Editorial

From 1881 to 1969 is quite a long time. But something happened in 1881 which is directly related to 1969; something which should be of particular interest to readers of Search. Just this month (October, 1969) The National Geographic published an undersea map of the Pacific ocean, made possible as a result of explorations by soundings and sonar and various other scientific means that came about as part of the International Geophysical "Year" which began in 1957 and ended in 1967 (although some of the work is still going on). In 1881 John Ballou Newbrough wrote a book by what he called "spirit control" called Oahspe, in which he included a map designated as Plate 59—"Outline map showing the locality of Pan, the submerged continent." (Also drawn by spirit control?) We have reproduced both maps on the following page. 88 years ago, the "spirits" drew an entirely accurate map of the bottom of the Pacific ocean, except that the features now under as much as 18,000 feet of water were once a continent above the water. A casual glance at both maps will show the startling agreement as to topographical features. They are so identical as to preclude any possibility that the "spirits" didn't have the facts at their disposal! We leave it to you to carry on your thinking from there. However, we do suggest that everything in Oahspe would deserve the same deep thought, and would take on the same criteria of accuracy.

This is not the first time a National Geographic map has confirmed one of the books we publish. The map of the undersea topography of the Atlantic ocean is also incredibly identical to the maps shown in that remarkable book by L. Taylor Hansen, The Ancient Atlantic. Both writers produced maps accurate in almost every detail of the area of Earth's surface not possible to visualize in the day they were drawn.

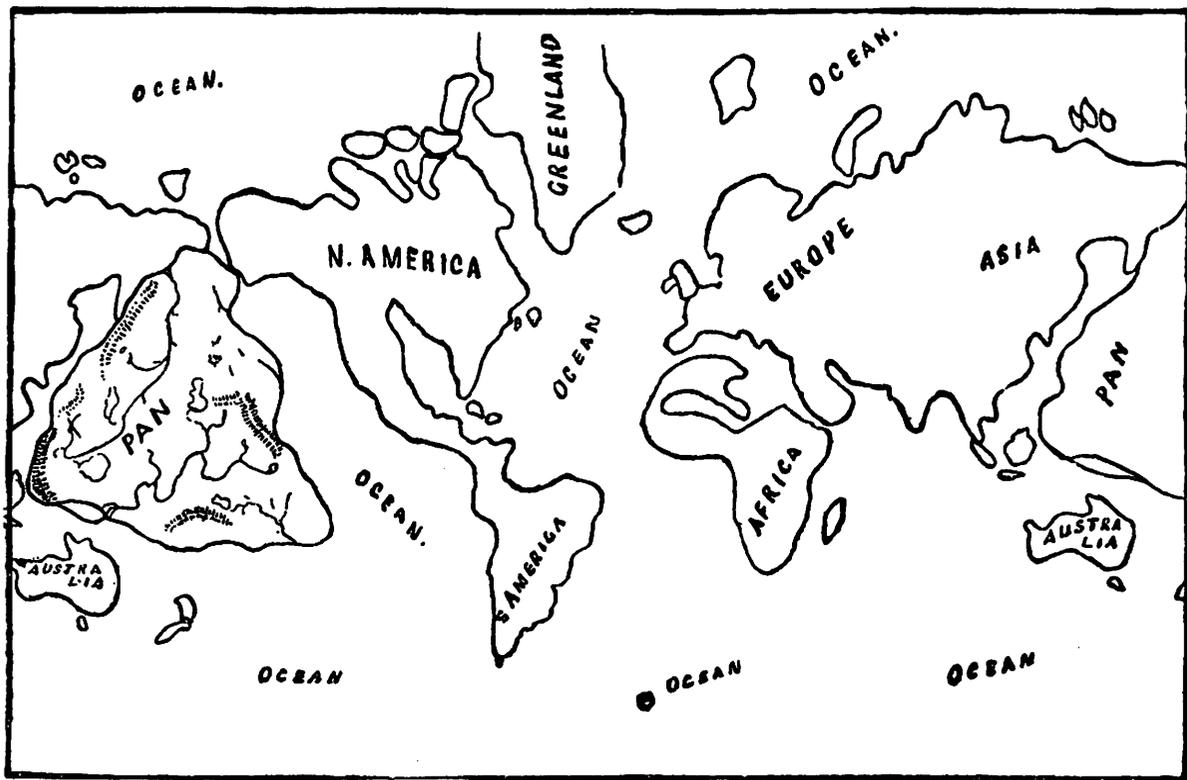

It is interesting to contemplate these two incidents. One of them falls into the psychic realm—we have a man who has trained himself as a spiritist medium by a strenuous fruit and vegetable diet for ten years until he is "capable" of being used by "spirits" who then proceed to guide his hands with incredible speed and accuracy for the first primitive typewriter keyboard, and to cause him to make drawings and artistic paintings in total darkness. One of the drawings is a map of the now-sunken (and judged by scientists to be mythical and imaginary) continent called Pan (or in modern parlance, Lemuria). This map, compared 88 years later with a highly scientific and accurate map made by scientists using the greatly sophisticated devices of modern science, proves to be totally accurate. It makes no difference what we call this phenomenon—real spirits who can control a living man or the man himself with some strange human power we don't yet understand. The fact is, the map is correct. It urges us to consider the rest of this tremendous book of nearly 1000 pages with the possibility that everything else it presents may be equally accurate. Such consideration, to date, reveals that hundreds of other things have also proved to be accurate in the light of discovery since the book was written. The most fascinating consideration, however, is that Oahspe tells things that are to happen in the future; in fact, in the immediate future. If these, also, are accurate, their importance cannot be overrated. We won't take a look at them now, in this editorial, but we certainly will cover certain facets of them in future editorials.

The other incident involves only a human being, a scholarly scientist, who has drawn up a map of ancient Atlantis (the bottom of the Atlantic ocean) which proves to be identical to the map produced by The National Geographic. The interesting facet here is the fact that the map is the result of the study of ancient legends. Thus, we have another source of true history, the legends that science has scoffed at and called "fantasy". Apparently they, also, are far from fantasy. They, too, should now be studied with a new viewpoint.

There is an old saying that "in the latter days, babes and fools shall confound the wise". Most likely the writer of this editorial comes under the category of fool, because he has been told he's nuttier than a fruitcake by many degree-holders and scoffed at many times for the weird things he writes. But it has been true that many times we have succeeded in "confronting the wise". These two maps are only two examples. Perhaps it is literally true that in this day of profuse scientific knowledge and advancement, we will discover that "knowledge" is not exclusive with the student, but is also a faculty of the "idiots savant". We have to acknowledge that the ignorant "heathen" or the savage "Indian" or the ancient "Maya" may have known all about the profound things we are "discovering" today in our lofty scientific civilization; and indeed, may have known the truth about some of the fallacies we accept today in our own brand of "ignorance" and "stupidity". Maybe we have to do with a computer something that an Australian bushman did with his instinct as a matter of commonplace performance. Perhaps we are incapable of comprehending what the ancient races "just knew" to be true. Or, to our embarrassment, our civilization may actually be "small potatoes" when compared to those now dead and gone.

On our front cover this issue you will find a very appealing young lady. Many of you know that the editor has published the pictures of his entire family at one time or another on the covers of his magazines. Our two daughters, Linda and Jennifer, our son, Raymond, wife Marjorie, and even (egotistically) myself. Actually, when we publish this present picture of the baby daughter of one of our favorite nieces, even though there is no attendant article in the magazine, it is in itself one of the most significant things Search has to say. If we were to write an article on "Love", what would we say? How do you describe love, in all its ramifications? Millions of words have been written, but nobody really has pinned it down to specifics. However, how could anyone fail to love this little girl, instantly, upon sight? We know that you have experienced a very pleasant and tender reaction upon seeing little Vickey on our cover. Easy to love, isn't she?

The real reason your editor has published so many pictures of his family is because it is one more way of saying "I love you". There is a very special thing about love in the family sense, but in Search, through the years, it has been more than that. There has been a sense of sharing that is unique in any magazine we publish, in that the reader is really part of the family. Many of you have watched our children grow. You've seen our beautiful twin grandchildren Amy and Angie; their mother Linda both as a baby and as an adult. You've shared them with us. And perhaps between us, expressed on our printed pages, and your written letters to us, there is a common bond of that human faculty for love that makes life worthwhile.

So, when you see a cover such as ours, we think you know that here is something sincere, something far better than a mere "illustration" for an article in the magazine, but a simple, heartfelt touch that reveals that all of us are human beings, and not just producers and readers of a printed page without personality.

