criticism is based upon a misconception. Kor's hypothesis is not an explanation of existential frameworks per se', but of the various contents which fill those frameworks. In fact, the theory proves that the SAME basic framework has been repeated throughout history. Since our fundamentalist friends are committed to the Christian version of that framework, they naturally are unsatisfied that Kor's ideas do not give precedence to their belief.

Second, the hypothesis rests upon the FACT of similar mystical experiences within different cultural milieus. The fundamentalist is bound to invoke Satan as a moral excuse to ignore the significance of this fact. An objective appraisal cannot afford to be so intolerant. It must take the facts as they are discovered, not twist them to conform to some a-priori conviction.

Three, even the logic exhibited by Beasley and Erdmann is erroneous. For if Kor's hypothesis could be used to explain itself, its very use would prove its accuracy. Any theorem invoked to disprove itself must be true in the first place. If it wasn't true, it could never effect the proof.

Let us now move on the more specific criticisms. Our critics agree that men are never perfect in understanding - that there is always room for growth. But they do not admit the possibility of growing beyond the elements of their own belief. They quote scripture to prove the scripture, accepting the Bible as a FINAL AUTHORITY concerning the nature and purpose of existence. There is certainly nothing wrong with such an acceptance insofar as one recognizes that it is based upon faith and not proof. The basic Biblical truths "that never change" are nothing less than the existential propositions without which Messrs. Beasley and Erdmann could not live a meaningful life. That others might find meaning without recourse to these beliefs does not even dawn on them - indeed, they are so prejudiced by their own existential requirements that they would project them upon all men everywhere.

On page 42, the authors point out what they term a "contradiction" in Kor's remarks. To quote them: "In one place he argues that a person's reaction to or interpretation of mystical experiences depends on that person's conditioning, yet he also states that those who have such experiences are compelled to consider the very ideas they once regarded as absurd". Again, Beasley and Erdmann have only succeeded in destroying their own misconception. To illustrate their misunderstanding, let me point out that the explanatory conviction of Richard Shaver that physical Dero inhabit caverns in the earth was certainly revolutionary to his thinking.

But his materialistic conditioning predetermined the nature of his deductions about the strange experiences which intervened upon him. Likewise, our venture into space colors the saucer phenomena even though specific individuals might have never seriously thought in terms of life on other planets. The example given by the authors - the conversion of Paul - is another case in point. Regardless of how one explains the phenomenal vision itself, the very fact that Paul persecuted the Christians served to PSYCHOLOGICALLY PREPARE him for conversion. For the elements of that early Christian movement become imbedded in his psyche from where they could be readily projected upon any strange intervention.

The proof of Kor's perspective is in the fact that the Buddhist never "sees" or "talks" to Christ in a vision, nor does a Christian ever encounter Buddha. Each experiences in terms of his own background and cultural context. If the Christian experiences are the only true ones, we wonder why they are restricted to Christians? We wonder why a Buddhist or Moslem (knowing nothing of Christ) never encounters Christ? We wonder why a particular mystical experience never goes beyond the historical and religious perspective of the participant?

It may well be that the realm testified to by Kor's studies includes various factions which can be evaluated as "good" and "evil". I have not gone so far because it hasn't been my purpose to express my own value judgments, but only to explain the bare framework which is revealed by an objective appraisal of the evidence. That this realm contains various components of phenomena is obvious. The "voices" are not identical with the phenomenon experienced as "etheric beings" - these are apprehensions of two different components, the one manifesting itself "vocally", the other "visually". Neither are all sky phenomena necessarily the same. Silver "flying shields" and flashing discs may, indeed, be ancient and contemporary explanations for the identical component. Similarly, "flaming chariots" sound very much like glowing lights of today. But "sky crosses" are, of course, not the identical component as "flying discs" - indeed, some of these phenomena might not be related to the Hidden Realm at all.

Messrs. Beasley and Erdmann support their fundamentalism with this statement which appears on page 43: "While there are doubtless many who, like Kierkegaard, only have a blind faith, and that even in things which may seem absurd, there also are many who are led to their faith primarily because this faith is to them the most reasonable and logical outlook on life which they have been able to find". But I must hasten to point out that it is precisely because people do not agree about what is "reasonable" and "logical" which insures the relativity of existential explanations which Kor has been writing about. You can only determine what is reasonable on the basis of what you know and how you think about what you know. Is it any wonder, then, that various perspectives of the same problem yield various solutions?

The authors go on to say that fulfilled prophecies are also a means of establishing faith, and they criticize those who reject prophetic evidence on the basis of small errors and uncertainties. I must take exception to this position. If the fundamentalist did not claim infallibility, the "small errors" and "uncertainties" would be of no consequence. But if he were to admit fallibility, the fundamentalist knows that his whole belief could then be logically called into question. Once committed to infallibility, the least error and uncertainty becomes extremely significant. For small or big, ANY ERROR destroys the claim of perfection for the over-all belief itself.

Commenting upon whether or not human understanding can ever fully grasp existence, Beasley and Erdmann reply: "This may be true (that we cannot), viewed only from the standpoint of our ability to reason out or discover separate and apart from God. But. . . if God chooses to reveal to mankind something of the nature and purpose of existence and of reality, who is Kor to say that God is unable to do so? And, in view of the afore-mentioned fulfilled prophecies, who is Kor to say that God has not done so?" Our critics neatly evade the real issue here. For the question is not what God can do; but rather, how precise Man's understanding is of what God can do and has done. Who are Beasley and Erdmann to tell us, with their limited experience and understanding, that God has revealed Ultimate Knowledge in the Bible? Who are Beasley and Erdmann to assure us that Biblical errors and contradictions are as "true" and "sacred" as the evident truths in the same book? Who are Beasley and Erdmann to conclude that this Omniscient God has not some further knowledge and wisdom for this Earth? Who are Beasley and Erdmann - what with their religious bias - to convince us that their fallible human minds have PROVEN the Bible's infallibility? If God is truly omniscient, he must be capable of anything and everything. Without examining the logic of this, we are on safe ground to think that as Man GROWS in knowledge and wisdom he will gain greater insights into the nature and purpose of things. To restrict God's Total Revelation to the discontinuous "chapters" in a particular book - some of which are patently absurd - is close to true blasphemy.

A man's Idea of God is shaped by the nature and structure of his own psychic constitution. That Beasley and Erdmann believe what they do tells us more about themselves than about reality. Kor will not require the absolute endorsement of God for his perceptions. He will not claim that God is "on his side" or that the understanding put forth is final. But criticisms from those dedicated to "protect" their holy ism at all costs are of little objective value. They are statements of faith, not critical analyses.

With an amazing naivete' Beasley and Erdmann go on to discuss the "fact of the empty tomb" as "proof" of Jesus' resurrection. This is not the place to indulge in a critical examination of the sources involved. Putting aside, for the moment, what I may or may not BELIEVE about this, let us realize that the "FACT" of the empty tomb is no more than a CLAIM of same as reported in the Bible - reports, I must add, which are not consistent with one another. In the gospel of Matthew, for example, Mary Magdala was the first to the tomb where she encounters an "angel". It is important to note that Mary is never said to look into the tomb to SEE whether or not Jesus' body is there, even though the stone has been rolled away. She BELIEVES what the angel tells her and leaves the scene without first hand knowledge that Jesus had risen.

Whereas in Matthew the "angel" descended from heaven and rolled away the stone in the presence of Mary, Mark has Mary approaching the grave AFTER the stone has already been displaced. The angel descending from heaven is replaced by a youth sitting inside the tomb. He gives Mary the same message which is put in the mouth of the angel according to Matthew's version.

Luke agrees with Mark that the stone has been rolled away, but Mark's "youth" is replaced by "two men" in dazzling garments. John completely contradicts the others by testifying to no "angel" or men, and subsequent message. Mary simply sees that the stone has been rolled away. She tells Peter and "the other disciple" who investigate the tomb and find it empty. Luke knows nothing of such an investigation, commenting only that the apostles thought Mary's report was nonsense.

Though Mary Magdala is the common point between all of the accounts, more severe contradictions are encountered when we find that Matthew has "the other Mary" accompanying Magdala to the grave. Mark disagrees with this, stating that Mary of Magdala, Mary the mother of James, and Salome" approached the grave. Luke "confirms" Mark that the two Mary's were present, but he eliminates Salome and adds "Joanna." John says that only Mary was present.

These contradictions could be multiplied ad infinitum. The point is that if such outright discrepancies were to appear during a court interrogation, the witnesses would be investigated for perjury. But our believers are perfectly willing to ignore any and all contradictions to maintain their faith. The empty tomb is not a fact at all, much less a proof of the resurrection. It is a claim which is testified to only by those who already believed it when the first and only records were made. But what is more crucial: This event "to end all events" comes to us in contradictory versions. It is useless to talk about "proof" here.

As for the Jewish reference to the empty tomb, this hardly establishes it as a fact. As most scholars point out, the Jews were engaged in debating Christian claims and picked on the most vulnerable points. Seeing that the Christians obviously believed the tomb to be empty - and knowing that three or four generations (and more) later there was no chance of objective verification, they confronted believers with the possibility that Jesus' body was stolen. An accusation for which the Christians had no definite answer.

Neither is it accurate to say that the apostles were conditioned not to believe in the resurrection, thereby proving the "fact" of the resurrection. The apostles were conditioned to the hope that Jesus would "redeem Israel", and that in the "last days" there would be a resurrection of the dead. Faced with the stumbling block of a crucified Messiah in the face of this hope, it is (to the contrary) perfectly understandable that an extraordinary stimulus could trigger the resurrection belief. Was not the "risen Christ" the first fruits of the general resurrection signifying the last days?

It is important to realize that our Biblical accounts do not tell us WHAT HAPPENED, but what a small sect of people BELIEVED ABOUT WHAT HAPPENED. If we are to a-priorily believe whatever is written, then to be consistent we must accept any and all things without investigation. We must believe that the Koran and Book of Mormon are inspired because the books, themselves, say so.

We must believe that Ulysses actually encountered the Cyclops because the Odyssey tells us he did. We must accept the "fact" of "dragon people" inside the earth because there are "reports" of same. We must believe Adamski's spacemen because he has written about them.

No, this kind of blind faith will not do. We must bring independent sources to bear on the Bible (and other sources of enquiry) and apply the thought processes without which we would be mere animals. We must accumulate, study, and think. What is sanctioned as true is a reflection of conscience in the light of available evidence. Messrs. Beasley and Erdmann hardly accomplish this. They use any small fragment as a "sign" that the whole is true. The fact that Christians endured all torture is used to demonstrate the "proven fact of a risen savior". They neglect to inform us of what the Moslem's endured for their faith; of what the Indians had to survive to provide for their own political and religious freedom; and of what all minorities are faced with to preserve their cherished values.

But our critics reach the height of ridiculousness with these remarks: "This (Kor's) logic and thought can lead us to some very dangerous thinking and results. Hitler, Lenin, Marx, Attia, and others of this notorious group - and Jesus Christ were as surely inspired by this same something as each one exists." Again, the so-called "logic" tells us about Messrs. Beasley and Erdmann, not about Kor's framework. The "something" referred to is a transcendental realm within which may exist multitudes of entities. Kor has never said that the same, identical entity intervenes at all times, but only that the same realm is involved. If you prefer to believe that there are "good" and "bad" entities - and that these two categories inspired "good" and "bad" men - go right ahead. Kor has not projected (as yet) his thoughts on this matter. He has not filled in his own framework.

Page 45 contains a rather long quote attacking what the authors consider to be dangerous liberalism. Liberalism, in their minds, is any idea or concept which does not proceed from and bow down to THEIR PARTICULAR RELIGIOUS BELIEF. It is this kind of dogmatic intolerance which has been responsible for much of the blood throughout history - all of it in the name of "God" and "Righteousness". Implying that Kor is a member of this "liberal movement", the authors quote their source (why didn't they name him?) as identifying such a movement with Communist principles. We might have expected it. For we have learned that the fundamentalist - unable to cope with evidence - retreats to ridicule by innuendo. What their source neglects to report is that the early Christian community was the best example known of Communist principles in action. The small sect displayed Marx's manifesto for an Ideal Society to a tee. Of course the Christians were not atheists, but they nevertheless lived communistically. This to remind us that precise thinking is capable of making DISTINCTIONS, and resists the compulsion of the fundamentalist to lump all unbelievers (in their ism) into one Satanic Conspiracy.

Kor's framework does not include value judgments so as not to violate its objectivity. Because none are put forth does not say (as Beasley and Erdmann imply) that he has none. Values are precious. They are what men die for. Without them men would not be men. But to claim to possess the only true values is an exercise in stupidity. Such a notion eliminates even the possibility of GROWTH.

Messrs. Beasley and Erdmann claim that their particular values are endorsed by fulfilled prophecies. But their case is extremely weak when we discover that these very same prophecies, interpreted differently, were used by the Jews to justify other values and explain other historical circumstances. And every age of Christian believers has successively re-interpreted those very same prophecies in terms of their own historical and religious milieu. How does the honest fundamentalist put his conscience to sleep about these facts?

But the authors own statements qualify their criticisms. On page 46 they remark: "It is an extremely sensitive question as to what and if the interplanetary theory can be safely held in the Bible." Anything inconsistent with their understanding of Biblical religion is automatically excluded as truth. It is this type of blind opposition which has helped to erode the people's confidence in The Church, no matter what denomination it may be. True religious conviction cannot have its foundation in what a man's mind discovers to be ridiculous. Such remarks as "...although men can and do put subjective interpretations on these (Biblical) writings, the writings themselves are not subjective interpretations, but direct, inspired revelations..." are cases in point. Writing is nothing in itself. It is only when that writing is apprehended in the human mind as meaning that writing becomes something. That fundamentalists apprehend that writing differently than Catholics, and that the fundamentalists even disagree amongst themselves on many points, proves what Kor has been talking about. Namely, we approach reality from a perspective which is conditioned by our environment and experience.

In conclusion, let me say that Messrs. Beasley and Erdmann have made some good points which have made clarification possible. But, at bottom, their basic criticism is this: Kor's saucer framework strips their fundamentalist belief of the special status which their faith requires. It is axiomatic, therefore, that they must reject the framework and thereby reassert their faith. This is predictable. In contrast, the facts of mystical experience (as recorded throughout history) form the basis for the framework itself.

One crucial point must be added. Though the various expressions reveal the same fundamental existential framework, those successive expressions are not without permanent meaning. Each one provides a basic insight into the nature of things - but those insights are not exclusive of one another. This is one key to a vital SECRET which has been the basis of all Kor has written these past years. The saucer framework, itself, is a consequence of that SECRET. And, believe it or not, the ardent faith of our fundamentalist critics confirm it.

Is This a Creature From Outer Space?

By

Thomas
Knowles

IT'S THERE ALL RIGHT:
Elizabeth Templeton has dumbfounded experts because of the creature

In the background there should only have been grass and blue sky. Instead there is the outline of something that looks like a spaceman.

And now the British Ministry of Defense is investigating the sudden appearance of the stranger on film. From the angle of the picture the "spaceman" is about 7 feet tall.

The photo was snapped by Templeton - a fireman - on a lonely stretch of marsh near the Solway Firth in Westmorland, England.

The marsh overlooks an atomic works, a North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) radio-tracking base staffed by Americans and Britain's Blue Streak rocket-testing station.