Little Vickey, who lives in Mundelein, Illinois, takes to her "grampa" (her idea entirely to call us that) like a duck takes to water. There's no generation gap here! And as long as there are little girls like her, the world is a great place. And as long as there are little girls like her, it will be a powerful impetus to all of us to try to make it a better place for her to live.—Rap.

WHY REACH FOR THE STARS?

BY RAY PALMER

Important technological benefits can be expected from the manned space program just as past achievements have contributed to the nation's prosperity. Dr. Wernher von Braun, Director of the Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Alabama, has said, "The real payoff does not lie in mining the moon or in bringing gold back from the moon, but in enriching our economy and our science in new methods, new procedures, new knowledge, and advanced technology in general."

The space program is generating revolutionary improvements in fabrication processes and materials, biological and medical knowledge, system management techniques, and in communications such as television, radio, and telephone. The time lag between invention or discovery and public application is telescoping rapidly.

The manned spacecraft program already has contributed significantly to the scientific knowledge, prestige, security, and technological progress of this nation in many ways, only a few of which are known to the public. A great portion of the dollars being spent on manned space exploration will provide technological benefits that will be used here on Earth long after the lunar landings.

Some of the technological achievements that have resulted from Project Apollo are briefly described in this presentation.

The economic mark of the Apollo development to date can be appreciated by the $1.4 billion of purchase orders to some 7000 suppliers, in 48 states—space funds that have substantially heightened the nation's industrial capability and braced the country's economy.

The most profound return is in the developed knowledge and skills of the individual engineers, technicians, and production support, and management personnel, of fundamental importance to the future of the United States.

The agencies and contractors of the national space program have created a completely new American industry. Without this space industry in place, the nation today would have but a scattered and ineffectual response to foreign confrontation of space-led technology leadership.

The space program has developed large, very versatile teams of highly trained managers and scientists, competent to design and implement large-scale systems to help overcome critical shortages of community facilities, critical overcrowding and congestion, critical pollution and accumulation of wastes.

The advances in computing technology resulting from activities related to the national space program provide useful applications in all areas of industry.

Virtually every aspect of human endeavor has been enhanced by the commercial application of the digital computer. Computerized air traffic control, industrial process control, engineering design, automated hospitals, and sophisticated medical diagnosis techniques have helped elevate the overall living standards of man.

Other possible applications include the prediction of the time and location of tornado and hurricane passages. Analytical tools for predicting the thermal degradation of various nonmetallic materials have general application throughout the chemical industry and can, for example, be used to evaluate fire protection and prevention materials for flammable structures. Computer programs capable of analyzing heat transfer problems associated with high-energy heat sources can be used in the design of nuclear power plants to achieve improved utilization of the available thermal energy.

The techniques could lead, in the next five to ten years, to the era of the "instant cop" through highly sophisticated, well-planned, computerized systems of information use, communication, storage, and retrieval to speed up investigative processes to improve the quality of justice.

The system of information processing currently being analyzed for Redondo Beach, Calif., will be designed for use by other cities of similar size and population makeup, and for quick and easy integration into a computerized system. Many benefits are possible from the program. Properly correlated statistical information could provide the capability to predict when, where, and what kind of crime is going to occur.

System engineering techniques have been utilized for the multi-billion-dollar California Water Project, designed to transport more than two million acre-feet of water per year from Oroville Dam in northern California, over some 500 miles of rivers, canals, and aqueducts, and a 4000-foot-high mountain range to water-poor Southern California.

Space computer technology will be able to provide practical, reliable, and efficient data management systems that can mean full optimization of all the water resources, maximum efficiency from the generator units at dams, and minimum power loss in transmission lines.

The successful accomplishments of the many NASA space programs have led to the development of various materials that have applications to industrial products. New alloys, high-performance lubricants, high-strength adhesives, spray-on foam insulation, and silver-zinc batteries with long storage life are examples of noteworthy developments.

New metallic materials, developed for space vehicle applications include high-strength stainless steels; strong, weldable aluminum compositions; and corrosion-resistant weldable titanium alloys. Precipitation-hardened stainless steels are now used in the fabrication of aircraft, submarines, and ships.

Vacuum and radiation resistant lubricants employed to reduce friction of moving parts have been developed. These new lubricants offer high lubricity and can be used in high-speed turbines and other rotating equipment. In addition, the associated lubrication technology is leading to the development of high-temperature lubricants for jet engines and industrial machinery such as rotating kilns, driers, or roasters.

The development of high-strength polyurethane and polyimide adhesives offer suitable bonding agents for many space and non-space applications. A variety of aircraft structures being fabricated today are taking advantage of these new adhesives.

The requirement for cryogenic insulation of tankage in launch vehicles employing cryogenics has led to the development of a highly effective, light-weight spray-on foam insulation. The new foam-in-place material is being considered for insulation of cold-cargo shipping containers, tankers, pre-fabricated dwelling construction, orthopedic splints, furniture packaging, and other applications where lightweight, rigidity or insulation purposes are required.

The space program has seen major developments in a large variety of electrical power-generating devices, including fuel cells, solar cells, nuclear devices, and batteries. The silver-zinc battery technology, for example, was developed originally for short-duration, high-energy power delivery required for military missile applications. However, silver-zinc batteries were short-lived and their recharge capability was quite limited. Space applications required batteries with storage capability of nine months in a charged state and then operation for about two weeks. In meeting these stringent storage and operational specifications, an improved silver-zinc battery was developed which has storage capability in a charged state in excess of one year. These batteries have found usage in deep submergence vehicles and submarines.

One of the most important design criteria for space vehicles is that structural materials should have the lightest weight, the highest strength and stiffness, be able to operate in a wide range of temperatures, and submit to fabrication processes such as forming, machining, and welding. NASA programs have produced a variety of materials that satisfy these requirements. These include beryllium, titanium, stainless steels, super alloys, refractory metals, aluminum, magnesium, and high-strength steels. All are applicable to innumerable non-space uses in almost every metal-working industry for all sectors of our economy—transportation, mining, farming, refining, chemicals, electrical, communication, construction, and road-building.

Another Apollo material—the thermal control coatings employed to maintain a viable temperature during lunar crossings—has an excellent potential as a universal temperature conditioner. Once coatings that can resist normal wear are developed, interior temperatures will be cooler in summer and warmer in winter without air conditioning.

One of the most significant and promising breakthroughs in industrial technology is the foamed-in-place, freon-filled polyurethane covering that insulates the super-cold liquid hydrogen tankage of the Saturn S-II (second stage) launch vehicle and prevents hydrogen boil-off during fill, hold, and launch operations. It can be used as a cryogenic insulation for tankers, ships, trucks, and freight cars, to name only the more obvious applications. It could even help provide an answer to the smog problem. A San Diego utility has demonstrated the smogless operation of a liquified-gas-propelled conventional automobile, but maintaining the gas at the -160 F temperature at which it is liquid remains a problem. Foamed insulation may be the solution.

Another non-space application of the foamed polyurethane foam is the rapid, simple construction of cheap, lightweight temporary shelters. Tests have demonstrated that a portable igloo-type 16-foot-diameter structure fabricated by spraying 1/2-inch-thick foam on a light framework is capable of maintaining a comfortable temperature for eight occupants merely by retaining their body heat. There are, of course, many other practical uses in military operations, disaster relief, Arctic exploration, etc.

In the medical field, the use of foamed splints for broken limbs would be a great boon. Lightweight, but sufficiently rigid, foamed supports can readily replace the heavy plaster casts now used to protect limb fractures. The medical implications of this application are widespread.

Foamed resins have also been used to refloat sunken ships by displacing the water in flooded compartments with the air-containing foamed cells. Foamed materials are also being studied for instantly-inflatable life jackets. The list of potential applications is far from complete.

Another Apollo material—the thermal control coatings employed to maintain a viable temperature in manned spacecraft during space voyages by dissipating internal heat and rejecting solar radiation—has an excellent potential as a universal temperature conditioner. Coatings with thermal behaviors similar to those of Apollo external-coated surfaces can lower temperatures of cars, trains, buses, trucks, homes, and factories by as much as 10 degrees. In hot, sunny climates, the interior of structures exposed to the sun's rays can be cooled by this concept. Once coatings that can resist washings, rain, snow, dust, and normal daily wear are developed, hot summers indoors in areas where air conditioning is infeasible may disappear. Conversely, specially formulated coatings can conserve heat in cold weather.

An Apollo-developed construction technology appears to be well-suited for building the cities of tomorrow. Forecasts indicate that low-cost housing, particularly, will feature strong, light, habitable structures that can expand or contract readily. Apollo honeycomb sandwich panels, used extensively in the spacecraft and the launch vehicles, already make this feasible. They can be translated readily into prefabricated but permanent-type housing on a nationwide scale. This same type of structural panel is also suitable for providing economical housing for distressed or disadvantaged areas throughout the world.

Adhesives developed for the Apollo program are now in more mundane service. An adhesive-bonded car that is as strong as conventionally joined autos is the dream of virtually every automobile manufacturer. Elimination of hole machining in body panels and the assembly operations associated with mechanical fasteners represent substantial savings. Further, water and salt that cause extensive corrosion cannot enter without holes and other openings. One auto maker has already used adhesives to eliminate fasteners on body trim on its 1968 models. The race car body that won the 1967 24-hour Le Mans race was bonded entirely by adhesives.

Detroit auto makers are equipping many 1969 models with explosion-proof, reinforced-plastic gas tanks as an added safety feature. Newsweek magazine of April 1, 1968, interprets the move as preparation for the 1970 model year, when plastic gas tanks may be on the national list of mandatory safety equipment for cars.

One important Apollo-generated material development has stimulated great interest among designers of fire-resistant structures. The novel material is a glass fiber-reinforced composite that will not burn in a 100-percent oxygen atmosphere. The new laminate will be ideal for aircraft, automobiles, trucks, and many other vehicles and installations where fire constitutes a major hazard.

The achievements of this manufacturing development program can be typified in the fundamental industrial practice of welding. Through the Apollo example, American industry is now able to weld aluminum alloys that did not exist five to eight years ago; it is welding complex shapes, materials of a few thousandths of an inch thick, and welding in areas inaccessible to humans, and welding to standards so stringent that they would have been considered impossible at the start of the program.

One task of the space industry was to conduct the research necessary to provide total life support for astronauts. Since this work involved understanding every element that influences man's psychophysiological functions in space, important advancements have been made in a broad range of related fields: aerospace medicine, space biology, human factors, bioengineering, biophysics, and bioelectronics.

Important as these developments have been in determining what keeps man alive and functioning in space, many of their outgrowths may be of even greater significance in helping him live better on Earth. Solving the fundamental problem of survival in space has led to the development of techniques and systems that have socioeconomic importance far beyond the space program.

The medical monitoring requirements of space flight, for example, have resulted in the development of microminiaturized electronics which have found application in the development of cardiac pacemakers and assist devices; electroencephalographic sensor systems; and other compact, reliable, medical monitoring, and recording equipment. Remote-handling and manipulation-device requirements have led to the improvement of various prosthetic devices: artificial limbs, mobility devices, and servo-activated controls using muscle-electrical potential. Special heart-lung machines, artificial kidneys, and prosthetic devices for cardiovascular repair have been constructed. Cryogenic fluid handling procedures have surgery, bone and organ storage, blood bank management, and synthetic pharmaceutical processes.

The requirements for space food-management systems have resulted in the advancement of techniques for the preparation of foods by the freeze-dehydration process. This process makes possible the long-term preservation of food in a highly palatable, lightweight form with high caloric value, for application to survival rations for military, civil defense, and recreational purposes.

Technologies developed in the design and construction of spacecraft environment control and life support systems have increased the knowledge and application of the techniques of air conditioning, atmospheric contamination control, and water purification. Finally, closed ecological systems technology utilizing microorganisms have been applied to civil waste-management systems to provide sewage control and high protein by-products suitable for animal feed.

In the biomedical field, Apollo has made significant contributions. One is the bioinstrumentation that monitors the astronauts' physiological functions, including pulse, respiration, blood pressure, and temperature. This system is readily applicable to use in today's hospitals. Biosensor information can be made immediately available locally, or can be displayed at a central station to enable a single attendant to monitor the condition of a number of patients. Thus, dangerous indications detected in the monitoring of patients after surgery, severe illnesses, or in intensive-care wards can signal for prompt remedial action.

An inch-long primitive worm found in ponds may play a modern role in preparing man for extended flights in space. Research specialists are studying the worm, called planaria, in an effort to predict how fast wounds will heal under conditions of weightlessness.

The planarian has all the tissue layers that man has, but unlike man, it can be cut into any number of pieces—crosswise, lengthwise, or diagonally—and each piece will generate into a new planarian.

Research specialists are investigating, step by step, how fast the regeneration and reshaping of the planaria occurs on Earth. It has also been exposed to environmental extremes of temperature, vibration, and shock beyond those which will be encountered in space flight. Under all conditions they continue to regenerate. It is planned to extend these studies into higher forms of life, such as salamanders, which are capable of regenerating whole limbs, and later to mammals.

Although produced primarily for aerospace needs, sensing and monitoring systems have logical commercial applications. These systems include physiological monitoring devices, mathematical models of the heart, artificial kidney machines, instrumentation for artificial kidney machines, and a temperature conditioner for the human bladder.

The knowledge we've gained, specifically from the Apollo fuel cell contract, has enabled us to move into other new and advanced areas, including some with definite commercial possibilities. For example, there is room for fuel cells in some oceanographic applications like the long-time undersea living quarters where there is need to convert fuel into energy with as little machinery and space as possible. The fuel cell would be the basis for a powerplant that would be economically competitive, silent, and smokeless.

The foregoing instances are only a few of the thousands that could be mentioned. Man's problems are, most of them, due to the complexity of his scientific advancement, and the solutions of them can come only from the stimulus of such things as the fantastic problems of exploring space. However, there is another reason to look toward the stars, not at all associated with our "creature comforts" and the problems of mastering our physical environment. There is the matter of man's own nature. He is not an animal. He is something additional. Philosophically, he must always advance in knowledge of a more abstract nature. In simpler words, he was given curiosity and imagination. Also, he is a "spirit". It is useless to debate the nature of that spirit, but whatever it is, it drives him always toward the limits of his imagination.

Perhaps a good example of some of the non-physical benefits to be obtained from space exploration may be exemplified in the comments of the astronauts who observed Earth from far out in space, and noted how small it was, and how "unseparated" all the races of man really are, existing in microscopic contiguity. The concept of war over the possession of any tiny area of that tiny speck in space falls apart when viewed from the lofty viewpoint of a greater reality. It was the first thought of man, seeing his planet as it really is, that man's insignificance makes warfare extremely silly. Rather, these men became convinced that man's efforts should be directed toward placing himself in this limitless universal cosmos rather than to fight over a single speck of dust. There is a change necessary in man's growth, toward a larger spectrum of existence and toward physical and spiritual values that transcend his own rapidly shrinking planet. Already we can see that on our present course, we will destroy ourselves trying to perform gigantic feats of science on the head of a pin. There simply isn't room!

The same situation faces us today that faced the Old World in the days of Columbus. It would have been folly to say that Columbus and those who followed him should not have looked out over that mysterious and limitless ocean and tried to cross it. None of them even dreamed of what it would mean to mankind when they did it. And similarly, none of us can begin to imagine what space exploration will mean to mankind. There is no such thing as standing still—to do so is to go backward, inexorably. We must look toward the stars because they are there! We may die in our own waste products if we do not. We are "using up" our planet—we must find new ones.

Kurt Glemser

It's too bad that parents and their teens can't communicate. There have been two or three adults I've been able to talk to but most will not even listen. I would be very thankful if you were to publish the article and give myself and teens in general a chance to speak to the adults.

THE TROUBLE WITH PARENTS IS—

and all about today's teens—by one of them

I feel I can speak as an expert on this subject as I am one of today's teens. A lot has been said about the generation gap. The gap is a difference of opinion between the two generations. I feel there should be no gap of understanding between parents and their children. It certainly is not the children who do not understand their parents. My parents have told me their opinions and beliefs for seventeen years. It is about time they listen to me in return. It is they who are turned off, not myself.

The first mistake adults make is to treat this generation the same as any other. The authors of Sex and the Teenaged Girl, H. T. Leatham and H. Jones, stated the following in their book: "Today's teens are different, vastly different, than were the teens of the fifties and this is somewhat akin to repairing a 1967 model car with a 1957 mechanic's manual."

There is one big problem between teenagers and their parents. This is rebellion. The rebellion is evident everywhere. There is university and high school unrest. Teens have an appearance far different than teens of ten or even five years ago. Most adults disagree strongly with the way the guys wear their hair.

I have below the shoulder hair myself. It is a way of expressing myself. My parents feel my hair should be cut for no other reason than they do not like it. This is easily opposed—I like it. My hair is always clean and combed. My parents consider this my only bad point. I think this is ridiculous. I have done sufficient good to easily overlook this "bad" point. I have 100 articles to my credit. I have never failed an exam, nor have I ever written a final exam. One other person I know has the same record. That is my friend Carl Nagel. He has hair an inch or so shorter than mine. It is downright stupid of my parents to tell me what to do with my hair.