There was only Templeton's wife, Ann, 52, and elder daughter, Frances, within miles when the picture of 5-year-old Elizabeth was taken.

But when the 44-year-old amateur photographer had the film processed, the "creature" was towering in the background.

Templeton, who sometimes does official photography for the fire brigade in Carlisle, where he lives, said:

"I immediately took it to the police and they were completely amazed.

"Their experts checked and double-checked but all they could tell me after a full day's investigation was that it seemed to be a man in a tight white suit about 7 or 8 feet tall and wearing protective headgear.

"But if someone like that was there, I would have seen him"

Templeton added:

"It certainly made me think. You hear so many stories of flying saucers and spacemen that there's just no logical explanation to this one.

"There was no one in front of my camera except Elizabeth.

"I have checked with the photographic firm and they tell me the film was perfect.

"The photograph was so good and clear they don't see how it can be a technical fault."

Experts all over Britain have tried to explain the picture but they can't.

The police are concerned that it happened so near to so many important bases.

Detective Superintendent Tom Oldcorn, head of the Cumberland and Westmorland Criminal Investigation Department, took a print for close study.

He told me: "It's a complete mystery.

"At first we thought it was a double exposure or some fault with the camera. But it's nothing like that.

"I don't read science fiction myself and I'm still convinced that it is a freak picture. But Mr. Templeton is no hoaxer and he says there was no one in front of his camera except for the little girl. It's very puzzling."

Templeton has received hundreds of letters from science fiction societies, ghost hunters and amateur cameramen since he took the picture early last June.

He has been back to the identical spot on the flat, sprawling marsh, and taken more photographs. But all he has seen are fish and seagulls.

"I'm baffled," he admitted.

Experts at Britain's Ministry of Defense examined Jim's camera, the exposed film and the print. A Ministry spokesman told The ENQUIRER on July 10:

"Maybe the figure is wearing a space suit or a high-altitude flying suit. Maybe it is a creature from outer space.

"We can't really say because it is not really clear enough."

OCCULT PANORAMA

By George Cardinal

LeGros

THE FOURTH dimension. There are only three dimensions that Occultism knows anything about. The Astral Plane is often called a "fourth dimension" because it interpenetrates the physical world, but it is not a dimension in the true sense of the term. The old theory of Time as a fourth dimension is wrong because Time is an illusory concept dependent upon passing states of sensation, and is wholly relative. Happy hours seem like moments while painful moments seem like hours. Man is the only entity in the cosmos who respects the illusion of Time.

The dematerialization and re-materialization of objects involves speculation on a "fourth dimension" but the phenomenon actually concerns the disintegration or dispersal of material atoms which are not lost or destroyed or even transferred to non-material planes. The air we breathe contains unseen particles of carbon, which are invisible to us because of their minute size, but under certain conditions they can be drawn together in such numbers as to become visible, and may even be used for writing materials. In this way, written messages are "precipitated" upon paper, with even the paper itself materialized out of substances floating in the air. The mysteries of apports and teleportation are explained in the same way. Living tissue, however, cannot be dematerialized without suffering destruction in the process.

Accounts of people apparently vanishing into thin air, often in full sight of others, have been fully authenticated; but we must remember that there are such things as hallucination, self-hypnosis, and astral delusions, which could easily explain many "disappearances" as well as mysterious "appearances." Our eyes can also play tricks on us. In the normal process of seeing, the eye forms an image on the retina, which is a screen on the back of the eyeball. The retina is a marvelous instrument, supplied with thousands of nerve endings all grouped together. The tip ends are provided with thousands of photo-sensitive processes which transmit impressions over the optic nerve to the brain - where the actual "seeing" is done. Thus it is quite possible to see objects (or not see them) through purely mental impressions. Normally, however, physical objects are seen because of light rays which pass from the eye to the objects and back again to the eye. We do not see the objects themselves, but the images transmitted by the eye to the brain.

Therefore, if by the use of Occult power the light rays can be caused to "bend" around a given object, passing on to the background behind it, and then back to the eye, the object will not be seen at all. In this way a person can be made to "disappear" while others are looking directly at him. This explains the "cloak of invisibility" which many adepts and magicians are believed to possess.

BLACK MAGIC IN TIBET. Tibet is a strange land of mystery and magic, of the highest as well as the most diabolical schools of Occultism. It is both the home of the Adepts of the White Lodge, and the haunt of the world's most dangerous Sorcerers whose objects are diametrically opposed to those of the Brotherhood of Compassion.

It is generally believed that during the seventh or eighth century of the Christian Era, Padma Sambhava, a noted Hindu teacher, first introduced some of the Buddhist doctrines into Tibet. Although a great improvement over the native Bon religion, they were still tainted with lower Tantrik magic, and far removed from the pure teachings of Buddha.

In his Occult Glossary, Dr. G. de Purucker writes: "The Tantras are numerous works or religious treatises teaching mystical and magical formulae. . . their tendency for long ages has been distinctly toward what in Occultism is known as sorcery or black magic.

"The origin of the Tantras unquestionably goes back to a very remote antiquity, and there seems to be little doubt that these works, or their originals, were heirlooms handed down from originally debased, or degenerate Atlantean racial offshoots. There is, of course, a certain amount of profoundly philosophical and mystical thought running through the more important tantrik works, but the tantrik worship in many cases is highly licentious and immoral."

From time to time reforms were attempted with varying success, but it was not until the fourteenth century that a very great Adept, Tsong-Khapa, appeared on the scene and purified the religious conditions by exiling some 40,000 self-seeking monks and lamas who had been commercializing Buddhism. He was one of the highest of the Eastern Occultists to work publicly in the last 2,000 years, and was a member of the ancient Himalayan Brotherhood.

Lamaism in Tibet represents the Two Paths or aspects of Occultism, with some monasteries teaching the true spiritual wisdom, and others dedicated to psychic development and outright demonology. Unfortunately for Western visitors to Tibet, it is almost invariably the latter element which they encounter because the dugpas and necromancers are constantly on the alert to snare and mislead the ignorant Occidental who ventures into their mysterious precincts.

But Tibet is still holy ground because, high in the snow-capped Himalayas, is the home of the Masters where for millions of years the elect of humanity have lived, periodically sending forth Messengers to keep alight the fires of Truth. Their retreat is secret, inaccessible to outsiders, and impregnable. Nothing man-made, including the deadliest hydrogen bomb, could ever penetrate the invisible walls and ceilings that protect it.

DREAMS. An ancient Occult record states: "The nature and function of dreams cannot be understood unless we admit the existence of an Immortal Ego in the mortal man, independent of the physical body. Dreams are often like stray pages torn from the experience-record of the deathless Mind, the dim recollection of which at the moment of waking becomes more or less distorted by the physical brain. In the thoughts of the Immortal Ego the pictures of the Past and Future are as the Present. The person upon awakening thinks that he has lived through the dream-experience, not knowing that it is the thought-actions of the True Ego which he dimly perceives. It often happens that one is conscious and knows that he is dreaming, which proves that man is a multiple being on the inner or thought plane, capable of separating himself into two or more entities, and holding a dialog in which he speaks with, through, about, and to himself."

Only the Initiate in Occult Science, with a highly trained clairvoyant faculty, can interpret dreams and visions correctly. Many dreams that we suspect of having great mystical significance are born of simple indigestion, or woven from the memory-fabric of the day's adventures. True dreams and visions are spiritual messengers from our Divine Self which dwells on its own lofty plane; and as we progress along the Path of Unfoldment, becoming more responsive to the influence of the God Within, our dream-impressions will become more pleasant and beautiful. In a certain sense, Life is a Dream, and we are the Dreamers.

Esoterically, there are seven classes of dreams: (1) Prophetic dreams, which are impressed upon the memory by the Higher Self. These are generally plain and clear - either a voice heard or the coming event foreseen. (2) Allegorical dreams, or hazy glimpses of realities caught by the brain and distorted by our fancy. These are usually only half true. (3) Dreams sent by Magicians, good or bad, by mesmerizers, or by the thoughts of very powerful minds bent on making us do their will. (4) Retrospective dreams of events belonging to past incarnations. (5) Warning dreams for others who are unable to be impressed themselves. (6) Confused dreams, the causes of which are mentioned above. (7) Dreams which are mere fancies and chaotic pictures, owing to indigestion or some mental upset.

LEMURIA. Before delving into the fabulous history of Lemuria we should point out that the life-term of a Planetary-Chain embraces seven circlings of the Life-Wave around the seven Globes, on each Globe the Monad-Host enjoying experience in the seven Root-Races, each on a continent of its own.

In the First Round our Earth-Chain and all the beings on it were ethereal. Gradually, as Rounds Two and Three were in progress, consolidation took place, and in Round Four (our present Round) Globe D (which we now inhabit) settled and hardened into what we know as Earth.

The continent of the First Root-Race was in the region of the North Pole - the "imperishable Sacred Land" which will be our home at the end of this Planetary-Chain Manvantara. The continent of the Second Root-Race was farther south, embracing part of Greenland.

Tremendous changes took place during the Third Root-Race on the continent of Lemuria, which now lies beneath the Pacific Ocean. Here the human form passed through various transformations, including the hermaphrodite or androgynous state, and finally division into the present sexes.

But the most important event in the Third Race was the coming of the Manasaputras or Lords of Mind that had graduated from humanhood to godhood on the Moon-Chain in the previous Manvantara. Three Rounds and nearly one-half of the Fourth had passed in preparation for this tremendous event - the awakening of the dormant minds of the Lemurian humanity.

It is stated in The Secret Doctrine that without their help we should still be as little children living in a day-dream. The Lords of Mind, by quickening our sleeping Manasic faculty, raised us to the state of reason and moral responsibility.

Lemuria appears to have been, in some respects, a wondrous fairyland of surpassing beauty (the "Garden of Eden" of the Old Testament) with cities of lava and stone which later expanded into unbelievable magnificence. Under the direction of Divine Rulers who incarnated among them, the Lemurians became adept at the arts and sciences, including mathematics, astronomy, and architecture. Indeed, so glorious was their civilization that the splendors of Egypt, Greece, and Rome were as nothing by comparison.

But all things are obedient to the great Law of Cycles and Periodicity, and the Third Root-Race was on the Descending Arc of increasing Materiality or involvement in Matter. Therefore, before the close of the Lemurian period the greater part of mankind had lost its earlier innocence and spiritual purity and fallen into sin and selfishness.

The descent of the Manasaputras, and their infilling with the flame of intelligence the child-like Third Race humanity, brought pain and suffering to the lower egos, but also the possibility of advancing into self-conscious spiritual selfhood through the exercise of free choice. Man, who had been a simple "nursling of Nature," was now a responsible being capable of directing his own evolution through "self-induced and self-devised efforts." What had been an irrational animal was now a potential god.

The doctrine of the Manasaputric Host is of paramount importance. In awakening our dormant minds, they did not actually incarnate in us (the average humanity), nor did they become a permanent part of our being. Nevertheless they became identified with us forevermore.

The human constitution is sevenfold, each part or principle derived from one of the seven elements of the solar system. Thus we have a Solar element, as well as a Lunar element. Our Mind or Manasic principle is, as we know, twofold. Its higher aspect (the Sun-part) will when evolved forth make of us a Solar Deva or God, while its lower aspect represents merely the Lunar element which came over with us from the Moon-Chain.

The Manasaputras, as said, were the advanced Monads from a previous Manvantara who had attained to Dhyana-Chohanship or Godhood before the Moon-Chain entered into its Pralaya. They waited in their own realms until we reached the Third Root-Race in the present Fourth Round and were ready to receive the Divine Fire of Mind.

In similar fashion we too shall become Manasaputras when our Earth-Chain reaches its end at the close of the Seventh Round (IF we run the race successfully), and it will then become our duty to quicken the sleeping minds of the humanity of the next reïmbodiment of our Planetary-Chain. Where and what is this future humanity today? The answer is that this future Monadic Host is now enjoying experience in the present beast-hierarchy just as we - as evolving Monads - were members of the beast-hierarchy of the Moon-Chain.

Each one of us was enlightened by some particular Manasaputra, and a karmic bond with that sublime being will endure forever as it pursues its own evolutionary journey through the higher kingdoms of Nature. And as it moves on, we too shall follow the ancient Pathway leading ever more inward to the Heart of the Universe, becoming with each step less personal and more compassionate, until, merging at last with the pure essence of Divinity, we find Nirvanic rest. And then, after long eternities have passed, we shall awaken, and - re-emerge as shining Gods to build the worlds anew.

The early Third Root Race possessed spiritual vision, the organ of which is the Pineal Gland or "Third Eye." But with the fall into generation the gland atrophied and receded into the middle of the head. By the end of the Fourth Root-Race, due to sex and sorcery, it had ceased to function at all. Only by a return to the purity of the early Third Race will the "Third Eye" again function. It is the loss of this spiritual faculty which prevents the remembrance of past lives. No sexually active person enjoys spiritual clairvoyance. He "sees" only with the lower, animal clairvoyance of the solar plexus chakra, and his "visions" are sporadic, confused, and largely meaningless.

ATLANTIS. The problem of Atlantis has always been a thorn in the side of Science because its archaeologists, engineers, and physicists in particular find it painful to contemplate past civilizations that outshine their own.

But if we are to respect the Esoteric Records as given in The Secret Doctrine, supported by the traditions of Antiquity, Atlantis did exist, and Lemuria before it, each in its hey-day bright with a glory of accomplishment compared to which our own is crude and primitive.

What are these "Esoteric Records"? Says The Secret Doctrine, Vol. I, pages 272-3: ". . . the system in question is no fancy of one or several isolated individuals. That it is the uninterrupted record covering thousands of generations of Seers whose respective experiences were made to test and to verify the traditions passed orally by one early race to another, of the teachings of higher and exalted beings, who watched over the childhood of humanity. . . No vision of one adept was accepted till it was checked and confirmed by the visions - so obtained as to stand as independent evidence - of other adepts, and by centuries of experience."

As one tangible proof of Atlantis we can cite the great submarine mountain range running for thousands of miles under the Atlantic Ocean and rising nine thousand feet above its bed. In the Azores the mountains penetrate the surface to great heights. They are also volcanic, and geologists note that the dredged-up lava was not crystallized under water. The mountain range appears to have been the backbone of the Atlantean continent which joined some of the Eastern and Western hemispheres.

According to an archaic Commentary often quoted from in The Secret Doctrine, there are two chief causes for the cataclysmic destruction of continents. One is the tilting of the earth from its normal position. The other is a variation in the speed of the earth's rotation. By slowing down, the "centrifugal" force is reduced, causing ocean waters in equatorial regions to fall and new lands to rise. Simultaneously, lands in more northerly and southerly latitudes are submerged. Thus, Atlantis was no chance happening, but an inherent part of orderly planetary processes obedient to Nature's rhythmic pulsation and cyclic law.

The Masters tell us that it was some eighteen million years ago that humanity graduated from the Third (Lemurian) Root-Race to the Fourth (Atlantean) Root-Race on the continent which extended over the surface of what is now the Atlantic Ocean. It was a highly important period because the Fourth Race midpoint marked one-half of the life-term of our planet, and also the closing of the door between the human and animal kingdoms. Also at this time we experienced our lowest descent into Matter, and began our ascent on the Luminous Arc of Spirit.

Unfortunately not all of mankind responded to the upward impetus of this Luminous Arc (nor do all now), and the Atlantean Race separated into parts with two distinct tendencies - those who followed the Pathway Of Compassion, and those who, persisting in their worship of Matter, descended into sorcery.

It should be mentioned that Root-Races overlap, and that our own Fifth Root-Race had its true beginning at the central point of Atlantean civilization, which was the Kali-Yuga of the Fourth Race, some four and a half million years ago. (We are now 5,000 years into our own Kali-Yuga, which lasts for 400,000 years, and the beginning of the Sixth Root-Race is already taking place.)

Our present Fifth Root-Race as a whole, will, before its close, develop Manas or Mind beyond the highest point reached by the Atlanteans, but not until the Fifth Round will Mind be fully unfolded, at which time humanity will be compelled to make a great choice between following the upward Path to Godhood (to be reached in the Seventh Root-Race of the Seventh Round on our present Globe D), or the downward path to annihilation.

It is interesting to note that we now have five senses, each developed in one of the Root-Races. The First Root-Race corresponds to hearing, the Second to touch, the Third to sight, the Fourth to taste, and the present Fifth Root-Race to smell. We will unfold two more senses in the Sixth and Seventh Races, which will be of a spiritual nature.

It was at the middle of the Fifth Sub-Race of the Fourth Race when, in keeping with cyclic law, the doom of Atlantis struck. However, it was not destroyed overnight, but sank in parts. Blavatsky mentions the sinking of the great Pacific Island Ruta 850,000 years ago, and the last island, Poseidonis, referred to by Plato, sank some 11,000 years ago in one day and one night, with its entire sorcerer population.

EASTER ISLAND. Easter Island is a remnant of Atlantis, and presents another problem to irritate Science. In The Secret Doctrine, Vol. II, page 224, we read: "The Easter Island relics are, for instance, the most astounding and eloquent memorials of the primeval giants . . . and one has but to examine the heads of the colossal statues that have remained unbroken on that island, to recognize in them at a glance the features of the type and character attributed to the Fourth Race giants."

On page 331 of the same volume we learn that most of the statues on the mysterious island "are all between 20 and 30 feet high. The statues found by Cook on Easter Island measured almost twenty-seven feet in height, and eight feet across the shoulders." And "we are told that it is after the destruction of 'Lemuria' by subterranean fires that men went on steadily decreasing in stature."

Easter Island's greatest mystery is probably the means of transportation of the huge statues (some weighing up to fifty tons!) from the sculptor's workshops inside the steep walls of the crater of the Rano Raraku volcano to their destined sites miles away. The makers of the statues and the builders of the vast platforms on which some of them originally stood have left no trace of their working methods, yet these ancient engineers performed feats which would tax the most powerful machinery of modern times to equal.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE ANTHROPOIDS. In the mysterious wastelands of the Himalayan mountain range lives a strange creature known to the natives for hundreds of years as a Yeti, Shook-pa, Kang-Mi, etc., and dubbed by Western explorers as the "Abominable Snowman" - a half-animal, half-human biped of remarkable intelligence.

The creature first attracted attention in 1887 when a British mountaineer, Col. W.A. Waddell, came upon a mystifying set of tracks on a snow field in Sikkim. He described them as seemingly the footprints of a man of gigantic size. In 1906 a noted botanist and Himalayan explorer, Henry J. Elwes, not only found a Yeti's tracks, but saw a great hair-covered biped vanishing over a ridge in the distance. In 1921, while attempting to scale Mount Everest, Lt. Col. C.K. Howard-Bury sighted what appeared to be an unclothed, hairy but human figure walking slowly across a snow field. In 1925 an Indian botanist, A.N. Tombazi, saw near his camp in Sikkim a creature that "walked upright like a man and occasionally stooped to pull up roots and herbs."

It is to be hoped that our scientists never capture the Yeti because if they do he will share the wretched fate of other anthropoid apes - public display in zoos and cruel laboratory experimentation and torture. But there is a good chance that they will fail because he apparently represents the highest development among the anthropoids and may enjoy a greater intelligence than is suspected. He is wise enough to make his home in the least accessible part of the world where contact with human beings is at a minimum.

Science still hopes to find its long-sought "missing link" between the human and animal kingdoms, ignoring what Occultism has been teaching for thousands of years - that there is no missing link. Monkeys and apes are man's descendants! As the brilliant Esotericist, Dr. Henry T. Edge, once wrote: "A special case has to be made as regards the two classes of simians, the anthropoids and the monkeys. . .they differ from other mammals in the way in which they were derived from the human stem. The early Race of mankind spoken of as being 'mindless' allied themselves with certain of the animals existing at that time, and from this union sprang a hybrid race which is the ancestry of the present monkeys."

The "early Race" was the Third Root-Race on Lemuria before Manas or Mind was awakened by the Manasaputras. On page 729, Vol. II, of The Secret Doctrine, mention is made of "the monkey's development from the Third Race Man."

Dr. Edge continues: "As to the manlike apes, their history is as follows. At a later date, during the Miocene period, when the Fourth great Race - the At-lanteans - had passed its climax, certain degenerate remnants thereof repeated the act of the 'mindless' by allying themselves with the then existing simian stock; and thus sprang the anthropoid apes. This act was, however, one of bestiality, a sin, because these humans were not mindless but endowed with self-consciousness.

"Such is the story of the origin of the apes and monkeys; and proofs of its truth are to be found in a study of the anatomical features of man and the anthropoids, which will be seen to confirm the above teachings rather than the view that man has developed from a common animal stock."

The chief anthropoid apes are the gorilla, orangutan, chimpanzee, gibbon, and the Yeti - half-human creatures with human blood in their veins, and actually the vehicles for incarnating egos of a primitive human order. They are dimly aware of their identity with mankind. Locked in cages and tortured in the vivisection chambers of medical schools, they stand as terrible symbols of man's continued bestiality and ignorance. It is a heavy Karma that those guilty of bringing them into being, and mistreating them now, will have to suffer.

Another anthropoid has apparently appeared on this continent because during the past seventy-five years many credible eyewitness accounts of a strange half-man and half-animal creature have circulated in the Pacific Northwest. And the interesting feature is that he appears to be closer to the human species than his Tibetan cousin.

In the northern tip of Vancouver Island in 1901 a Mike King saw a man-like biped "covered with reddish-brown hair" washing roots in a creek. It fled at his approach, leaving tracks which resembled a distinct human foot with unusually long, spreading toes.

In 1941 the wife of a C.P.R. section hand and her two children saw what they described as a "monster" walking in the yard near their cabin. "It walked easily erect like a man eight feet tall and its ugly face was nearly human." Tracks were found measuring 16 inches in length and 8 inches across the ball of the foot.

In October 1955 a trapper - William Roe - saw, coming out of some brush near Tete Jaune Cache in the western Rockies, a tall female creature weighing about 300 pounds. She was covered from head to foot with dark brown, silver-tipped hair, and had ears shaped like a human's. He refrained from shooting her because of her distinctly human appearance.

It may be that this strange anthropoid of our Pacific Northwest - known as the "Sasquatch" - is the representative of some Lemuro-Atlantean ancestor marooned millions of years ago when the northwestern part of our continent was a solitary island rising from the sea.

Not only did human-animal congress in the Lemurian and Atlantean Root-Races produce the monkeys and anthropoids, but subsequent unnatural unions produced other half-animal beings superior to the regular anthropoids. The Secret Doctrine, Vol. II, pages 195-6, deals with this issue.

"The Secret Doctrine teaches that the specific unity of mankind is not without exceptions even now. For there are, or rather still were a few years ago, descendants of these half-animal tribes or races, both of remote Lemurian and Lemuro-Atlantean origin. The world knows them as Tasmanians (now extinct), Australians, Andaman Islanders, etc."

In a footnote Blavatsky mentions "... a mountain tribe in China, the men and women of which are entirely covered by hair. They were the last descendants in a direct line of the semi-animal latter-day Lemurians referred to."

SECRET WORLDS OF THE U.F.O. Through all ages the strange and unknown have excited the imagination of man because he instinctively feels that earth and sky contain many unfathomed mysteries. But where can he turn for right knowledge?

When confronted by the inexplicable, the average person looks to religion, orthodox science, or government officialdom for an answer. But these bodies, having no Occult understanding, are as much in the dark as the layman. Religion is aghast at the idea of other planets being inhabited because such would upset its superstitious theologies; science refuses to consider anything that clashes with its established dogmas; and government heads are drawn from ordinary walks of life where ignorance is the order of the day. For an explanation of UFO phenomena we must look elsewhere.

Says The Secret Doctrine, Vol. I, page 149: "Where have the many attempts made by Science to bind, to connect, and define all the phenomena of organic life by mere physical and chemical manifestations, brought it to? To speculation generally - mere soap-bubbles, that burst one after the other before the men of Science were permitted to discover real facts. All this would have been avoided, and the progress of knowledge would have proceeded with gigantic strides, had only Science and its philosophy abstained from accepting hypotheses on the mere one-sided Knowledge of their Matter."

Continuing with The Secret Doctrine, Vol. I, page 133, we read: "The refusal to admit in the whole solar system of any other reasonable and intelligent beings on the human plane, than ourselves, is the greatest conceit of our age. All that science has a right to affirm, is that there are no invisible Intelligences living under the same conditions as we do. It cannot deny point-blank the possibility of there being worlds within worlds, under totally different conditions to those that constitute the nature of our world; nor can it deny that there may be a certain limited communication between some of those worlds and our own. . . To the highest, we are taught, belong the seven orders of the purely divine Spirit; to the six lower ones belong hierarchies that can occasionally be seen and heard by men. . ."

Note that Blavatsky speaks of "worlds within worlds" and "communication between some of those worlds and our own" and of "hierarchies that can occasionally be seen and heard by men."

In the light of the above, who is to say that the phenomena of UFO may not be a direct manifestation from these unknown and invisible spheres which - some, at least - are companion bodies of our own physical Earth?

And when we consider the teaching that the humanities on these higher globes are untold millions of years ahead of us in intellectual and spiritual unfoldment, is it fanciful to speculate on their having instruments, vehicles, etc. which, compared to our best, would bear the ratio of a jet plane to a wheelbarrow?

As Major Donald E. Keyhoe, USMC, Ret., - a leading spokesman for the "Flying Saucer Movement" and the most prolific writer on the subject - has stated: "Since the explosion of the first A-bomb, hundreds of officially verified reports, by pilots and other technically trained observers, have proved that intelligently controlled machines, superior to any earth-made craft, are systematically exploring our planet."

There can be absolutely no doubt that Major Keyhoe is right, and, moreover, that air-vehicles of an extra-terrestrial origin have been seen in the skies through all ages, some in recent times being observed by tens of thousands of people in various parts of the world. In several instances the populations of entire cities have watched, spellbound, while gigantic flying machines hovered at low altitudes in clear, sunlit skies.

Where do they come from? It seems very likely that they are exploratory devices from the invisible globes of our own and neighboring Planetary-Chains whose inhabitants periodically survey our Earth, "stepping down" their vibrations and the vibrations of their craft so that terrestrial phenomena may become visible to them - similar to the case of astral entities "materializing" part or all of their bodies in order to make contact with the physical plane.

There is another possibility that some of the "Flying Saucers" do have an Earth-origin. In The Secret Doctrine, Vol. I, page 426, we learn that from the Atlanteans our early Fifth Root-Race received valuable instruction. "It is from them that they learnt aeronautics, Viwan Vidya (the 'knowledge of flying in air-vehicles') and, therefore, their great arts of meteorography and meteorology. It is from them, again, that the Aryans inherited their most valuable science of the hidden virtues of precious and other stones, of chemistry, or rather alchemy, of mineralogy, geology, physics and astronomy."

In the Commentary which follows (page 428) we read about the use of flying machines at the time of the destruction of Atlantis (four and a half million years ago) when "the nations that were led away, were as thick as the stars of the milky way."

The "Secret of the Saucers" is one of the many mysteries and wonders that lie buried in the archaic Past. In The Secret Doctrine, Vol. II, page 430, we read: "If modern masters are so much in advance of the old ones, why do they not restore to us the lost arts of our postdiluvian forefathers? Why do they not give us the unfading colours of Luxor - the Tyrian purple; the bright vermilion and the dazzling blue which decorate the walls of this place, and are as bright as on the first day of their application? The indestructible cement of the pyramids and of the ancient aquaducts; the Damascus blade, which can be turned like a cork-screw in its scabbard without breaking; the gorgeous, unparalleled tints and beams in the windows of ancient cathedrals; and the secret of the true malleable glass?"

THE VAMPIRE MOON. According to the teachings of Occultism, our space-hungry scientists are promised some embarrassing surprises when, if ever, they reach the Moon - a dead kamma-rupic body, from which all life has fled, except a chemical and quasi-physiological activity of the molecules. Although of astral substance, we see it because our Globe D of the present Earth-Chain is one sub-place higher than Globe D of the Moon-Chain.

The Secret Doctrine teaches that the Moon is a "shell" left behind by our Earth-Chain at its last pralaya. In Vol. I, pages 155-6, we read about "the Moon (our Satellite) pouring forth into the lowest globe of our planetary ring - Globe D, our Earth - all its life, energy and powers; and, having transferred them to a new center becoming virtually a dead planet, in which rotation has almost ceased since the birth of our globe. . .Constantly vampirized by her child, she revenges herself on it by soaking it through and through with the nefarious, invisible, and poisonous influences which emanate from the occult side of her nature.

"For she is a dead, yet a living body. The particles of her decaying corpse are full of active and destructive life, although the body which they had informed is soulless and lifeless. . .And like all ghouls and vampires, the moon is the friend of sorcerers and the foe of the unwary. From the archaic aeons and the later times of the witches of Thessaly, down to some of the present tantrikas of Bengal, her nature and properties were known to every Occultist, but have remained a closed book to physicists."

It is well known that moonlight has a pernicious influence; and science will yet discover that Eastern Occultists had more real information about the genuine character of our treacherous satellite than all the Western astronomers with their telescopes.

The Moon, being our former home, has an intimate relationship with man and many terrestrial conditions. Its influence upon the tides, plant life, and the cycles of human gestation and disease, are well known. Less well known are its effects upon certain emotional and psychological natures. At the time of Full Moon persons suffering from psycho-neuroses often have violent flare-ups, and mediums, lycanthropes, and sorcerers find it easier to succeed in their nefarious activities. The Moon is disintegrating, and will finally disappear from the heavens. It can't happen too soon.

SEX AND OCCULT SCIENCE.
The Secret Doctrine claims for man a polygenetic origin, followed by a variety of modes of procreation before he "desecrated his human dignity by putting himself physically on the level of an animal." - Vol. II, page 187 - and fell into the animal method of reproduction.

To understand WHY this happened, we must begin by stating that the human Egos did not all start equal on this planet, but were of various degrees of unfoldment in their last births on the Moon-Chain. The history of Mankind in its present sexual form goes back about 18 million years to the middle of the Third Root-Race on the continent of Lemuria. At that time the principle of Manas or Mind began to operate. Until then, man was an empty shell, the product of two streams of evolution: the Monadic-Spiritual and the Vital-Astral-Physical.