My mother shocked me recently when she did not know what grade I am in! My parents also did not know when any of my exams occur, I write articles, my marks, my school activities, etc., etc. I think somebody who knows as little about me as my parents should keep their mouths shut about my hair. I have always done everything on my own, without my parents and I don't need their ignorant comments now. I don't hate my parents, however. I like running my own life. My parents just are too darn busy with their own lives. This is the problem nowadays. People are too busy with themselves.

Two friends of mine and I were barred from one class recently because the teacher did not like our long hair. He had no right to do this, as our school allows long hair. Russell Baker had the following to say about long hair in his column in the New York Times: "A man's right to wear his hair as he wants to is one of the glories of a free society, and one of the first actions of tyrants is invariably to groom their subject males in a uniform haircut. Prisons and military training camps begin their job of reducing the individual to a cipher by shaving the head bald. The Nazis used the crewcut. The modern business-organization man is marked by the corporate trim—a hint of sideburns, no hair hanging over the collar, no forelocks more than three inches long.

Prisons, drill sergeants, Nazism and the modern organization all have a common goal in their need to suppress individualism. Schools should be less concerned with unorthodox hair lengths, and more concerned with why they are turning out so many orthodox minds willing to submit to the corporate haircut.

The schools needn't fear turning out a generation of individualists. Society has plenty of other weapons, from prison to the corporation, to outfit these boys in cipher haircuts and uniform brains."

A psychologist, F.M. Castator, of California, told me the following: "The psychological study of the older generation's reaction to hair is fascinating. I have never seen such outright hatred as when a person of 50 to 70 sees long hair on a youth. My own view is that this reaction has several factors. . .all subconscious: 1) Long hair represents a rejection of the older generation's values (including such cherished institutions as war, racism, exploitation, and super-patriotism). 2) Long hair on men seems to represent an unconcern with continually proving one's masculinity (a hobby that has preoccupied men for the last few decades). However, recent psychological tests have shown that men with long hair are the ones who are most assured of their masculinity; and don't feel the need to constantly demonstrate it to one and all. It is the ones who are so afraid of nonconformity who are unsure of themselves! 3) Long hair symbolizes life and growth. To an old, aging person, this can be a real source of resentment. To sanctify their own condition of creeping senility, they reject youthful growth.

It is amusing that most "clean-cut" types go to church each week, nod their heads in approval when the Ten Commandments come up (none of which they believe in!) and think reverent thoughts about Christ for sounding strikingly like some of those horrible young people with long hair, (i.e. "peace and love"). Then they come home and in righteous indignation beat their sons on the heads for grooming themselves like Christ must have looked! The whole thing is a fantasy and very typical of the shallowness of most people.

I'm sure most school administrators would rather we all wore uniforms. The easiest way to maintain a power base is to destroy individuality. If you recently saw "Fahrenheit 451" on TV it will give you an idea of where this is going.

Educators too often confuse "knowledge" with "regimentation". You run into this right through college (especially in the required courses).

Apparently school administrators are more concerned with the length of a student's hair than the amount and quality of knowledge they are getting. It begins to look like the real function of public schools is to make one fit nicely into the society. . .whether it is a communist, fascist, capitalist, or 1984 society.

This whole social revolution thing seems to be quite promising. The older generation certainly does not have any answers. For all their assumed knowledge, we still have war. If there is any hope at all...it is certainly with the younger people (and those whose thinking stays young)."

The saying goes, "The army makes a man out of you." I would like to know what is manly about killing, or solving problems by fighting? Some say it is only human to have wars; it is not. Millions of people have never fought in wars or have ever wanted to. That is almost as stupid as saying at least wars keep down the population. The world could be living in prosperity if it wasn't for wars. Have you ever looked at the defense budget of the U.S.A.?

Draft dodgers are not the cowards many make them out to be. It is their right to live their lives their way. Many draft dodgers risk almost certain arrest and many resist openly. The sentence for dodging the draft is six months to five years in military prison.

In Canada the citizens were promised mace wouldn't be used unless there was a legitimate violent revolution. By July 23, 1968, some 35 Canadian police forces had mace, and those in Preston, London, Waterloo, Stratford, Windsor and Hespeler had used it. But, still no legitimate violent revolution. It was recently discovered that the chemical mace can cause permanent blindness and even death. Warning: Your local fuzz is armed and dangerous!

Police brutality is not as overworked a subject as some believe. Most of the publicized reports are those that occur at peace demonstrations, eye-opening to say the least. The incidents occur frequently in the USA.

Sure, people aren't perfect. The bad cops should be weeded out and their conduct punished, not overlooked.

Everyone seems to be wanting law and order. How can you have law and order when everyone stands by and watches crimes being committed without lifting a finger?

This is the world our parents are giving us and saying, "We're looking to your generation to solve the problems." This is a world full of hate, war, ugliness and injustice. A world where you must have a slip of paper before it is right to have sexual intercourse. It does not matter if the people indulging in the sex act love each other—the thing that matters is if they have that slip of paper.

The way most adults treat the subject of sex with their teens is to me extremely amusing. My older brother and I were never told anything about sex by our parents. Fortunately, our knowledge of the subject is certainly not lacking. This is the case in the majority of families.

One girl I went steady with was asked by her mother if I had made her pregnant yet. I was overwhelmed by her mother's ignorance, to say the least. Her mother never told her anything about sex. She was, however, given a book about the subject at the age of thirteen. I hate to shock some of you adults out of your fine self-centered worlds, but it is far before 13 that sex education is needed. I received mine (from my brother) when I was eight. My youngest brother is seven. He came home with his education from the streets. These educations are often false. Luckily he got his straight—from his eight-year-old friend!

The girl I am going steady with, at the time of this writing, is living with foster parents. Her foster parents had asked me to help her study for her finals. Fine. The exams started Wednesday. I got out of school Tuesday afternoon. We went to her foster home and into the living room. The drapes were wide open and anyone who cared to could look in and see us. The babysitter was also there. We studied through the entire afternoon. The babysitter left and five minutes later my steady's sister came home. I didn't kiss or touch my steady all afternoon. Her foster mother came home and gave us a lecture. We were told she trusted us, but she told us "I know what can happen." This made me wonder how can she trust and not trust us at the same time. Another thing puzzling me was how she expected us to do anything "bad" (which is what most of you inhibited adults call it) when the curtains were open and people were in the house except for five minutes. I came to the conclusion that she either had me figured as an exhibitionist or a fast worker. I had her figured as a dirty old lady and a nincompoop. The reason for the preceding is that the first thing she thought of when she saw us was sex. The reason for the latter is that she did not realize she had contradicted herself. Also she seemed unaware of the fact that if a couple nowadays wants to have sexual intercourse they will get the chance somehow. You can bet it won't occur in the setting we were in.

My awe turned to pity. She told us she was against my visiting her foster daughter when there was no supervision because the neighbors would start talking. So here was the normal mother of a teenager trying to set three people's lives after what others thought. She never said she was against it, she said she was against it because the neighbors might get to thinking. She also said she was sure my mother wouldn't like it if her daughter was to be at home alone with me. This happens to be incorrect. My mother allows girls in the home even if she or my father are not at home. That is trust.

Another strange attitude I have come across is the one some adults have against going steady. They feel one gets to know less people if one goes steady. They also feel that it's too early to get tied down or too early to get serious. To begin with if you are around with one person, such as when going steady, you know the person far better than if you date him or her two or three times. It is not too early to get tied down. It gives experience in living with another person and teaches responsibility. The first person my mother went steady with (at the age of 21) is my father. She was fortunate to have a happy marriage—how many others don't?

Some parents also like to overdo rules. My steady's foster mother wants her to be home on time. I brought her home seven minutes late one day. She was punished for that. Seven minutes are easily lost. It could be a difference between watches. No excuses though—she has to be tight.

The same thing happens at school. I was late twice last school year. Once by five or six seconds and the second time by 30 seconds. I had to get a late slip. This procedure takes five minutes and ends in a half-hour detention. The teacher can be late and he holds up 35 students. I'm late by a few seconds of my time and I am punished. The teachers are late 5 to 15 minutes and a few times they don't show up.

Parents are pressuring many teens to go to church. I don't know one single teen who enjoys church or goes voluntarily. One long-haired friend of mine went voluntarily till the pastor told him he doesn't want bell-bottoms in church. This is stupid. How could a pastor actually do such a thing? I'll tell you. It's the same way he can support the war in Vietnam. The same way the church has been supporting "our boys" in every war. The church for me is pure bunk—religion, though, is not. I don't understand how adults could be overlooking this unless you are really vegetables, as I have been suspecting.