With the awakening of Mind at the midpoint of the Lemurian Root-Race, a third stream of evolution was added to the Monadic and the Material. Until then, man was a mindless animal "over-shadowed" by the Spiritual essence. He was unaware of his Divine Origin because Mind was not active to serve as the link between Spirit and Matter. The Manasic stream conferred self-consciousness, reason, and moral responsibility.

It should be remembered at this point of our argument that the early Sub-Races of the Third Root-Race evolved by sexless creative instinct an "intermediate race" in which the higher Dhyan Chohans incarnated. They represented the full flowering of the Mind principle. A second class of Egos did not incarnate fully at once, but waited, projecting only a "spark" of Mind; and it is these who constitute the average humanity today.

A third class of Egos deferred incarnation until the Fourth or Atlantean Root-Race, in which the worst sexual Karma was made because the Atlanteans renewed the "Sin of the Mindless" (see the section on the Anthropoid Apes) with full knowledge and responsibility. The Secret Doctrine, Vol. II, page 228, states: "As to those 'Sons of Wisdom' who had 'deferred' their incarnation till the Fourth Race, which was already stained (physiologically) with sin and impurity, they produced a terrible cause, the Karmic result of which weighs on them to this day. It was produced in themselves, and they became the carriers of that seed of impurity for aeons to come, because the bodies they had to inform had become defiled through their own procrastination."

We are now in the Fifth Root-Race of the Fourth Round. By the middle of the Sixth Root-Race, men and women as separate sexes will exist no longer, and would not today if we had heeded the warning of the Gods in the Third (Lemurian) Root-Race when we followed the example of the beasts. The sexless form of reproduction intended by Nature for man - will be reattained, as said, in the Sixth Root-Race. It should have continued from the Third, through the Fourth, and into our present Fifth; and the sooner we get back to it the better.

The Chela and Master represent the first step toward that way of life, in keeping with Nature's true plan for humanity, and AB-SOLUTE CHASTITY is a major requirement. As we approach this ideal state, Nature will gladly make the procreative readjustment in the right direction just as she reluctantly made it in the wrong direction in Lemuria when we followed the example of the beasts, forced her hand, and had our fall.

On page 197, Vol. II, The Secret Doctrine, we read: "The Third Race mankind is the most mysterious of all the hitherto developed five Races. The mystery of the 'How' of the generation of the distinct sexes must, of course, be very obscure here, as it is the business of an embryologist and a specialist, the present work giving only faint outlines of the process. But it is evident that the units of the Third Race humanity began to separate in their pre-natal shells, or egos, and to issue out of them as distinct male and female babes, ages after the appearance of its early progenitors."

We now deal with a Blavatsky quotation upon which our whole argument rests. We believe that a Karmic "X-factor" operated in Lemuria when "male and female babes" began issuing out of the eggs and thus establishing a humanity committed to reproduction by sexual union. The Secret Doctrine, Vol. II, page 262, states: "...it is the speechless animal that first started sexual connection, having been the first to separate into males and females. Nor was it intended by nature that man should follow the bestial example." (Italics ours.)

We do not think that the cleverest sophist could twist the meaning of that last sentence into anything other than what is clearly stated: that "sexual connection" was not "intended by Nature" to be man's method of reproduction. Therefore it is idle to claim that the bestial form was "ordained by God" or any such nonsense. It was definitely NOT THE INTENDED METHOD FOR MAN. And still it has existed for some 18 million years. Why? That is the question which we now intend to answer.

On pages 177 and 178, Vol. II, The Secret Doctrine, Blavatsky writes at length regarding the "polyps" (invertebrate animals - corals, jelly-fishes, sea anemones, etc.) which pass alternately from gemmation (budding) into the sexual form of reproduction. "Why not the primitive human polyp?" she asks. "This striking fact may assist many to understand that a form may be evolved - as in the sexual Lemurians from Hermaphrodite parentage - quite unlike its immediate progenitors." And then she drops a hint which we believe is the KEY to the separation of the sexes: "It is, moreover, unquestionable, that in the case of human incarnations, the law of Karma, racial or individual, overrides the subordinate tendencies of 'Heredity,' its servant." (Italics ours.)

In other words, as we interpret her lines, the Egos informing the Lemurian Third Race bodies carried with them a Karma from the Past - a Karma of animal lust which forced a shift or switch-over from the original Hermaphrodite state, in which sexual union was impossible, to that of male and female, which accommodated it ideally.

Thus were the "subordinate tendencies of 'Heredity' "- obtaining with the Third Race - overridden (as Blavatsky explains it) by "the law of Karma" in the case of "human incarnations." What other conclusion can we possibly draw than that the Egos of the Third Root-Race - previously embodied on the Moon-Chain - had there created a Karma of bestiality which came to fruition in Lemuria, interferred with Nature's INTENDED PLAN for human procreation, and brought about the separation of the sexes so that the Karma could be expended?

In the coming Sixth Root-Race we shall once more inhabit bodies truly representative of the human hierarchy, and the present sex problem will be no more. Until then, let us try to respect each other as spiritual beings, and rise above the delusion of "male and female."

THE OCCULT VIEW OF INTEGRATION

By Gale Murray

IN OUR ERA as in so many previous there is a great deal of conflict. Eastern passivity vs. Western aggressiveness, democracy vs. communism, the "Black" races against the "White" races, etc. All during the time of recorded history these same conflicts or their variations have existed.

In former times, however, the knowledge of these conflicts was held only by a minority. Now for the first time as a result of mass communication virtually everyone in the world knows of the ideological and economic war being fought today. As with all advancements, there are both good and bad results of such widespread (mis) information. On the negative side you have; fear, mass hysteria, confusion, and a readiness to follow any self styled saviour who promises a better life. On the brighter side of things the solution to a lot of these problems might lie in the fact that so many people, being aware of so much more than in former times, are in a position to do something constructive towards their solution. Now we must all assume the responsibility for things that were once "that fellows job".

The specific problem that I wish to deal with here is the one of integration. Those of us who study the Occult philosophy should have a ready answer when asked for some light on the subject. But do we? Virtually all of the various Occult organizations and systems proclaim the idea of universal brotherhood. But at the same time we are taught that there are younger brothers as well as the Elder ones. That way it is practical.

Our country has, however, been preaching the doctrine of both brotherhoods which makes sense, and equality, which not only makes no sense but in practice cannot, does not, and will not ever exist; because equality means identity, and there are no two things alike on this earth. We as good Americans have been asked to believe something that every thing in our lives proves to the contrary. Most of us wish to do the right thing but in order to do so, we must have a clear idea of what to do and why. The result of trying to perpetuate and blend two very different ideals has resulted in a lot of confusion for all concerned.

The average person, when asked, will answer (on the surface), "Yes the Negro is my brother and my equal"; not because this is what he thinks but because this is what he as a good American is supposed to think. Thus it is said with tongue in cheek. Because when he is asked to put this brotherhood into practice, we all know what happens most of the time. We say and approve one thing when we believe and practice another. That is why I shall try and define the situation somewhat and show how in the practice of true brotherhood there need not be any conflicts.

In some of the Occult doctrines the theory of root races, sub-races etc. is advanced. These theories may be correct and practical or they might not be. But even to those who have not studied the question of race from the Occult point of view is very apparent. There are differences in the various races that go beyond the color of skin, the type of hair, slant of eyes etc. There are races that are, on the whole emotionally centered, and those that are in the majority, mentally centered, and those (few that they may be) that are spiritually centered. This is likely to be most apparent in the native land of that particular race or group, because here in America, culture and education tend to obliterate those distinct traits and practices that once marked someone as belonging to a particular group or tribe. But even though these traits seem to have disappeared on the surface, have they really?

We generally postulate that the mind works through the physical brain. If this is so then the type of body and brain that the individual has would have a lot to do with the type of person they are and the extent of development of their emotional, mental, and spiritual faculties. Some observation will show that the majority of the Negro races are emotionally centered, while many of the Teutonic races are mentally centered. The white man cannot understand the Negro's fondness for the things of the earth, love of a rather primitive type of music and dance and a religion that is on the whole rather escapist. Many Negroes on the other hand cannot understand the white man's concern for rockets, skyscrapers and a form of "civilization" that seems mainly conducive to mental breakdowns.

At the same time, however, the Negro sees the new cars, houses, the many gadgets, and generally useless possessions as Progress and wants his share, which he is entitled to as the just fruits of his labor.

One of the keys to the fact that so many of the members of the Negro race being disliked is because they are emotionally centered. When we study the various planes of existence, the lower ones are generally classified thus; mental, emotional, vital (etheric), and physical. The fact that we place the mental plane above the emotional shows that it is generally supposed to be more advanced, and therefore more (superior) important than the emotional plane. The idea of the "soul" of the Negro will thus occupy an inferior place when compared with the abstract thought of the white races. Since the product is thought inferior, so will the person or group producing it be thought also. Yet at the same time it must be remembered that "above and below" are only terms and that in reality the different planes co-exist and interpenetrate one another, thus producing the whole, whether it is a personality or a nation. Sometimes the emphasis is on one plane, at other times on another. But generally there is one plane that most of us are centered on, and live our lives through.

The point I wish to make is this; just as in our lives we live in three kinds of time, past, present and future, so we also live in three conditions, the actual, the potential, and the ideal. In our family units we do not despise those younger brothers and sisters that we may have, because they are young. We know that though they are younger than we, they are potentially as advanced or even more so than we are.

Could not this also be considered with a view towards the treatment of the Negro? Many thousands of that race have proved their capabilities, and have eagerly joined the ranks of modern day man. But there are hundreds of thousands of my race who just are not ready to prepare for the scientific and technical training that would assure them a place in this system. The fact that many in my race are not as evolved as those in the white race does not infer that they are in any way less human, or that they do not belong. In a sense they should have as much of a chance, if not more, because they represent the future.

On the question of that method of education that would consider the different types of people and their needs, there arises this question, of how far can the actual be sacrificed for that which is to come? It will not do any good to send the children from the economically depressed areas to the schools in the middle class neighborhoods, because in the long run both sides will suffer and there won't be any progress. The only way this could be done is on the basis of intelligence and ability. There must be one type of school for some children and some for another type. But these schools should not be based on anything but the ability of the individual. In this way everyone would be placed where they would get what they need the most. I know that you cannot suppress the actual for the unfulfilled potential, yet at the same time the abilities of those who are potential must be developed to fulfill its place in the struggle towards the ideal. Each has its necessary and proper place on this earth, and each must exist beside the other. And even if it means that a little extra help be given them it must not be forgotten that the outcasts of today are the leaders of tomorrow. When the egos that exist in the bodies of the negro race today take incarnation sometime in the future, will it be as a warlike race doomed to universal destruction because those in power today bequeathed to them a heritage of hate?

THE GATHERING STORM!!

"IT IS LIKE WRITING WITH LIGHTNING . . . IT IS SO TERRIBLY TRUE!"

"UNITY" - THEN ARMAGEDDON? You have heard countless dissertations and explanations and forgot them all, but here is one you will NEVER forget - and possibly see! Is there a PATTERN FOR WORLD CONQUEST and a MASTER PLAN for the DOMINATION and ENSLAVEMENT of the world? Is this the TWILIGHT HOUR of the human race?

A WORLD WIDE HOLOCAUST IS COMING!

NOTHING has EVER been so CERTAIN since the dawn of CREATION. Deep deep down in the silence of your innermost being you can feel it - even the very elements proclaim it! WE STAND ON THE VERY BRINK OF A UNIVERSAL CATASTROPHE; a hellish holocaust that staggers the imagination. This day was not foreordained but is being BROUGHT TO PASS. We fought one war heralded to "make the world safe for democracy". WHO or WHAT will this total war be fought to "make the world SAFE for"?

Here is a 70,000-word U.S. Copyrighted book that dares tell you WHO and WHAT! Within its pages, we assure you, you can find ALL the answers, simple as ABC and as crystal-clear as the noonday sun!

If you have thought we were overly enthusiastic about the book (we KNOW what it contains!) then go with us to our bulging files and read a few of the unsolicited spontaneous testimonials we receive.

"A friend sent me a copy . . . which has me spellbound!" - Escindido, Calif.

"It struck me with sledgehammer force. I cannot find superlatives to describe it. Words fail me!" - Montreal, Canada.

"The most astounding book I have ever read. Just can't put it down!" - Munhall, Pa.

"When I began reading it I could not stop until I had finished it. For 70 years I have been writing but I take off my hat to you. WHAT A BOOK! A hundred million people should read it." - An aged author, Sebring, Fla.

"All I can say thus far about the book, until I fully catch my breath, is WOW! You offer for $1.00 information that could well reform the world and its peoples. Thank you for writing what you have, and for my privilege of reading it." - Brooklyn, N.Y.

"Never in my life have I spent a dollar so well! I cannot put into words my estimate of so fine and courageous a book." - New Lexington, Ohio.

"Terrific! Send this next one Air Mail!" - Portland, Oregon.

"It takes possession of one's mind; all other thoughts are crowded out. It is indeed a stirring experience!" - Portland, Ore.

"Yours is the best; full of impact, forceful, and pulls no punches. Most books walk softly in Truths - your book ROARS!" - Worcester, Mass.

"It knocked the wind out of me. It's packed with T.N.T.!" - Granby, Canada.

"It surely is the most enlightening book I have ever read. Is it printed in German?" - Zion, Ill.

"You certainly have an Atomic and Hydrogen bomb all tied up in one package!" - Lompoc, Calif.

ALL MEN ARE EQUALS IN THE GRAVE - ONLY!

By E. Blanche Pritchett

"Some must follow and some must lead, though all are made of clay." - Longfellow

IT IS WRITTEN that; "All things are equal under GOD."

I have no dispute with this axiom of long endurance. I do, however, have a real king-sized dispute with the oft seen interpretations of this ancient proverb.

In duplicating the words, as written, it seems to me that we should begin sometime to see that "all things" as stated do not include human-kind. I can readily buy the idea that all things may be equal, for they have the same components as all other things, basically. This would make drop of water equal to the ocean and the grain of sand equal to the beach. This I can see and agree with.

The connotation which goes into the mis-used scripture which is quoted above, seems to stress that all men are created equal, and that is not so, even though we have a constitution in the United States which makes such a declaration.

There is no equality in mankind, and there never has been even from the foundations of the earth. Man, if he is an expression of the Supreme Being, tells us that our God is both sane and insane, for man is both sane and insane. We see man as both loving and hating his own kind, which makes God both a loving and hating God. Man is lustful, greedy, covetuous, and man is generous, passionless, ethical. This fact states then that out in the realms of the Supreme Being we would find a God with all of the same qualities and attributes. I SAY NO!

Man is not equal to all of his fellows in intelligence of sensitivity. Man is not equal to his own kind in his moral life or his ethical life. There are no two human beings who are exactly equal in one area, let alone all areas of living or being.

It is only necessary to observe the human race and one will notice very quickly that human beings have a way of placing themselves upon certain levels or states of being. There are those who seek to serve the ones to whom they assign superiority; there are those who choose to be led. There are those who KNOW and those who can merely believe what the KNOWER tells them of what he or she KNOWS. There are those who are highly creative in many areas and they can often keep many people busy duplicating their rate of creation.

Everywhere we look we find people stepping aside for other people as they grant superiority of ability, intelligence, and creativity. It is not that the great ones among men seek such assignations; nor do they care very much for the oft-times expressed worship and adoration offered to them by masses of human beings. It's not the great ones among men or women who seek to be admired. It is only the exhibitionist who seeks admiration and fame and they seek it in order to establish themselves in that position with the many who will accept such apparencies. It is not the Great one among human beings who make themselves spectacular or publicized broadly. As a matter of fact, they actually shun such attention for it is of no real value to them but rather tends to recruit them into the brotherhood which all celebrities belong to.

Where the celebrity is a hypocritical personality, the Great Ones are frank and are not given to social graces if it requires that they assume to be untrue to themselves. A celebrity MUST be socially acceptable and therefore cannot often be frank, honest, or true to themselves. Flattery and untruths fill the minds and thoughts of the celebrity as they eagerly reach for every crumb of it that they can grab from the table of the host of lies. They become obsessed with a need to be noticed and admired, so much so that almost every thing that they do is to hide the real person that they are, and manifest what they wish for others to believe that they are.

In the field of study into human behavior, it can be seen that among human beings, the ones who have superiority complexes are usually of vain personalities; whereas the ones with inferiority complexes are very often perfectionists who do not believe that they ever achieve anything of true worth. Neither condition is optimum or even, for that matter, intelligent, for neither state is honest. Both are unable to duplicate in their own minds what their actual state is, they believe something of themselves which does not truly exist.

There is another very good stable datum which can be used in the observation of human beings and that is; acceptance levels. One will find that usually the persons who are given to higher intelligence and creative ability are able to have much more beauty in their lives for they are more able to notice beauty. The slothful and dim-witted among the people either put on a front or go into squallor unable to have the front or notice the squallor, whichever the case may be.

All over the country today we hear the shout, "we want freedom". This is another great big LIE. Those who shout and make the most noise are actually fleeing from the freedom that they have had. They were not able to bring themselves into areas of living simply because it is not within their ability to do so. They have been free to acquire education, careers, and make of themselves whatever they were capable of making of themselves. No, they would rather blame someone else for their own lack of inner sensitivity or drive to better themselves. Instead they play the role of the martyr who has been long-suffering and has been denied the rights which would permit advancement and development. This is absolutely ridiculous!

This planet has four basic kinds of people and they are found in all races, all creeds, all religions, all colors, all nations. Those four basic classes are the Creators, the thinkers, the traders, and the workers.

The Creators are the artists, composers, authors, designers, inventors, the producer of hand-crafts and other similar skills, the practitioners of the arts, and the executives; from who's creativity millions benefit.

The thinkers are the philosophers, the religionists, the commercial giants and tycoons, the militarists, the politicians, and the public relations and advertising experts, and the leaders among human beings, as well as the scientists.

The traders are the merchants, the business men and women, the many people who engage in some service in order to receive financial benefit, the broker, banker, the news and other communication media who sell space or time in exchange for money, the teachers who teach for pay, and those persons who built the organizations which permit the thinkers to prosper.

The workers are the laboring class, those who serve, or perform services for their fellows; those who build the buildings and make the roads; those who string the cables of communications systems, and fight the wars. They work in all areas and without them the trades would not be possible, there would be no leader for there would be none to lead.

We can see that in each of the above classes of human beings there are both the righteous and the criminal, the sane and the insane. There are also the criminally sane and the criminally insane and all of the shades of gray between the two states. There are the righteously sane and the righteously insane and all of the gradient states between those two conditions.

It would be perfectly safe to venture the hypothetical proposition that if one were to take all of the wealth of the world which is held by a small percentage of the world's population, and distribute it evenly among the people, that within a very short time, those who had it in the first place would again have it.

It would also be very safe to venture the idea that: If human beings ceased their contributions to religious organizations, political organization, and research organizations, that the ills of man, or politics, and of religion would soon vanish from the face of the earth. For it can be seen that such parasitic organizations create cures which later become the diseases of mind, body and spirit.

Human kind is a great study of paradoxes and complexities and they are very definitely not equal.

There is a way to make all men equal though, and there is an effort abroad on this planet NOW to reach this goal.

The way that I refer to is to reduce human beings to the level of "things" so it can then be said truthfully that "all things are equal under GOD".

The only true equalizer that is possible is that factor which reduces the state of human beings making them objects or particles. I believe the answer lies in Nuclear war, which will reduce everything to equal states of being.

Human beings are miracles of differentiation and therefore there is no comparison by which equality can be truly measured or declared. When this is understood, then each person can assume their true state and their true role in the game of life and peace is then possible.

Once again, I disliked being the bearer of ill tidings (dateline Aug. 3, 1964 for November issue of Search) in respect to the great statesman whose passing caused royalty to Mourn. I feel that perhaps this was Mr. Churchill's greatest personal challenge, and thus, his greatest victory, for I know he has surely attained immortality.

I feel, too, that there shall again be anxiety and sadness around the Royal family, and it would seem that for a time their lives will be somewhat on the topsy-turvy side. However, it would seem that many lives will hold similiar situations, as there seems to be a general air of uneasiness and the unlooked-for unexpected. However, by being on your toes, I feel that this period shall be passed through in a much better fashion than what would be anticipated - especially rather than to jumping to hasty decisions or conclusions, one would take sufficient time for consideration, and in so doing, be guided accordingly.

Surprising peace offer seems to come from the East, and there seems to be several meetings which shall prove to be quite encouraging, when due to the rashness of one man, these meetings shall end quite abruptly. However I would say, that due to several meetings having been accomplished, this is on the favorable and optimistic side.

I seem to feel that there will be news of a much talked about vehicle being on the market - and while still on the expensive side - its being put on the market should open a new field of enterprise. I felt perhaps difficulties in the field of stabilization of this craft.

More and more people seem to look towards country living, and there will be, as a result, a bigger volume of turnover in farm lands. Many of these people who do make the move shall actually work the land with surprisingly good results.

The subject of 'water' will again be in the news; several new projects for the establishing of water conservation in 'dry areas' will be delved into and I feel at least two of these will be started. Since clean water is important to life, it is most imperative that these be given the necessary attention.

I feel, too, that a one time great of comedy will be in the news.

In closing, I would like to leave you with this thought, another meditation from Enchanted Acres. "I now call upon Divine Love to give me strength to meet my daily tasks, and to bless the serenity which springs within my soul."

DAHO FALLS, Idaho, June 5 - We have received No.'s A-9, 11 and 12 of HIDDEN WORLD. If we may, we should like to offer some comments.

We would like to buy every Palmer publication as soon as it comes out. Because of our search, however, we resist the impulse to do so - which may sound strange, especially to RAP; so let's explain: We are involved in a search for the answers to certain burning questions - just as RAP and most of his readers and contributors are - and there is no individual in the world who can GIVE us the complete answer to ANY of these questions. Even the most thoroughly formally learned thinker is still only searching. While we MAY contribute each to the others personal search, there is always the peril of taking the other's "conclusions" as The Answer. He or she may seem to have applied more thought or research on a subject and we may be inclined therefore to accept their word as Gospel - thus putting a cork, so to speak, in our own bottle of curiosity.

The most valuable answers you can gain to such abstract questions as we deal with in SEARCH are the ones you achieve after "thinking it out" for yourself and THEN checking with the conclusions of others. If our "conclusions" happen independently to parallel those of others whose minds we hadn't previously contacted, then we must be that much closer to the truth.

This is why we haven't yet purchased our copy of OAH SPE. From sneak previews we've been given we suspect certain similarities in Newbrough's approach to The Answer - to certain basic concepts - with our own. We say this because in the past, upon receiving other books that RAP publishes, we found we had been making several statements in Prying which must have sounded to the reader like an echo of these. For the same reason, we had been resisting the temptation to purchase Brinsley Le Poer Trench's MEN AMONG MANKIND. But now some unknown friend has made us a gift of a copy of this intriguing book - for which we say thank you! - but, sure enough, it was about to happen again; about four and a half sheets of what we had prepared for these pages would have sounded like an echo of Mr. Poer Trench.

(Tell us, has EVERYTHING we've reported in this series been reported before?!)

We wouldn't have missed any of the series for the world - hidden or otherwise! But we do feel sorry for Mr. Shaver; he must be a very unhappy soul, indeed. Perhaps the reason we developed an empathetic interest in this gentleman is that when we first read his writings we were immediately impressed by its similarity to that of a person we'd known since childhood and hadn't heard hide nor hair of in over a decade. We wondered: could Shaver actually be C.R.H. using a pseudonym? But a little chronologizing impossified it. Until we saw the next HIDDEN WORLD, which carried a photo of Shaver, and, by Jupiter! he's a dead ringer for C.R.H. But we were still in touch with the latter when RAP first started publishing Shaver in AMAZING. So it still can't be... or can it?

Nonetheless, we feel behooved to speak to Mr. Shaver as we would an old friend. In your writings, Dick, you're trying to say the unsayable - do the un-doable. It's as useless as standing up and shaking your fist in the face of God. The only way to defeat the "dero", as you term them, is to IGNORE them: direct your awareness UPWARD... instead of downward, toward the "caverns."

This is what we do, and as a result we are impregnable to their most powerful "weapons". In fact, we hereby openly challenge the dero to make themselves manifest to us, to face us eye-to-eye with their best weapons, and we DARE them to try and conquer our mind or take anything from us!

You have been shouting your convictions to the world, Dick, and the "Shaver Mystery" now exists and will for posterity - as a catalyst for future rumination; but our advice to you now is that you start looking out for No. 1, for that's all you can do more in this matter - and no one else in the world will do it for you. You have been your own worst enemy. . . doing more harm to yourself than the dero ever could. You CAN be your own best friend.

We are unshakeably happy, even when external things seem to "go wrong", so that it may seem we have absolutely no reason - or right! - to be happy. No, we're not under the influence of any "stim-ray" or anything like it: no one is taking anything from us - except Uncle Sam, and what he takes only amounts to so much scrap paper as far as we're concerned! We are not blind or naive, Dick, and we are aware that this world and its society are no Utopia - that it is, in fact, quite rotten under the surface, and that on the surface we are at the mercy of the sun's rays which both give and take life. But one can only do so much, and then must look to himself and his loved ones.

Society could end today (unless by all-pervading contamination) and we are so prepared - externally and internally - that we could continue life without any drastic change in our basic pattern. Yes, long ago we said to ourselves: "Alright, LET the world go hang itself; we will mind our own garden."

YOU know what's going on, Dick, and you've tried to tell others; now you'd better mind YOUR own garden. This ranting and raving will only get you ulcers - if it hasn't already.

Our answer to you, Dick, we believe may be summed up in these words:

EACH PERSON MUST DEAL WITH HIS OWN "DERO" IN HIS OWN WAY.

In the Fall, '63 H.W. we find Rev. Chief Sequoyah's article, America's Mysterious Race of Giants, particularly interesting as we've been somewhat absorbed with this subject ourselves. We too, you may remember, have been assured by "authorities" that no evidence has ever been uncovered that any race of giants ever existed on the American continent, only individual victims of giantism, while at the same time we have seen much evidence to the contrary. But even if this evidence didn't exist, why is it any more unlikely that a tribe of giants should have existed in America than that they DO exist today in Africa. These certainly aren't victims of any glandular malfunction; and they - much like those of this hemisphere described by Dr. Sequoyah - are powerful, agile, intelligent, and looked upon by other, normal sized tribes with the same superstitious awe with which the normal American Indians looked upon "our" giants.

Again we wonder if those huge man-like creatures often seen in the wild areas of the American Northwest might be remnants of this giant race which to the prehistoric Indians apparently was quite real.

(Incidentally, Soviet Prof. Boris Porshnev believes the "abominable snowmen" so often seen in the Eurasian mountains may be survivors of the Neanderthal race which lived 30 to 60 thousand years ago. SCIENCE DIGEST, May, '64.)

RAP, whatever happened to No. A-10 of HIDDEN WORLD? Maybe you've explained somewhere in an editorial why this break in the series, but we don't recall it. If A-10 WAS published and you're simply sold out, we'd appreciate receiving a copy of this from any reader who may have one and be willing to sell it for the original price. We intend to bind, or have bound, all the HIDDEN WORLDS under permanent cover (also MYSTIC, SEARCH and FLYING SAUCERS). Perhaps our grandchildren will not have the chance we have to investigate unknown - and often forbidden - matters. We hope they will be even more free to do so than we are; but - just in case - we want them to have access to these writings.

Our grandparents were pioneers of the physical world; today there is little place left in this world for physical pioneering. Our grandchildren may refer to us as MENTAL pioneers - for which, in their day, there may be little if any place left. . .

Neely's Ranch, Cliff Lake, Montana, May 31, '64 - The following will be based on notes made at this time and place, from ICL, a fishing guest here.

"I was particularly interested in your story about the haunted parlor organ. I know that the spirits of persons who have passed on may retain an earthly attachment for objects they loved while alive.

"In 1954 we bought a ranch up in the northern part of the state and in the back yard there was a small playground where the former owner's children used to play. There was something particularly melancholy about this little, abandoned area with its sandpile, broken swing and rusted see-saw, and, having no children of our own, we just left it as the little ones who had been there before us had left it. We didn't know it at the time, but one of them had died in an auto accident about two years previously, 8 year old Maxie, who with her younger brother Martie, had been the last children to have played in what was now our back yard - their parents having sold the ranch shortly after the accident (we were the second owners since then).

"Neither one of us are overly imaginative or ever had had any supernatural experiences or put much belief in such things. But the only way we can explain what happened while we lived there is to admit that such things must be."

Her story continues:

We had lived there almost a year before we got settled down enough to start looking around at our new home and really enjoying it. It may have been going on all that while, but it wasn't till then that I started paying particular notice to the squeaking sound that could be heard coming from the backyard at night. It began annoying me when I tried to sleep. One night I said to my husband, "Hal, what is that squeaking out there? It's been keeping me awake."

"Just the last couple of nights. I've probably been too tired before to notice it."

Next morning Hal tried to find the cause of the squeaking but he couldn't find it. Then later in the day we had some visitors from town and while we entertained them in the house, their two children played in the yard. Now suddenly I heard the same noise from out back that had been keeping me awake. I didn't say anything, but I went to the window and looked out to where the children were playing. They were riding on the see-saw and it was the cause of the disturbing squeak.

When our visitors had gone, I said to Hal, "Didn't you try the see-saw this morning? That's what's been squeaking at night."

"Oh really?" he said. "I didn't think it could be that, I'll put some oil on it tomorrow."

That night again we listened to the squeak, squeak, squeak, of the rusty see-saw, and I wondered how the wind could cause it to rock so.

The next day, Hal, instead of oiling it, simply placed a heavy rock on one end of the board as a temporary measure.

That night again we heard the abrasive squeak, squeak, squeak.

"Hal, I thought you fixed that."

"I did. It must be something else, or else the rock slid off; I don't see how it could though..."

He was snoring.

I sighed and finally went to sleep.

The next morning I went out to the old playground myself. The rock Hal had put on one end of the see-saw was no longer on it. I replaced it and made sure nothing could remove it except deliberate hands. I was sure that would put an end to our squeak and told Hal he needn't bother oiling the see-saw now. To do so properly, one would have to remove the board from the pivot, and the bolts were so badly rusted that it could have been an irksome task - and there were so many other tasks that were more important, as you can imagine if you've ever lived on even a small ranch such as ours.

That night...yes, you guessed it: Squeak, squeak, squeak!