Yes, brothers, let us build a five million dollar church for the Lord to show him our love. I say take the five million and give it to the poor and the needy. What you need for a church is a place to assemble and a preacher. Have meetings in a field—you'll feel closer to God. Most church buildings are unnecessary and downright wasteful. A church is where you go dressed up in your best. It's where you show your rivals in the rat race your new possessions. You go there so you are looked upon as righteous just because you are there. I remember when I went to church—involuntarily. The last time was over two years ago. I daydreamed through every service and so did the rest of the teens I talked to. I enjoy services such as those by Billy Graham on TV. Here is a man who realizes what is going on. He realizes the faults with churches.

Our pastor told us that nude photographs were bad and sinful. Yes, fellow believers, the nude body is bad, it is sinful. I'll tell you church-goers something. God made that human body—it is beautiful. If you weren't so up-tight about nudity all those 'girlie' magazines wouldn't be on the newsstands. By the way, what are you looking at them for?

God is not the Lord of many of you. The Lord is money. With money you can buy power, love, people and anything else you want. I'm glad my generation thinks far less of money than yours. I could have received a job this summer. I didn't take that job. My father had everything set up for me. All I had to do was say yes. My hair was to be cut by ten inches. Not much—just so it doesn't go over the ears. I said no. This job had been picked for me by my father even without me knowing about it. I wasn't to “bum around” this summer. Here are the typical parents pushing their teen into adulthood. It's too early, according to some adults, for me to go steady, but not too early to work. I'll get my fill of work yet. I had a job for two years already. I quit it so I could have some fun and enjoy that part of one's life which is supposed to be carefree.

Our parents are mostly snivling cowards! They only stand up to people they can defeat. If the boss asks Mr. Joe Moneyslave to stay a few hours more Friday night he'll do so. It may mean delaying a vacation plan but he'll get a couple of bucks more. I hope all of them die happy knowing they have got a couple of thousand in the bank. Too bad they never enjoyed it or their life.

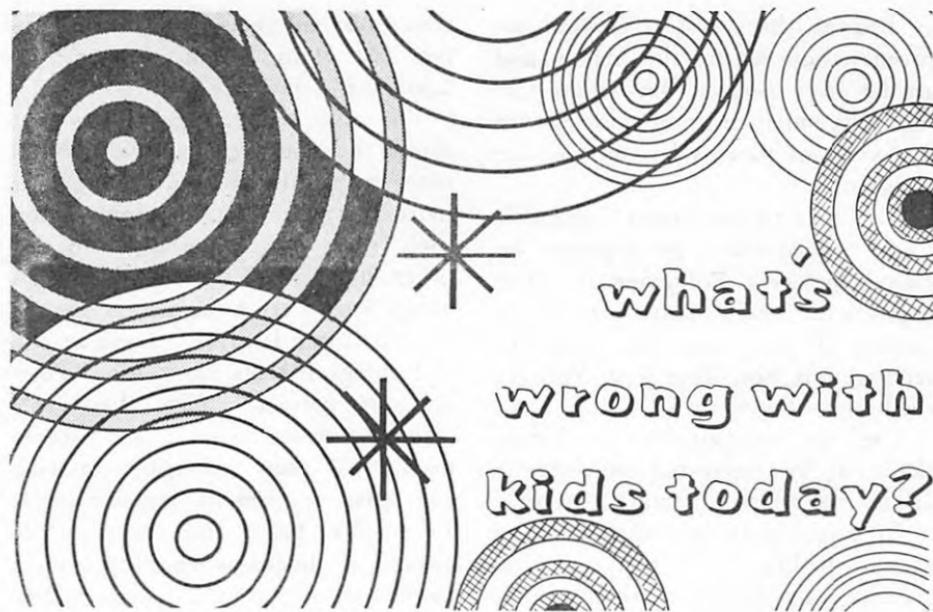

I think the hippie philosophy is the greatest. It has been said hippies are a reflection of our sick society. A few of you dummies thought it was the hippies who are sick. It's your society that's sick, sick, sick.

BY A.A.WARD

You hear a lot about the younger generation today. As a group, they are getting in the news to a degree unheard of in previous years ("the olden times", as they say.)

True—our teen-agers today are wonderful. They are healthier (thanks to their parents), they are smarter and better educated (thanks to their parents), and they are not so mercenary (thanks, or shame to their parents who gave them so many material things that the "things" and the effort required to make possible those "things" are no longer appreciated).

In spite of all of these advantages and disadvantages most of our teens are truly fine people, quietly working hard to develop their lives to the best of their ability. They are human, however, and they make many goofs just as their parents do.

A good, hard working teen-ager hates to be publicized as "bad" just because a certain percent do bad things. He is rightfully indignant to be lumped with the worst. He knows he is not entirely perfect, but he is NOT as bad as the worst. Likewise, we parents know we are also human, and are far from perfect, but we are also rightfully indignant to be lumped with the worst of parents by our teen-age children.

It is next to downright impossible to be considered a good parent by many teen-agers. Following are some legitimate beefs about teenagers today: If the shoe fits, wear it, teen-ager; if not, bless you. You are the hope of the world!

They are unreasonable. If a parent dares to be interested in a teen's affairs, the parent is snoop. It is none of his business. If the rebuffed parent then holds his tongue and consequently knows nothing, he is bitterly denounced because he is uninterested—a terrible parent.

Teens complain that parents do not trust them—especially with the opposite sex. "It is my life," they say. Being inexperienced, they are blythely unaware that a tiny misstep at this critical point in their lives may very easily end in tragedy.

The parents are expected by the teen-ager to give perfect freedom and trust to them—all the time standing behind them with their pocket books open and with words of understanding if their daughter comes home pregnant, or their son becomes hopelessly hooked on drugs, or perhaps they are required to stand by a graveside of their beloved children who exercised their freedom to drive too fast. This is not exaggeration. Look at the statistics.

Too often the teen-ager thinks trust should be one-sided. He wants blind trust from his parents. The parent must not cite past examples when their trust was misplaced. On the other hand, the teen-ager feels no obligation to trust the parent's voice of experience because, "Look at the bad things parents have done. They are not perfect." Thus the teen's reasoning seems to be: Good parents must trust their teen-agers, ignoring any past or present imperfections. Teen-agers need not trust their parent's judgment because their parents are not absolutely and totally perfect.

Young people today apparently really believe the publicity they get. They really believe they are a special breed of humanity, far superior to the preceding generation. To use an old fashioned, parent-kind of term—they have "the big head".

And now we come to the saddest and most worrisome comment of all. As a group, the younger generation is being used, and that is dumb. They are being used most effectively by those who want to destroy our free society. The idealistic young person is still far above the grubby workday world of striving, failing, and striving again. Thus, he clearly sees all the terrible flaws of our society.

Naturally, he is 'agin' the whole stinking mess. When someone cleverly points up the many injustices, and gives him the heady excitement of strikes and riots where words such as "pig", "imperialist", and "establishment" are glibly shouted, then many young people are "taken in", believing they are going to make over the world. They may be rebelling against war and the draft, rightly so, in my opinion, but they should first stop and ponder a bit. Are their tactics really going to promote peace in the world, or are they unwittingly helping only those who are cleverly egging them on?

Teen-ager, when you consider the ills of the world, do not be like the man who sat down to the piano for the first time with Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata" before him. "This is simple", he said. "You just match the written note with the keys on the keyboard." Simple? Yes indeed—after years of practice.

Those who are "using" our young people do so by appealing to their fine sense of justice. "Look at those poor people. We must destroy the establishment so all will share equally in the wealth of the nation." Is this one of the "simple" problems?

Indeed, we should all strive to help our brother who is weaker and generally raise the level of all, but in so doing we must not bring down the level of our highest achievers. "A chain is as strong as its weakest link." True, but if each individual link is not striving for greater strength, there will be no one to show the way—no shining example to pattern after. We will end up with a paper chain.

Please, boys and girls, young men and young women, open your eyes. Don't let anyone use you. Progress and justice are both measured by the individual's highest straining. No one is really helped by a society that keeps a leash on those who achieve more than others. If you really work hard on a school assignment and rightfully receive an "A", does it better the world in any way to give your room-mate an "A" also? He was sleeping while you were slaving away. Should not each individual be allowed the choice of success or failure, work or play? What else is life all about?

This brings us to what you kids have been saying all along, "We want to do our own thing." I think what we parents are trying to say is, "First—stop, look, and listen—and more power to you!"