"Hal, it MUST be something else. I know I put that stone on there so it couldn't possibly slide off or fall off. And anyway, how could the wind rock a see-saw like that? Why - for that matter, there ISN'T any wind!"

Hal had been half asleep. He cursed now and I didn't blame him. "I never before heard so damned much commotion over a lousy SEE-SAW before in my life!" he grumbled.

I had to laugh. It WAS annoying.

The next day I found that my rock HAD been removed. I tried to figure out what sort of animal could have done it; but any large enough to move that stone would have left definite tracks in the sand which covered all of the fenced playground area.

I began then to get really puzzled. But, as I said, I never even considered any supernatural explanation. And I didn't want to bother Hal with it anymore - he had enough to do, and apparently the squeaking didn't bother him as much at night as my harping so I decided to solve the mystery myself. I replaced the stone. Then I took some bailing wire and wired the stone to the see-saw. With another length of wire I attached the other side of the board to an overhead tree. No wind - short of a tornado - could move that see-saw now!

That night Hal went to sleep almost immediately, but I lay awake for awhile listening to the gentle breeze in the pine trees and the chirping of frogs. I started to doze off, when... "squeak, squeak, squeak..." There it was!

I sat up, irritated. I decided to march out to the back yard and - and. . .well, I'd see what I'd see. I got as far as the kitchen door and I stopped. Suddenly I was frightened. I don't know of what. It was like an old childhood fear of a dark room. I hurried back to bed and shuddered under the covers.

Out back, the see-saw went, "Squeak - squeak - squeak. . ." until I finally drifted into a dreamful sleep.

Yes, my wire was broken and the stone was moved from off the see-saw, the wire holding it broken also. Both breaks, I notice were the kind you get when you bend a wire back and forth until it breaks.

I didn't say a thing to Hal, but now I started getting a suspicion. Our nearest neighbor was about seven miles away, but our two ranch hands slept in the bunkhouse about a quarter mile from our house. They were both inclined to mischief, I had previously guessed, and undoubtedly had their share of alcoholic beverage every night. It could only be them sneaking up here at night and monkeying with the see-saw.. but what a strange diversion!

The following day was Saturday and we would be in town over the weekend, but I planned Monday night to "lay for them" - or whoever it was. Monday night we sat up late with visitors, so it wasn't till Tuesday that I got my chance.

There was a problem. The only room in the house from which you could look out the window onto the playground was the kitchen, and with the kitchen light on, anyone outside could see you better than you could see them, even though the moon was near full. And I frankly couldn't bring myself to wait in the dark.

Neither, by now, could I admit to Hal my admittedly childish pre-occupation. Of course, if I actually caught our two employees red-handed, it would be a different story. But how?

Well, I decided I could at least find out if there was a natural cause to my mystery by keeping a vigil in the kitchen with the light on. So that night I told Hal I was going to stay up awhile later and do some work in the kitchen.

I had replaced the stone on the see-saw, but not the wire. Now I puttered around the kitchen till I thought Hal was asleep then I went out onto the utility porch - making sure the screen door was locked - and stood back out of the light, but where I could look out at the playground. The near full moon was out and a cool breeze was blowing - not strong enough to rock a see-saw let alone one battened down with a large rock! - but enough that it would be a cool vigil if I had to wait very long.

Now it was past the time when on other nights the squeaking would have begun. So! I thought, the scoundrels won't act as long as that kitchen light is on. Then it's NOT any natural cause.

I felt braver now, and I decided to be real brave and turn off the kitchen light and watch in the dark. I did so, and now I couldn't get spooky if I tried, which I did!

I waited, watching the moonlight shadows stir in the cool night breeze, listening to night sounds. But nothing untoward or unusual happened. The see-saw remained battened down, and no squeaking sound came from elsewhere.

Half an hour later I gave up and went to bed. I didn't hear any squeaking all that night. But in the morning the see-saw once more was loose. . . the rock removed!

Now I finally decided to tell Hal about it again. Contrary to what I expected, he too was perplexed, having heard the squeaking see-saw several times during the past nights and having noticed that I had wired it down. I wondered then why he hadn't mentioned it, but I know now that he was beginning to get worried about it, too - as I was.

"Well," he said, "I'm going out there right now and take that thing apart."

"I think I'll just leave it apart." I didn't argue.

Hal did as he said, and we've never heard the squeaking sound since.

It was only a few months ago that the people we bought the ranch from came to visit us. Mr. M. noticed that the see-saw had been disassembled.

"See you took down the teeter-totter," he commented.

"Yeah," Hal said, "it was kinda noisy."

Mr. M. chuckled. "Bothered you, too, eh?"

We confided in him what had happened. They had had the same trouble with it. Why hadn't they taken it down?

"We'd have felt sort of mean taking little Maxie's plaything away from her," Mr. M. said.

He then told us about the original owner's daughter who was killed in the automobile accident and who used to love to play on the teeter-totter with her brother Martie. Both Mr. and Mrs. M. were simply convinced that little Maxie's ghost would return at night and play on the see-saw. . . probably with some other "little ghost" who would ride on the other side!

Needless to say, we fell into a long discussion with Mr. and Mrs. M. on the pros and cons of "ghosts". The discussion finally ended when Mr. M. said, "Well then, how do YOU explain the teeter-totter moving at night, even after you fastened it down?"

We COULDN'T explain it! We can't to this day.

I.C.L. added that they were going to reassemble the see-saw - after they cleaned and oiled it and made it "squeak-proof" - so that if little Maxie wanted to come back and play on it, she could to her "heart's content" - but without disturbing them!

Predictions of the future by the ability known as psychometry. She can find lost objects, determine the state of your health, predict your future. Try her, and see.

THERE WILL be quite a bit of commotion in Washington which should occur some time in January. This could be of a very serious nature, I would say to the point that while there would be no actual death of our President, still there would be an attempt or some type of a scare in this regard and newsmen and people in this connection would be turning to and fro, quite perplexed and generally, quite a commotion would be involved.

Also, I seem to feel there will be something come up in regards to contracts, or changing of contracts which have long been signed. But there will be changes involved here and possibly even a change in interest rates, lower interest. As you know and as many people know, I never give a time element because it is absolutely impossible in the cosmic realm. Therefore, I must remind you that these things can take place at any time.

There will be several people who are posing as very loyal Americans who will be exposed as using certain codes in order to get messages across to the Communistic world. Television will possibly be a means of getting these messages across if the stations aren't very careful in their screening processes. I seem to feel that these people will make some erratic statement which will sound very American but will be coded in such a way that the

HOW TO GET A PSYCHOMETRIC ANALYSIS

Select a short verse from the Bible, perhaps your favorite, and write it on a separate sheet of paper, meanwhile concentrating on your problems. Then mail the sheet to Mrs. Dorothy Spence Lauer, Amherst, Wisconsin, and enclose $5.00. Bear in mind the reply may take several weeks.

Send a snapshot of yourself to Dorothy Spence Lauer, Amherst, Wisconsin, and enclose $5.00 to cover the cost. Be sure to include your return address! Surprisingly many applicants forget this! And please, if possible, report the results to SEARCH magazine after their accuracy or inaccuracy is determined. Remember, reports of inaccuracy are as important as those of accuracy.

HOW TO GET VOICE ANALYSIS

600 ft. tape (both sides) voice analysis on either photo aura or psychometry or both. Enclose $15.00 to cover cost.

Editor's Note: Dorothy Spence Lauer is a Psychometrist, specializing in precognition. Ordinarily she needs but an object belonging to, or handled by, the subject, or the presence of the subject, to become aware of the psychic influences from which she draws her information. However, by writing out a verse, while concentrating, as described in the instructions given on this page, a sufficiently powerful psychic impression will be made to enable the medium to receive the information she seeks. We have made this service available to our readers purely in an experimentative atmosphere, in an attempt, first to determine whether or not this ability is of a nature both real and valuable; and second, to provide you with an interesting bit of entertainment. average person will not detect anything in it, perhaps even the station people won't detect it. But I certainly hope the stations will screen people thoroughly, thereby eliminating the possibility that anything detrimental to our country can be gained through this method.

People will continue to be tricked into financial swindles through get-rich-quick schemes, and will feel like running away quickly when they are encountered.

While I very seldom mention stocks in my work, I do feel that many of the airline stocks will go quite high this year. American Airlines and United are going to be very good.

There will be some rather startling bits of news which will be placed in such small, out-of-the-way locations in the newspaper that many people will hardly notice. This will be important news items, ones that have to be printed but for some reason, it is done in a rather strange way.

Toward the middle of the year, radicals will again play a very important part in our country and will be very upsetting. Many will actually be placed in jail due to the fact that their true actions will be brought out and this will be their punishment.

The United States will face more humiliation due to the fact that those whom we have helped will in some way turn upon us. Our leaders are going to be very cautious about the things that are said and they will not risk our safety with their actions. No war is felt at this time, especially with Russia. I do feel several satisfying talks with the Russian diplomats and leaders. I do not feel too happy about Red China but some of the tension will be re-

Introduction by Carl Payne Tobey

Includes actual "Thought Dial" and crystal-clear text, explaining principles, method of operation, interpretation, plus detailed sections on:

ANSWERING DIRECT QUESTIONS, TAPPING

THE SUBCONSCIOUS, LOCATING LOST

ARTICLES, PICKING WINNERS!

Edition after edition after edition, this book has proved a best seller, combining Astrology, Jungian Depth Psychology and Numerical Symbolism. THOUGHT DIAL is not a toy. It is a psychological device which enables one to by-pass the conscious mind and enter the realm of the subconscious, home of the truth within us all.

THOUGHT DIAL has been called

The Book That Stopped
The Art Linkletter Show!

It happened January 20, 1960. And it was Sydney Omarr's sensational THOUGHT DIAL that did it—stopped the famed Art Linkletter Mouse Party show! Linkletter, an admitted skeptic, challenged Omarr to demonstrate THOUGHT DIAL. Omarr did, whereupon an amazed Linkletter muttered before a TV-Radio audience of millions, "Fantastic, simply fantastic!"

THOUGHT DIAL — a complete study in itself, yet simple to operate: designed for STUDENT as well as PROFESSIONAL.

leased in many of our people's minds - or less fear than in the past. As far as Vietnam is concerned, I feel there will be more ugly situations here and several things will arise which will be most surprising to us all.

Women who are widows and older should be exceptionally careful of young men who try to give the impression that they are glamorous and attractive because they will discover that these young men find their pocketbooks and what she possesses more attractive than they.

Everyone should keep this thought in mind, which I tell so many people who write to me, written, I believe, by Robert Louis Stevenson, "Everyone sooner or later sits down to a banquet of consequences." How true this is!

Another thought is, "There really can be no happiness if the things we believe in are different from the things we do!"

I am always happy to help those who write to me. May I please remind those who live in Canada to please send a money order rather than a personal check as I have a very difficult time cashing your checks, regardless whether they are sent through a New York bank or not. So a money order is really preferred.

These predictions made Dec. 30, 1964.

Where The Reader Has His Say

Open Letter to Will Carson:

This is in answer to your letter to me in the July issue of Search Magazine.

You state that you believe my views on crime and punishment are lacking in reality. You would be right - if I were like other people!

I am not like the average person in that I do not believe in some of the things that you wrote about. You would have to know me personally to know that I am not just talking but really do try to live up to what I am going to tell you here.

I have ALWAYS FORGIVEN EVERYONE that has ever done me harm or that has wished harm on me! I have NEVER HATED ANYONE and I have never felt the feeling of hate! I do not know what it is to hate someone. Why this is so I do not know. I do not claim to be anything out of the ordinary or to be a gift of God to this world. All I know is that as far back as I can remember I have never hated anyone and always forgiven everyone.

You speak of a man coming into a friends home, eating his food, etc. then killing his host. I honestly believe that if this happened in my home that I would be able to forgive the man for what he had done. Of course I would be hurt very deeply that a stranger had taken the life of one of my family but even as Christ was hanging on the cross he found it in his heart to forgive all men for the deed they had done to Him.

At the end of your letter you stated: "there was another man who practiced and preached love, brotherhood, charity, etc. He did a lot of good. But he was crucified." Do you really believe that if Christ didn't want to die on the cross that we could have kept him hanging there till he was dead?

Another thing about Capital Punishment: If it is true that we do not die but pass on to another "plane" then we are actually helping this person to go to a better place than we are living in.

The Bible tells us "judge ye not lest ye be judged". There are many other passages like this one. It is for us to love our enemies no matter what they do to us.

There may come a time where I may lose my temper and kill someone such as in self defense but then I may also remember what God has told me and do nothing to hurt this other person.

Read the 5th, 6th, and 7th chapters of St. Matthew for more of the word of God concerning how we are to live.

I AM NOT A PERFECT PERSON and I make many mistakes but one of the things I have always been able to do was to love and forgive. Sometimes this is hard to do but then I remember that we are all of God and anything of God is not to be messed with.

People find it hard to believe what I have written above but those who know me know I am telling the truth.

Perhaps I really do have a spirit guide - or - angel - protecting me. If this is so then I would like to know why I am being protected while others are not.

Dear 4-F Elmer:

In the March 1965 issue of SEARCH Magazine appeared an article by a being who rejoices under the name of Elmer Beshearse. Said article bore the blasphemous title SERGEANT JESUS CHRIST. This letter to 4-F ELMER, is written in response. The title, if it seems disrespectful to Mr. Beshearse, was selected because it represents the classification into which Elmer has placed himself by the effrontery of referring to The Son of God as "Sergeant", and by his own admission failing the intelligence test ("It has always been a bit difficult for me to get in mind exactly what a "Christian Soldier" is.) and (Since God is love, I find it hard to visualize his leading us "as to war"). Since it is difficult for him to see and understand, he has failed the physical and mental tests, and is therefore classified 4-F as far as the service of God is concerned.

It is certainly of interest to note Elmer's animosity toward Mr. Billie James Hargis ("leader of the Christian Crusade-whatever that is"). It is quite important to know what something is before you begin to criticise it, isn't it?

Mr. Beshearse would have us believe he is troubled by what he professes to think are disparities between the images of The God of Love and the Royal Master who leads against the foe. On the contrary, Mr. Beshearse's article leads me to believe his pen is dipped, not in confusion, but in malice. He quotes scripture copiously, but in spite of the vast store of information concerning the nature of God and His purposes in the earth, Elmer claims to see The God of Love as some maudlin, mushy dotard who wishes everybody well and doesn't know the difference.

So, for any readers who may honestly be confused, diffused, or just plain fuzzyminded in this matter, I will supply a few notes which should be of aid to any honest student of truth.

1. There is no difference in the nature of God (YAHWEH) as shown in the New Testament and the Old Testament (although atheistic "critics" think they see different gods, or a "developing" god, being only a figment of the imagination of men, and changing as men's minds change).

2. Satan's rebellion, the absence of obedience, produced aberrations in the patterns of existence which were foreknown by God, who sent His own children to earth with the commission to put things in order. Shortly after their arrival here the Adams lost the first skirmish to Satan, entangling the race in Sin and Death; but the battle was not over. The heavenly Father continued the support of His children, providing them with guidance and material aid, and preserved them among the non-Adamic peoples who had inhabited the earth long before the arrival of Adam and his wife.

3. Good and Evil are patterns of thought and action which are manifestations of Spirit. The Spirit of Good, or Truth is unceasingly at war with the Spirit of Evil, or Error; just as light invariably destroys darkness. This warfare is demanded by the God of Love because His love for His creation will not tolerate its destruction by the negative forces of Error.

Occasionally the Black Prince sends an emissary into our midst to dispense "Peace" propaganda. He reminds us of the words of Jesus, "Love your enemies." Now some people just cannot see how the same God could send the armies of Israel out to kill man, woman, and child, as well as the animals of certain localities, when He had already said, "Thou shalt not kill". Nor can they understand how this could be the same God who said, "Love thy neighbor". Here is a clue. In the same Law which forbade killing, God gave the DEATH PENALTY for certain crimes . . . Does that send YOUR brain into a spin? Do you now throw your Bible away because it is impossible to both kill and refrain from killing? Probably not. Perhaps you realize that God is not just an unreasoning FORCE of fawning LOVE which knows no expression but a helpless forgiveness of any and all enormities of wickedness.

The Love of God is a discipline which leads, urges, exhorts, and prods man to his finest, fullest, and best. It prescribes chastening and correction for the disobedient to the benefit not only of the individual, but all individuals.

The Christian Crusade is a good deal more than Mr. Hargis or any other single person or sect; and whether Elmer Beshearse likes it or not, God is at war with Evil, Jesus (Yahshuah) Christ is the Captain of the Lord's Host, and God's Truth is marching on.

(Those desiring scripture references in support of this article may find them for themselves with the aid of a Bible and an Exhaustive Concordance.) Mark Andrews, P.O. Box 1122, Sunnyvale, Calif.

Re: Reincarnation. Why must one have proof in a visible form? Do not most of us know about Edgar Cayce, Rosicrucianism, persons who have had experiences making them believe in reincarnations? How about the SEERS of today? I read of two young children who told their parents

Kennedy had been shot and at that time he was alive. How about the Georgia Seer, Mrs. Nixon in Washington D.C.? We believe in prophets of old, why not those of today? They foresee same as Isaiah, etc. Did anyone think that there are many beliefs, or religions believing in reincarnation?

I first heard of it at Unity School of Practical Religion in Kansas City, Missouri. Immediately it was as a breath of fresh air to my BEING. I knew it was a true fact. But this belief has caused much uncertainty in other realms for churches do not accept it, yet one should be a member of a church. How does one know resurrection is a FACT? Especially after centuries of death, cremation, etc. other than Christ's rising from Death? He was dead but three days - not centuries. Could it not be possible for a Spirit to reincarnate until such time as Christ returns the second time? The Spirits must dwell somewhere - why not return to active life?

Grandma died when I was 14 years of age. A few years later I had a vision - visions are not dreams, to me - mother and my sister and I were sitting around a white tablecloth spread upon the ground, and upon it was a picnic lunch of which we were partaking. I turned my head and Almost two thousand years ago a mysterious white man walked from tribe to tribe among the American Nations. He came to Peru from the Pacific, He traveled through South and Central America, among the Mayans, into Mexico and all of North America, then back to ancient Tula, from whence he departed across the Atlantic to the land of his origin. Who was this white Prophet who spoke a thousand languages, healed the sick, raised the dead, and taught in the same words as Jesus Himself?

The Most Important Book We've Published!

Once in a lifetime an opportunity comes along to present such a book as this! The result of 25 years of research, it is a collection of authentic, documented Indian legends of both American continents, of immense value as Indian lore, and tremendously interesting and fascinating to old and young alike. The illustrations themselves are authentic Indian work, painted by some of the top

Indian artists of all time; plus many original engravings drawn by the famous explorer and artist, Gathwood, to whom we owe much of our scientific knowledge of the ancient races of Central America. These illustrations are in themselves priceless, because the original structures depicted have since weathered until many inscriptions are lost except in these drawings. Further, the book is the final answer to the question of 1900 years: Did Jesus come to save only the inhabitants of the Old World, or did he come also to the New? Here is proof that He did! The identity of the Prophet cannot be positively made, but those who read these legends have their own firm opinion. Lastly, the archaeology and anthropology and geography of this book is a scientific marvel of accuracy. It is one of the most valuable tools on the bookshelf of the true thinker!

Every Word True! Every Word Documented!

These are true Indian legends, gathered during twenty-five years of research by L. Taylor Hansen, archaeologist, from many different tribes all over the Americas. By consulting museums, libraries and experts on folk-lore, it has been possible to correlate the findings into this fascinating book, backed up by the spades of the diggers into ancient ruins, and by all the sciences with which L. Taylor Hansen is familiar. This is a book that will back up the New Testament of the East, with the Christian Indian legends of the West. In this book is proof that the Savior came not only to one continent, but to all the world. This book will strengthen your faith as no other could!

saw grandma rising from the ground - a grassy plot. I said, "Why, grandma, how can you do this?" "This is life," she replied. Years later mother died, and my experiences with her are very many. Once she said to me, "I have crossed the River Jordan." (I once knew a woman who saw her mother cross this river in a boat.) Another time she said to me, "I want never again to live." This would imply reincarnation to be voluntary.

I have a Bible nearly a hundred years old and it has books the present Bible does not contain. Why prove everything by the Bible when man does not know HOW to interpret what it says? Read and Read and Pray and one learns much. How many have read, "The Third Eye", "The Secret Places of The Lion", "Hide", Cayse's works "The Squarian Gospel of Jesus, The Christ"? "When Worlds Collide", and Theosophy? "Divine Atom".

Repeatedly people say the life of Christ is unknown until he is 30 years old. The Father, or maybe Christ, has given us the story of these years, but Christianity refuses to accept it - even if it is read. We learn Christ met temptation after temptation and had to overcome each, and it was not easy. Repeatedly the Bible tells us to OVERCOME.

What Christian Church accepts

all the Bible? There is the place that speaks this: "Moreover take thee one stick, thou son of man, and upon it write, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions; then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all of the house of Israel his companions. And join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand." And the statement regarding the baptism for the dead. How can one expect returns when one has a scale over the eyes and deaf ears when hearing one cannot understand?

Who are to be THE SAINTS in Christ's government? Who but the Mormons? They alone accepted the Prophet Joseph Smith. In these latter days a prophet gave his life for the teachings of God, yet many upon many reject his life teachings. No other church is growing as it is except the Jehovah Witnesses.

Regarding the DEAD: Death is supposed to know NOTHING. Most of us who read SEARCH have surely read FATE. Does anyone believe those who write of their true mystical experiences and survival accounts are lying? I know such accounts are TRUE. And what is truth? Truth changes never, but man's concept of it changes; therefore, I vouch for what I have experienced and know I state what is MY TRUTH. Death is but the closing of a house of flesh, but the SOUL lives on in the knowledge of its earthly life, for a few years, at least - possibly until it enters a period of rest for its return to earth, or as my first husband said, "You and I have suffered enough, I am going on." Where? Possibly a more developed planet.

Six weeks before he died we sat in the car discussing a subject, and suddenly I was enveloped in a thick black mist wherein I SENSED DEATH. It seemed I was to bear something I could not endure. I wept. Mother was 80 and I thought she was to die. I had just had a shocking experience thinking she was dead. Six weeks later my husband died. The car was unpaid for and he criticized me - from Beyond - for the way in which I had handled the car deal. It seemed as tho I could endure his death better if I only could weep on his shoulder. One night he came to me and offered his shoulder - I wept to my heart's content and felt better - no dream. Once I entered a second floor room thru a door like a trap door. In this large room were countless COTS upon which were wounded soldiers. At the far end of the room was my husband who was one of those nursing these soldiers. He had been one of them in life. Once mother accused him of taking a snap shot picture - or thought he had - that night she awakened me to say,

"I just saw George and he told me to look and I would find the picture. Now tomorrow I want you to look for that picture." I did, but could not find it. Weeks later while turning thru an album I came across the lost picture. Certainly he knew what had been said about him and declared his innocence.

A woman I once knew came to me after her death and said, "You knew, why didn't you tell me?" Meaning about life after death.

Four days after Mother's death she came to me as an enveloping mist - to comfort me. I felt very badly because I did not get to her before she died. One day I lay on my davenport to rest and my soul left my body and I went up and up - all was blackness, but in this darkness were the souls of my mother and my husband. Mother said my name as plain as ever in life. Once I went to her in a very large building and we sat face to face and talked and talked - she told me she paid $2.50 per day to remain or live in this building or home, as it was - many people lived there. I saw her various times and always she was dressed differently. Once she said to me, "I did not tell Mabel to bury me away from Ma." Sister had objected to carrying out mother's request to be buried by her mother's side and mother knew this and was telling me I was right in trying to bury her where she had wanted me to. Certainly she knew what had happened to her body in burial.

Six weeks before Mother died I saw myself with others sitting in an undertaker parlor discussing a subject. This was a duplicate scene of what happened when we selected her casket.

I was told three and a half years before my sister died when she would pass. She died very suddenly.

I was thousands of miles from Dad when he died, but three days later when I did not know he was dead he said to me, "My dear, good girl." Weeks later when his affairs were in a desperate position he began to knock day and night - I changed bedrooms, I tried to go to sleep with a light burning, but there they would resume. In desperation I began to do what I knew had to be done and the knocks ceased and he has been with me in the struggle to bring order out of chaos.

Most of this comes at night; sometimes it is in daytime. Once I stood over a sink and these words rang in my ears - "Babe and the baby. The baby is dead." Babe is my niece and her baby was dead.

How many people know Christ did not rise from DEATH on Sunday? Who was one of the so-called angels who sat in Christ's tomb when a witness saw him? In its original form the first chapter of Genesis says the earth was void - meaning for a period of time, yet it is not read that way now. Bible plainly tells us to prove all things. How many know Jacob wrestled with Christ - not the father? How many know Christ is GOD? God, the Father is rarely mentioned in the Bible. (New Testament). I think people would go to church if they were taught something besides the ABCs. One should study to know what the Bible says. Many ministers are ignorant of the Bible truths.

The Bible says there is neither marrying nor giving in marriage after death, but the last time

I saw Mother was about six years ago when her face appeared to me and directly behind it was the face of a man I never saw. Mother said, "I am married." In life she and Dad were separated.

Some mystic experiences: Once I was put on a train by my fiancé. Something said to me, "Look your last upon him. You will never see him again." At Christmas as I purchased his gift something said to me, "Don't send him one." Later events proved these statements to be true.

As tho with a branding iron once these words came upon my brain "Have Faith, Be Patient. All will be well. You are now farther advanced than most people. You have the foundation to become a good stenographer." I have been thru Hell, but now All is Well - God's promises are true.

Once I needed $600.00 to make a payment upon a truck. I had been hailed out, and had no way of raising money; however, soon there would be hogs to sell and as the date was near for the payment I went to town to tell the agent of my affairs. First, I would go to the P.O. There was an offer to buy some timber I had upon land in La. - just $600.00. I had prayed and prayed over this and here was my answer.

Once I was very ill, alone - on a farm - too weak to go for the horses in the pasture to go for help. What was I to do? On the Sunday before Labor Day I saw a car drive into my gate. A man I knew was in it along with a friend of his who had brought him out. He said, "Every night for the past week I have dreamed of you. Always you are in trouble. This A.M. I told my roommate I have seen all kinds of machinery, but I never saw anything like what I saw last night. I came out to see if you are sick, in trouble or if anything is wrong." I told him as well as possible of my illness. He insisted on staying until midnight then if I did not need him he would walk back to town. He told the man to return and come back in the A.M. to take me to town to a doctor - should he not return. Later he told me something told him he had to be here that night.

Around eight I nearly died - turned blue and both thought I was dying. I sent him to a neighbor to phone for an ambulance. He got lost and for various reason was gone two hours during which time I lay unconscious. A continued dream saved my life. I was in the hospital eight weeks.

Once I was caught upon a tractor with an iron bar pressing itself into the small of my back with such force I was pressed nearly lifeless over the steering wheel. No one near nor on the place. I prayed and prayed; even told God how to save my life - foolish me

- a leg went numb - then I knew I was in worse trouble. I prayed to die. A voice said, "Move your pillow." I sat on one. I did and was freed for medical care.

Another time I sat at a table near nine at night thinking, as I read, that I would go outside. A voice said to me, "Stay in the house. There is danger outside." When I got to bed a light shone across me and reflected upon a mirror. Someone was outside my house shining a light upon me.

"I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father in the name of Christ, if these things be true -". I did and the reply I receive is "Ye are The Temple of The Living God."

A number of years ago there was published a small magazine entitled, "The Nautalius". One edition stated how to heal oneself. I had had a SPINAL that left my back so weak it ached day and night. I will not say what to do because someone would try it unsuccessfully, then say I LIED. However, I was successful and a FORCE (my I AM) came from the base of my brain down my spine and at the small of my back where the pain was it pulled cords, tendons, muscles, etc. I lay and moaned.

My back ceased aching and it is well unless I bend over more than a few minutes, nor can I lift. There is no pain.

RE: Pyramids and Healing. A few years ago I subscribed to a Consumers' Magazine, Winnipeg, Canada. I have friends who patronize one of the members of this organization. He is a HEALER who is able to locate the pain and the cause of the ailment, then he places his hand over the place and Spirit Power flows into the diseased place.

Also, this magazine forecasts weather and world conditions. It deals with the Bible and stated that within the Great Pyramid is a sealed room upon whose walls is written the history of the human race upon this earth; also that the Bible was written before the events occurred. I understood it to imply that the editor entered this room and read the writing. Such being the case, either he entered via the means used by the author of Divine Atom or as Christ entered a room thru a wall.

I know of many instances where people vanish into air before the eyes of onlookers - sometimes thru no effort of their own, either.

I have been told at what age I will die. I forgot to say when writing about reincarnation that, I for years, yearned to know who I had been in a previous life. Then I saw myself dying upon a battle field with an aid upon each side of me - in their arms I lay - the words I spoke are recorded in history. I was a famous general from Europe.

Surely people have read of instances where one has recognized as familiar something they never saw before - the couple who toured in India, I think it was; the girl who found herself drawn to a certain spot while upon a tour in Rome, wasn't it - Later digging found skeleton of a man and a woman locked in each others arms in an underground tunnel. Presumably they had fled there from Pursuers at the time Christians were being killed.

Someone explain from the Bible the fact one sees backward in time or forward in time. Once I entered a friend's house and saw two cats coming toward me. I mentioned them and was told there was only one cat.

Once I saw three men walking across my pasture to rescue me

Thirty Years Among The Dead

This is a condensed version of Dr. Carl A. Wickland's Classic (and now out of print) book on abnormal psychology. It is a record of his work with obsession carried on with Mrs. Wickland, who was an accomplished medium. Together they cured many obsessed persons, persuading discarnate spirits to give up their hold on their victims, and thus restored their patients to normal, happy lives. This book is still years ahead of present day research in this field.

in a snow storm, but when they arrived only two were there. I inquired about the third man, and was told there had been no third man.

Don't talk about being an average normal person. Normalcy is often not as advanced as Christ was or we are supposed to be after 2000 years.

Someone please explain the FACTS of my life with that of what I am supposed to believe to be a Christian.

P.S. I know the author of those two articles much discussed and he or she is a very brilliant person and acquired this knowledge at the time of an unusual mystical experience when told to do as is being done. (Name withheld upon request.)