PSYCHIC PREDICTS 3 MORE YEARS OF TRAGEDY FOR KENNEDY

“Three bad years lie ahead for Ted Kennedy—three years filled with sorrow and tragedy. Once again, he will almost lose his life. Many of those close to him will be touched by the ‘Kennedy curse.’

“But the coming misfortunes will turn public sympathy back strongly in Kennedy’s favor. He will seek and win the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976—and he will become President.”

These are the prophetic words of Chicago’s famed psychic, Joseph DeLouise.

It was DeLouise who predicted two months before the fatal accident at Edgartown, Mass., that the Kennedy family would be involved “in a tragedy near water.”

“The case is not closed, regardless of what the police say. Later investigation will reveal that a third party was involved in some way in the accident, someone who has not been in the public eye so far.

“The real story will be put together

Joseph DeLouise, psychic

from two sources. One will be a diary, which will explain the whole truth leading up to this tragic affair.

"The blame for this accident will shift to another party and the Kennedy family will do all they can to help this movement along.

"But Ted Kennedy will be involved in another serious accident which will threaten his life.

"The 'curse' he senses will rub off on some of the other people who were present in the cottage that night.

"One of the girls will meet with a mysterious accident soon. It will never be explained."

STUDENTS FLOCK TO COURSE ON NONVIOLENCE

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—A new Notre Dame University course in violence and nonviolence has been expanded more than tenfold before it even gets under way.

The course, titled "Program for the Nonviolent Resolution of Human Conflict," will be offered at the start of the fall semester.

Originally it was planned to have one section, limited to 20 students. But more than 250 of Notre Dame's 8,000 students have signed up, so three sections have been added and the limit abolished.

The student leaders propose a study of nonviolence and Father Hesburgh approved.

"I think you've put your finger on something," he said. "Billions are being spent annually for what is ultimately violence. Surely someone must be interested in investing in nonviolence."

The Gulf Oil Corporation, impressed by Father Hesburgh's stand on student unrest, awarded Notre Dame an unrestricted grant of $100,000.

A committee of students and faculty fashioned details of the program and has assembled 700 books relating to the subject.

RAY FIRED FROM UFO KNOCKS YOUTH TO GROUND

Reports of the saucer landing brought hundreds of people to a hillside to stare at the object sitting about three-quarters of a mile away in a valley below.

Saucer Victim

Among the witnesses were a police officer and dozens of Brazilian Air Force men, all of whom reported seeing the UFO on February 7 in a field near Pirassununga, Brazil, a suburb of Sao Paulo.

Tiago Machado, 19, a man who approached the saucer-shaped object, said he was knocked to the ground by a mysterious ray fired from the UFO. Machado was treated in a hospital for a strange inflammation on both legs, which was said to resemble electrical burns.

WEE NESSIE MAY HAVE A FRIEND

LOCH MORAR, Scotland—The way William Simpson and Duncan McDonnell tell it, they were rowing across Loch Morar when up came a monster.

The two Sunday fishermen said the thing from the deep lake was 60 feet long, had round humps, was dark brown and came at their 18 foot boat. McDonnell said he jammed an oar at the Loch Morar monster.

The thing bit the end off the oar, McDonnell said.

So Simpson raised a shotgun and fired. He said the blast dug a four inch wide hole in the thing and "it dived below the surface."

No one else has seen it since. Loch Morar is a neighboring lake to Loch Ness where Nessie the monster has been the object of a hunt for generations.

The Loch Ness Monster Investigation Bureau said it is sure McDonnell and Simpson are telling the truth and has turned its attention to the 1,017 foot deep Loch Morar.

SAILOR VANISHES IN TWILIGHT ZONE

Bill Verity hasn't been heard from since August 14.

Coast Guard officials reported no contact Friday and confirmed that Verity's 20-foot craft may have fallen victim to a treacherous stretch of sea called the Twilight Zone.

The zone, a mysterious patch of ocean in the triangle between San Juan, Miami and Bermuda, has been suspected for almost 100 years of gobbling up sailors and even pilots.

Coast Guard officials don't think Debbie did him in, however, and instead the Twilight Zone will be the prime suspect if Verity does not appear.

Over the years, ships have disappeared in the zone with no traces. In 1945, five small Navy planes took off from Fort Lauderdale for the Bahamas.

A couple hours later a radio message from the air group said: "We don't know our position. We don't know where we are."

They were never heard from again. The same fate befell another Navy plane that went to search for the missing five.

Veteran aviation experts claim there is a dead spot in the Twilight Zone where radio communication is almost impossible.

Verity left from Fenit, Ireland, May 22. His aim was to duplicate the trek that Verity claimed a monk took about 550 A.D. to the shores of Florida.

UFO IN QUEBEC

According to Leo Paul Chaput saucers have landed at his farm at Chapeau, Quebec, 100 miles north of Ottawa.

"We were sitting at the kitchen 'round the back," he said, "when we saw this big white light that lit up the field. It was just like day." Chaput's wife and eight children agree that strange machines have visited their ten-acre farm several times. Three large circles of apparently singed or matted grass are the evidence. The circles, each 27 feet in diameter with a perimeter about one foot wide, look as if an object with legs inside landed on the grass. One night Chaput saw a bright object "with two large red eyes" travel across his rocky field.

Two small singed trees, growing inside of one of the circles, are being analyzed by the Ontario Lands and Forests Department to identify the possible origins of the burns.

LIFE-SAVING TURTLE

MALMOE, Sweden—A young Korean who fell from a Liberian freighter more than 100 miles off the coast of Nicaragua clung to the back of a giant turtle for 15 hours before being picked up by a passing Swedish vessel it was reported recently.

Details of the incident were disclosed in a radio message from Captain Horst Werder, skipper of the Swedish motor ship Citadell, to the ship-owners, Per Liljergren of Landskrona.

According to Werder, the unidentified Korean fell off his ship about 113 nautical miles off the coast of Nicaragua last Friday. The Korean spotted a giant turtle near by and managed to climb on its back. There he clung desperately for 15 hours during which the turtle did not dive once—which would have meant certain death for the seaman.

GHOSTS SCARE TENANTS IN ANNAPOLIS

“Almost from the first day we moved in, strange things began to happen—footsteps on the upper floors when no one was up there, a chandelier in the living room which suddenly zooms to a 45 degree angle and hangs there for 30 seconds while a deathly chill comes into the room and lights that keep going on and off in rooms where no one is.”

“There are many things that happen in this house which lead us to believe it is haunted,” one of the tenants, Jim Turner, said. He explained that he had done “some investigating and found that the house was built about 1740. We also know that at some time after that, there was a card game in the garret where one sailor turned on another and knifed him to death. Legend has it that the dead waterman is one of the spirits still remaining.

"In later years," the tenant related, "a great-granddaughter supposedly awoke screaming from a bad dream. She told her parents of the nightmare, which was an exact account of her ancestor's death a century before."

"What really shakes me," young Turner noted, "is she had never been told the story of her great-grandfather's death."

The Bachelors note that "the cat screams at the same time every night and then we hear the back door open and shut and nothing more is heard from the phantom feline, I guess even spirits have to wind the clock and put out the cat," he remarked.

Jim declares that he and his companions are not going to be driven away from the 183 Green Street house. "After all, we have a lease, the ghosts don't."

He and the other three, Jeff Dodd, Wayne Hooper and Rick Marchesi, "contacted a spiritualist in Baltimore to get some advice. "She told them to wear a clove a garlic around their necks while in the house and to burn incense in every room after dark.

"We've put garlic in every spot we can think of," Jim related, adding, "The whole house reeks of garlic, but the last few nights we haven't seen any ghosts."

WHAT IS OUR WORLD COMING TO?

Let's take a look at the American scene. Most of us would say our world is in turmoil; riots, crime and drug addiction are constantly in the news. Bad, bad, bad!

Unless we enjoy being calamity howlers, the following viewpoint of the news should be most heartening. During 1968, at least 4,896,720 students did NOT participate in unruly demonstrations. 201,489,710 of our citizens did NOT use illegal drugs, and 201,459,483 Americans did NOT commit a criminal offense. Less than one per cent of each category were the offenders.

Since the majority of our citizens prefer to quietly mind their own business, which usually is not very exciting, the publicity is given to those who would destroy rather than build.

The silent majority could and should come alive. They should forget their own private affairs long enough to stand up and work for what they believe-in. Then no one need fear the envious and destructive minority no matter how much publicity our news-hungry reporters give to them.

COSMIC POWER can solve PROBLEMS

BY JOSEPH MURPHY, D.D., D.R.S., PH.D., LL.D.