TWO WAYS TO BE

ON TOP OF THE NEWS

WHAT'S really happening in man's effort to conquer his exciting new frontier?

To find out, you could read a cross-section of the world's great newspapers every day, study a couple of hundred scientific monographs every month, make periodic trips to test development and missile centers in the Western Hemisphere, and probably come up with a pretty fair idea of what's going on in the world of Space theory and development.

We recommend this method, if you can do it. It'll give you a chance to travel, and you'll see lots of interesting people and places.

Of course, you won't have time for anything else.

There's an easier way. It takes about 40 seconds — we timed it. Less than a minute to take pen and paper in hand and tell us you want a subscription to America's newest, finest, most-authentic magazine of Space.

In reporting major events in the world of Space, SPACE WORLD takes you behind the scenes, gives you up-to-the-minute information on technical and scientific problems, on the men who are making Space news.

What you read in SPACE WORLD is authentic, because the men who bring you this news are the very same men who are making it.

See for yourself how much deeper and more complete your understanding of Space will be when you read SPACE WORLD. Take advantage of our special subscription price that will save you money and insure your getting all future issues.

The next 6 issues for only $2.75
The next 12 issues for only $5.00

Your subscription, or your friend's or son's, will begin as soon as we receive your check or money order. So why not take the 40 seconds and write us . . . NOV!

among your readers or listeners and those who would like to participate in the organization of a Pa. - NJ Two-State UFO Study Group primarily for adults. In view of the UFO EVIDENCE report, which was mailed to all Congressmen and Senators for possible 'open hearings' on UFO reality and censorship in 1965 by the National Investigations Committee On Aerial Phenomena (NICAP) in Washington, D.C. such a study group seems feasible. Also because of the recent worldwide flurry of UFO sightings and landings, the largest since 1957, such a study group seems very much advisable. Before organizing a Steering Committee for this Two-State Group, I would appreciate it very much if all interested persons desiring such an organization would write to me and enclose a stamped, self addressed envelope for notification of an early 1965 meeting. George D. Fawcett, UFO researcher and investigator for 17 1/2 yrs., 539 Raub Street, Easton, Pa.

OAHSPE—THE LONG LOST, AUTHENTIC, UNEXPURGATED, UNCHANGED FIRST EDITION

AFTER 75 YEARS!

THE 1882 EDITION OF THE WONDER BOOK OF THIS AGE, PHOTOCOPIED FROM THE ORIGINAL, NOT A COMMA CHANGED!

In 1891, for reasons not acceptable to many, including myself, John Ballou Newbrough and Andrew M. Howland issued a "revised and corrected" edition of OAHSPE. These revisions and corrections (and omissions and additions) have never been satisfactorily outlined, and because since 1885 the first edition could not be purchased anywhere, the public has been unable to ascertain what these changes were. In all my life, I have been able to find but one copy of the 1882 edition. Others are rumored to exist, but if they do, they are in private collections. With this photocopied edition of OAHSPE, reproduced from this lone volume, the 1882 edition is once more made available to the public. With the advent of the Space Age, OAHSPE is being vindicated, thus I am pleased to make this controversial edition available to those who, like myself, believe it to be one of the world's important books.

Perhaps the best way to describe OAHSPE is in the words of the book itself: "A sacred history of the dominions of the higher and lower heavens on the Earth for the past twenty-four thousand years, being from the submersion of the continent of Pan in the Pacific Ocean, commonly called the Flood or Deluge, to the Kosmon (present) Era. Also a brief history of the preceding fifty-five thousand years, together with a synopsis of the cosmogony of the Universe; the creation of the planets; the creation of man; the unseen worlds; the labor and glory of gods and goddesses in the ethereal heavens; with the new commandments of Jehovah to man of the present day. With revelations from the second resurrection, formed in words in the thirty-third year of the Kosmon Era." The purpose of the book is: "To teach mortals how to attain to hear the Creator's voice, and to see His heavens, in full consciousness, whilst still living on the earth; and to know of a truth the place and condition awaiting them after death."

This edition of OAHSPE contains 928 pages. It also contains nearly three quarters of a million words, and calculating from actual time of writing, it was written at the rate of 120 words per minute! This on an 1880 Sholes typewriter is a miracle in itself. Many of the drawings in OAHSPE were done at the same time . . . in the dark! The Book of Cosmology might have been written by today's space scientists! Much of the science in OAHSPE has only recently been "discovered". Newbrough could not have "guessed" so rightly, especially in the face of all the authorities of his day. Today space satellites are discovering "how it is" out in space, while in 1882 OAHSPE contained the same information! As an instance, the now famous Van Allen radiation belts, complete as to nature and height! The scientific reader is overwhelmed by the science of OAHSPE.

Clip coupon and mail immediately

● Why Spiritualists Can't Get Together! Some time ago Miss Agness Reuther, who was then the editor of "The Psychic Observer Magazine", wrote an editorial. She asked this question: "Why can't Spiritualists get together?" In response to that editorial I wrote explaining how I felt. It was published but drastically cut.

Now several years later this question confronts me more strongly and looms up as something really ominous. The question still stands unsolved. All serious minded Spiritualists should ponder this question prayerfully. We have to come up with an answer and soon if we expect to stand as a strong united religious group.

THE HIDDEN WORLD

There is a hidden world, unseen, mostly unsuspected, and largely denied - yet it exists as surely as the sun shines in the sky! It is known by many names, and it has many ramifications. Some people call it the Secret Government. Some call it the Shaver Caverns, inhabited by "dero" and "tero", those evil and good ones who inhabit caves deep in the earth. Others believe it is an Astral world, inhabited by the dead. Some even say it is another dimension. One thing only can be said to be literally true - there is an invisible force in our lives that governs us for good and evil, and against which we fight incessantly, some knowingly, some blindly. Now there is a magazine devoted to seeking out this Hidden World, presenting all sides of the story, giving all the evidence that is available to prove its existence.

HERE ARE SOME OF THE THINGS YOU CAN READ IN THE FIRST EIGHT BOOKS: "I Remember Lemuria!"; The Masked World; Voices In The Night; Beyond The Verge; The Lorelei; The Elder World; The Return Of Sathanas; Mandark; The Facts On Deros; The Mind Rovers; La Sorciere; In The Beginning; The Fountain Of Youth; and others. Many of these are complete book length novels. All are entirely factual. They are the most mysterious writings in the world.

monster; JEALOUSY, stands defiant in the path of any united action amongst Spiritualists. Jealousy generates an antagonistic battle of the spirit forces which brings dissention and disunity among the various groups. Jealousy in class work retards development of any hopeful student. Jealousy in the church groups retards and even prevents the growth of the church.

Jealousy among the larger Spiritualists camps and organizations prevents a strong unified effort to promote Spiritualism as a Christian Religion; as an exact Science and as an acceptable Philosophy.

I had thought it was enough for Spiritualists to believe in the Holy Bible as a basis for Unity. But now I say, BEWARE! True Spiritualism is being swallowed up by all kinds of new movements even among the "Bible Spiritualists". The New Age groups, The Aquarian Gospels, The Rosicrucians, The Brotherhood Groups, and many Occult groups, and lately the Re-Incarnationists are making a big splash. I call these groups Religious Splinters that have broken off from the main plank which goes into the platform that all Spiritualists should be standing on.

Take heed lest you be led astray by those who have forgotten the real purpose of Spiritualism - by those who have developed some fancy doctrine - by those who have taken one plank out of the Christian platform and are trying to build a new religion on it. This has been going on in all religious demonstrations down through the ages. We should be emerging from the dark ages by now!

What was the objective of the early Christians? To show the Jew that Jesus was The Christ (the Messiah). To turn the people away from Idol Worship, and to preach the resurrection of the dead. Today, nearly two thousand years later, the Jews still don't accept Jesus as the Saviour and many religions are still pagan where the people worship idols, statues and saints.

Now Christian Spiritualists who believe in Jesus and have given up idol worship and preach the resurrection of the dead have found a special plank upon which they are trying to build a new religion. My God! How long will it take for us to become united?

Don't become one of those opportunists who are capitalizing on some phase of psychic phenomena for personal gain or glory. Let us band together for the greater glory of God and hold aloft that flaming torch of Truth to light the way for those hungry souls who are seeking to know and understand life. OUR glorious religion is being pulled asunder by the various Spiritualist groups and there is one in particular which seems to be the biggest bone of contention. There are some who "would rather fight than switch" from a flimsy theory to the solid rock foundation of Christian principles. This group has picked a plank called Re-incarnation and are willing to let Spiritualism stand or fall on this one thing. Since when is Spiritualism founded on such an insignificant issue. We are acting like a bunch of kids striving to prove each is right on some trivial point. We waste our time squabbling when we could be playing an active part in preparation for Jesus' return.

We Spiritualists have something wonderful to give the world, but unless we have a strong platform made up of basic, fundamental principles which all can agree on, then we cannot promote our religion the way it should be. Let us build a sound platform upon which to stand to sound the Clarion Call the world is anxious to hear. Let us prove to the world that there is no death and that our loved ones are not lost. Let us live up to this great responsibility which belongs to every Spiritualist and let the world know we have something very special to offer.

We must take the affirmative stand and promote our work aggressively. Instead of eternally defending Spiritualism we should be promoting it with a positive approach. There has been enough money wasted on conventions and not enough spent on demonstrations. If our work can be brought out by the intelligent class of Spiritualists, the fakers will fall by the wayside as is always the case. If our work be not of God it can not long endure. THINK ABOUT IT!

Frankly I am amazed to find that Spiritualism can be split down the middle on just one line of thinking and one which is so insignificant in promoting our religion. If we can't agree on basic things how can we even expect a stranger to Spiritualism to be convinced? United we can stand; divided we are like sheep scattered amongst the hills where we will never be noticed. Jesus said, "feed my sheep". In my book I have tried to present the fundamentals of Spiritualism that should be acceptable to all: some food the sheep can digest. We cannot present to strangers the highest teachings of Spiritualism before the fundamentals. Who can demonstrate through psychic phenomena that Re-incarnation is a fact? Everyone has a right to their theories but until it can be proven it is not a fact, and cannot be of any practical value in converting strangers. But of course a hungry fish will grab anything that looks like food. It is our sacred duty as Spiritualists to toss real food into the pond so the fish will neither die nor get hooked on some shimmering gadget that only looks like real bait.

We don't have forever to do our work here on planet earth. Can't we all wear the same banner so we can be identified as fundamental Spiritualists although perhaps not agreeing on every theory involved? This is my sincere prayer, that True Spiritualism will come into its own before it is too late. Bro. Laurence Philip Hatch, P.O. Box 50187, New Orleans, La. 70150.

THE HYPNOTISM HAND-BOOK

Have your subject gaze fixedly at this spiral and then READ TO HIM the hypnotizing techniques given WORD FOR WORD in Chapter Two of this "Handbook of Hypnosis for Therapy." As soon as he is hypnotized, READ TO HIM the particular WORD FOR WORD therapy which applies to his particular problem. Many such therapies are given, always in the exact WORD FOR WORD form, which is essential in any scientific or professional use of hypnosis.

There has never been a book like this. A few years ago an article in Western Family said about its principal author: "Along the west coast, the 'hypnotism man' whose students you'll most likely run into, is Charles Edward Cooke."

Cooke has taught doctors of medicine, dentists, psychiatrists, psychologists, ministers of the gospel, nurses, and many others, from San Diego, California, to Spokane, Washington. Cooke has mass hypnotized as many as 400 people at once by READING the WORD FOR WORD hypnotizing technique in this work.

Although written for the professional man, this book will have a wide appeal among laymen who seek precise methods rather than the vague directions that have hitherto been available. THE HYPNOTISM HAND-BOOK was written by Mr. Cooke in collaboration with science-fiction novelist and short story writer A. E. Van Vogt.

DOES DANDRUFF MAKE YOU WANT TO HIDE YOUR HEAD IN SHAME?

You might as well, if you're going to let dandruff and scale and skin rash make you bald as an egg. You've bought plenty of preparations, and they don't work, you say? Of course they haven't! You've probably been cheated as many times as I have. I'll bet I've spent hundreds of dollars on jim-dandy goo, and wound up with worse dandruff than I started with. Made me plenty mad, too. I always get mad when I think of the lousy junk designed to chisel your honest dollars out of you. Mad enough so that when I find something good, I'm not bashful about telling my friends about it. And SEARCH readers are my friends. I had dandruff all my life, and despaired of getting rid of it, until one day Ken Arnold (the flying saucer man) left a half bottle of Turn-er's at my house, and flew off to Boise without it. I tried the stuff, because Ken's no sissy, and he doesn't put perfume on his hair. Well, in one week my dandruff was gone! And my hair had begun to darken. My wife tried it, and her rash disappeared. You can bet we wrote Ken in a hurry and asked where he got it! And now, we're telling you. But don't just take our word for it—here are a few testimonials from our readers, to back us up.

As I have about used up one bottle of your hair preparation, please send me another. I have had very good results in ridding myself of dandruff and itching. Lionel O. Branberg, Sharon Springs, Kans.

Enclosed find money order for $10.00 for two more bottles of Turn-er's as soon as possible. You sure found a good product. In the sixth application my dandruff was cured. Thanks to you. It does all you say and more, too. And it sure brings back the natural color to your hair. Thanks! R. E. Van Gordon, 1905 W. Milham Road, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Enclosed please find check for $5.00 for another bottle of Turn-er's as soon as possible. I have been bedeviled by a terrible itching in my eyebrows for over thirty years. It seemed to be a large flaky dandruff, but if I combed it out too near the skin, a watery substance would start, causing a scab-like condition. I have been to dozens of doctors . . . none did the slightest bit of good. After reading what Ray Palmer said, I decided to try Turn-er's. After the sixth application, I have not had an itch in my brows, and the skin underneath is as clear and clean as my face. I certainly am thankful to Mr. Palmer for bringing such a fine product to my attention.—S. W. Crusen, 2336 Fillmore Ave., Buffalo 14, N. Y.

Enough? Well, then take it from Ray Palmer, one bottle of

IMPORTANT DECISIONS TO MAKE?

Astrology and Numerology are very important to many people when it becomes necessary to make a vital decision. Even nations have been known to consult the stars to determine the course of history. All of us feel the need of help, want to know the most propitious moment to act, want to avoid unwise actions; so we turn to Astrology and Numerology. But most of us can't do it ourselves, and it is expensive.

HERE IS A WONDERFULLY EFFICIENT NEW WAY

Pictured on the back cover is a new guide, the NUM-ASTRO GUIDE, which can be used DAILY, to make your decisions! It is not a gimmick. It is a concrete aid to your subconscious mind, and helps you to make your decisions correctly.

MADE FOR YOUR BIRTH SIGN -- AND YOURS ALONE!

This beautiful ceramic guide is made for you alone, out of the very clay of Mother Earth, and is designed to be conditioned to your own vibrations, and no others. Once personalized, it must be used only by you. And with it you can CONTROL your own guidance!

FOOLPROOF PERFORMANCE -- OR YOUR MONEY BACK

Complete with instruction booklet and a chart of Astrological and Numerological values, the device causes you to concentrate your vibrations upon your problem, and gives you a precise answer. Use it EVERY DAY. It can be a tool to master your own destiny!

Write for complete description. Or if you prefer, order now. Delivery takes up to three weeks, because each one must be manufactured personally for you, according to your birth date.