NINETY PER CENT OF OUR PROBLEMS ARE HUMANLY CREATED

Change your thoughts and keep them changed, and you can transform your whole life! Mr. Fred Reinecke, an engineer, said to me recently that ninety per cent of the problems of the men in a plant were due to their personality defects and to their inability to get along with others. Then he added that only about ten per cent of the problems were of a technical nature.

The Right Way to Solve Problems

There is a right way to talk, to walk, to drive a car, to bake a cake

Actually, there is a right and wrong way to do everything.

To live a full and happy life you must live according to certain immutable and eternal principles. You would not think of building a wheel off-center or of violating the principles of electricity or chemistry. Likewise, when you think, speak, act, and react from the standpoint of the Infinite Intelligence within you, you will find that your whole life will be one in joy, happiness, success, and peace of mind.

How Changed Thinking Healed Ulcers and High Blood Pressure

Mrs. Wrongway was jealous and hateful toward the supervisor in her office; she had developed ulcers and high blood pressure. However, she became interested in the spiritual principle of forgiveness and goodwill. She realized that she had accumulated many resentful and grudging attitudes and that these negative and obnoxious thoughts were festering in her subconscious mind. She tried to talk with her supervisor in an effort to straighten matters out, but the woman brushed her off.

In a continuing effort to correct the situation, Mrs. Wrongway applied the principles of harmony and goodwill for ten minutes every morning prior to going to work. She affirmed as follows: I surround Mrs. X with harmony, love, peace, joy and goodwill. There are harmony, peace, and understanding between us, and whenever I think of Mrs. X I will say, "God's love saturates your mind."

A few weeks passed, and Mrs. Wrongway went to San Francisco for a weekend. On boarding the plane, she discovered that the only vacant seat was the one next to her supervisor! She greeted her cordially and received a cordial and loving response. They had a harmonious and joyous time together in San Francisco. They are now attending my lectures together. Infinite Intelligence set the stage for the solution of this difficulty. Mrs. Wrongway's changed thinking had changed everything, including a perfect healing for her ulcers and high blood pressure.

How the Cosmic Power Effected a Promotion

I recall a young lady once telling me, in my study: "Everybody in my office dislikes me; there are several who even want me fired."

I said to her, "Why don't you resign and find another position?"

"What's the use?" she said. "I've had six jobs this year so far."

This young lady had a brilliant mind, was well educated, and was an outstanding legal secretary. Ninety per cent of her problem was in her personality.

I gave her a spiritual prescription and suggested that she take it regularly at least morning and night for several months. I told her to pray the following prayer for every man and woman in her office every day before she went to work:

I send out loving thoughts and feeling of goodwill, happiness, and joy to all those in my office. I affirm, claim, and believe that my relationship with each one of my co-workers will be harmonious, pleasant, and satisfactory. Divine love, harmony, peace, and beauty flow through my thoughts, words, and deeds, and I am constantly releasing the imprisoned splendor within me. I am happy, joyous, and free, bubbling over with enthusiasm, and I rejoice in the goodness of God in the land of the living and in the innate goodness of all people.

At the end of two months she received a wonderful promotion and was put in complete charge of the entire legal office.

How a Mother's Mental Movie Worked Wonders

A mother in Beverly Hills was worried about her son failing in his final examination in medical college. At my suggestion, she stopped nagging and worrying about the boy, and instead began to paint a mental picture of graduation day when her son would receive his diploma.

Several times daily, she visualized the scene clearly, feeling the naturalness and joy of the whole procedure. She congratulated her son in her imagination and made a habit of this by practicing her mental movie for at least ten minutes three times daily. Whenever she was prone to worry, she flashed on the movie in her mind. She constantly saw the accomplished fact. She imagined being present at his graduation, and she saw the fulfillment of her dream.

Incidentally, I might add that shortly after her change of mental attitude, her son became intensely interested in his studies and showed remarkable improvement along all lines. Her feeling of success and triumph was subjectively communicated with Cosmic Power to her son, and he responded accordingly.

A Healing of Personality for Business Success

A man whom I was interviewing recently said to me, "I'm all mixed up and tied up. I can't get along with others; I'm constantly rubbing them the wrong way."

This young man was hypersensitive, jittery, self-centered, and crotchety. In spite of all this, he wanted to have good relations with his co-workers and to get along well with them in every respect.

I explained to him that his present personality represented the sum total of his habitual thinking, early training, indoctrination, and emotional atmosphere plus the sum total of beliefs inculcated upon his mind but that he could transform himself. I explained to him that God indwells him and that all the attributes, potencies, qualities, and aspects of God were lodged in his deeper mind and could be resurrected and expressed in his personal life.

Accordingly, I gave him the following specific prayer for the purpose of transforming his entire personality and making him radiant, happy, joyous, and fabulously successful.

He affirmed feelingly and lovingly several times daily as follows:

God is the Great Personality, the One Life being expressed through me. God is, and His Presence flows through me now as harmony, peace, love, beauty, and power, and I am a channel for the Divine. His wholeness, beauty, and perfection are constantly being expressed through me. Today I am reborn spiritually! I completely detach myself from the old way of thinking, and I bring Divine love, light, and truth definitely into my experience. I consciously feel love for everyone I meet. Mentally I say to everyone I contact, "I see the God in you, and I know you see the God in me." I recognize the qualities of God in everyone. I practice this morning, noon, and night; it is a living part of me.

I am reborn spiritually now, because all day long I practice the Presence of God. No matter what I am doing—whether I am walking along the street, shopping, or going about my daily business—whenever my thought wanders away from God or the Good, I bring it back to the contemplation of His Holy Presence. I feel noble, dignified, and God-like. I walk in a high mood, sensing my oneness with God. His peace fills my soul.

As this man made a habit of allowing attributes and qualities of Cosmic Good to flow through his mind, his whole personality underwent a marvelous change. He became affable, amiable, urbane, and increased in understanding, and he now communicates vibrancy and goodwill wherever he goes. In addition, he has moved up several rungs on the ladder of success in his field of work.

How You Can Develop a Marvelous Personality

Emerson said that religion includes the personality of God. All the elements of personality are within God, such as love, peace, joy, beauty, laughter, happiness, power, harmony, rhythm, order, serenity, and proportion. God is also Law, and we express our Divine personality as we begin to operate the law and claim, feel, and know that these qualities and attributes are flowing through us. Then we become more God-like every day.

The word "person" comes from the Latin persona, which means a mask originally worn by Greek actors. In ancient times the Greek actor put on a mask and assumed the role of the person depicted by the mask. He dramatized through the mask the characteristics and qualities of the personality it suggested.

How a Secretary Practiced Empathy and Established Harmony and Understanding

The dictionary defines empathy as "the imaginative projection of one's own consciousness into another being." It might be called "sympathetic understanding."

Mrs. Jean Wright, secretary of our organization, told me how she practiced this art in relation to another girl in an office where she formerly worked. This girl was very hostile, antagonistic, and quite obstreperous, a great misunderstanding seemed to be growing between them.

As a result, Mrs. Wright sat still a few times each day and projected herself into the mind of the other woman and looked out at herself through the other's eyes; she then corrected what she saw and claimed: "God's peace, harmony, and understanding reign supreme between us. Whenever I think of Miss S., I claim, 'She is loving, kind, cooperative, and harmonious.'"

After about a week, the girl invited Mrs. Wright to her home for dinner; during the visit they were pleasantly surprised to discover that they had many interests in common. Eventually, these two women became fast friends as well as good associates in their work.

How a Silence Between Sisters was Broken

Recently, while I was speaking in San Francisco under the auspices of The Institute of Religious Science, an old friend had breakfast with me at my hotel. She told me that her only sister would no longer speak to her: when she phoned her sister, the latter would hang up the phone with a curt phrase: "I'm busy; don't bother me."

My friend found it very difficult to understand her sister's attitude, which on the surface seemed so unreasonable and stupid. I spoke to her, pointing out that if her sister had tuberculosis or cancer, she would not be angry with her. My friend answered, "Of course not. I would be most compassionate."

Then I added, "Your sister has what we might call tuberculosis of the mind, and you must realize that many people have twisted morbid, and distorted mentalities and are often referred to as mental hunchbacks."

Suddenly she realized that she was not responsible for the mental state of her sister, no more than she might be responsible for someone who was an alcoholic, a schizophrenic, a psychotic, or a paranoid.

She said, "Oh I see now! I am not responsible for her mental sickness and hostility toward me, and all I owe her, as Paul said, is love. I do love her and wish for her all the blessings of life."

She prayed as follows: I completely surrender my sister to God. I radiate love, peace, and goodwill to her, and there are harmony, peace and Divine understanding between us. I loose her and let her go.

After a few days, her sister called and apologized for her rudeness and hostility. She freely admitted that the break-up of her engagement had caused her to project her resentment and hostility not only to her sister but also to many others.

I might add that my friend was spiritually and emotionally mature, but she was overly concerned with the deformed and warped mentality of her sister.

Your understanding will keep you from anger, criticism, and hatred, or from seeking retaliation against the warped minds of others. Remember, you would not hate a person because of a physical deformity, such as that endured by a hunchback; rather you would be grateful that you were spared from such a misfortune.

The person with a distorted personality is very unhappy within himself and is a seething cauldron in inner turmoil. Quite frequently, he lashes out at those who have been most kind and generous to him, because their inner serenity, tranquility, and poise reveal his own disturbed emotional state; since he can't reach their quietude, he unconsciously tries to drag them down to his own emotional debauch. Misery loves company!

His Application of the Golden Rule Resulted in a Wonderful Promotion

I talked some months ago with a man who had earned a Ph.D. and had believed that his diploma would guarantee his success, prestige, and recognition; but he eventually discovered that there were men in his organization who had no degree at all and who earned far more money than he did and exercised greater responsibility.

I explained to this young man that there are many distinguished Ph.D.'s, linguists, professors, doctors, and similar brilliant and capable men from all walks of life who now inhabit Skid Row in Los Angeles and the Bower in New York. These men usually attribute their trouble to alcohol or women; but the real reason is self-depreciation, self-condemnation, self-loathing, and lack of all contact with the treasure and wisdom of their Cosmic Powers, which could set them on the highroad to happiness, freedom, and peace of mind. They are down on themselves and they lack self-acceptance and true expression. Their habitual thinking attracts to them misery, suffering, and poverty. Yet these men, who are often highly educated, have at one time risen to the higher echelons in their respective fields. Their alcoholism, dope addiction, and abnormal behavior are but symptoms of their twisted and warped personalities.

The man of whom I am speaking was highly critical and jealous of his associates. He spoke of them with a touch of asperity in his voice. His trouble was his failure to practice the Golden Rule.

At my suggestion he began to treat others as he would wish others to treat him. He began to practice smiling and being kind, graceful, and pleasant with all his associates. He persisted in this attitude until it became habitual, and today he is one of the most affable, amiable, and loving personalities you could meet. His success is assured, and he has received a wonderful promotion which dramatizes the truth: change your thought pattern and you change your life!

You Are Needed Regardless of Your Age

Emerson said, "The Great Oversoul has need of an organ where I am, else I would not be here." Sometimes I meet people who say, "Oh, my children are all grown up. They don't want me or visit me any more." Remember, God and His Cosmic World have need of you. There is no such thing as an unneeded or an unwanted person. Each person is a note in the grand symphony of all creation. There is a special and particular role for you to play. The Bible says: The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God (Isaiah 40:3).

The desert of confusion, lack, and limitation is your own mind, and you can now listen to the inner voice which speaks to you in the form of your heart's desire and which is telling you to arise and to elevate yourself higher because God has need of you. Say to yourself: "God gave me this desire, and he reveals to me the perfect plan for its fulfillment in Divine order." As you adhere to this truth, the way will open up and your desert will rejoice and blossom as the rose.

Saying "Yes!" to Life in Cosmic Truth

The Bible says: Let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil (Matthew 5:37).

Say "yes" to all the ideas which heal, bless, inspire, elevate, and strengthen your life. Come to a clear-cut decision that you will accept only the eternal verities and spiritual values of life and then purposefully build these into your personality. Rejoice in your sense of oneness with the Infinite Intelligence and Infinite Mind and contemplate the wonders of your Divine sonship. Say "no" boldly to all teaching, ideas, thoughts, creeds, and dogmas which inhibit, restrict, and instill fear into your mind. In other words, accept nothing mentally that does not fill your soul with joy.

Realize that God is Life, and that He is your life now. God is Love and His love fills your soul. God is Joy, and you are expressing the fullness of joy. God is Wisdom, and your intellect is anointed constantly with the Light from On High. God is peace, and you are expressing more and more of His peace in your thoughts, words, and deeds. As you make a daily habit of realizing these truths, you will develop a radiant personality and make a highway for your good in all ways and things.

How You Can Triumph Over Depression and All Obstacles

The Bible says: Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain. (Isaiah 40:4).

When you are in the valley of despair, dejection, and melancholia, turn to the God-Presence within you and realize that external things and conditions are not causative. All things pass away. Conditions do not create other conditions.

The primary cause is your thought and feeling—i.e., your mental attitude, the way you believe. Conditions and circumstances are suggestive only; you have the power to reject or to accept them.

Decide, therefore, that Infinite Intelligence reveals the way out. Contemplate in your Cosmic thought the way you want things to be, and the mountain (problem) will be removed and the hill (obstacle or difficulty) will be shattered. As you claim that Divine law and order govern your life, the crooked (the ups and downs of life, the swings of fortune) shall be made straight and the rough places plain—i.e., you will begin to live a balanced life of growth, achievement, and advancement free from detours into sickness, accidents, losses, and foolish expenditures of energy, time and effort.

As you keep your eyes on the Cosmic Power, and as you tune in on the Universal Wisdom within you and make contact through your thought and feeling, all the barriers, delays, impediments, and difficulties will disappear, and the desert of your life will truly rejoice and blossom as the rose.

TRUE EXPERIENCES

TALE OF THE BROKEN FENCE

By Mary James

Here is a story which is absolutely true! I lived among the people concerned and was born and brought up on the property on which it occurred.

A member of the family with which I lived, on Long Island, New York, was subject to what, in those days was called fits of being "moon crazy"! When the full moon was present, he'd go into wild frenzies of anger.

My mother had a neighborhood friend, an Irish lady, with whom mother would visit a time or two each week. At the full of the moon one time, this lady was coming over to "kaffee klatch" with mother and to get from her house to ours she'd come through a three bar wooden fence—stooping to get through between the top and second rail. This man saw her as she was getting through the fence and grabbing a heavy pine stick, he beat her to death there in the fence! In the doing, the second bar was broken with the weight of her body.

Her son (17 years old) ran to his mother's aid and received a smashed spine for his heroic efforts. Death followed within three hours.

The subsequent trail and his freedom is too fantastic and too "far out" to go into.

But the one thing which was weirdly fascinating is: The fence was repaired—and every time that the moon was full, that second rail was found broken in exactly the same way as it was during the horrible murder. Not once—but eight different times! Two of the men sat guard, twice, to see what took place and each time, it broke with a resounding “crack!” of the wood. Finally, the fence was taken down.

I knew the victim’s family, fine people! I know and have visited the two graves, they are buried on Long Island, two miles from the scene of the murders.

This is completely true! I am never likely to forget it!

THE EAVESDROPPING GHOST

By Andrew Lee

Although I had been expecting a certain ghost called “Williams” to become highly interested in my activities and maybe even to appear at my home, the manner and circumstances of his appearance left me somewhat shaken at the interest and knowledge that departed spirits can show in earthly affairs.

My previous experiences with the supernatural folk had almost always occurred within a “proper” setting, i.e., well into the night under conditions of no artificial illumination. However, this particular ghost chose to appear in a semi-darkened hallway, not for the purpose of haunting, but to eavesdrop, because my father and I had been discussing him as a result of a project I had undertaken.

To some the appearance of this ghost at that particular time might seem merely a coincidence, but that a ghost should appear after a long absence at a time when it is the topic of discussion smacks of more than coincidence; it shows that the departed take a very active interest in affairs concerning their haunts.

I live on a cattle ranch in central Washington approximately 30 miles west of Grand Coulee Dam. Rainfall is a scant 10 to 15 inches per year, and land, which settlers once attempted to cultivate with high hopes of success, has long since reverted to rangeland.

“Oldtimers”, still resident in the area, call upon their memories for stories of this region when it was a raw, booming frontier land and relate how the forbidding terrain and violent human passions of a bygone era left many spirits behind that still remain with the land for obscure reasons of their own.

It is from these oldtimers’ tales that I acquired the background of Williams and the dark deed he committed for which he still remains to haunt his former abode.

During the late 1800’s and early 1900’s, parts of central Washington were made available for homesteading, and prospective empire builders flocked to the region to avail themselves of the free land for the taking.

For several years after their arrival the settlers prospered, but, during several years' drought, their topsoil blew away and the resulting poor yields forced them to abandon their farmsteads and attempt to settle in more hospitable areas.

During this time and for perhaps 20 years afterwards there occurred the robberies and murders prevalent in any lawless frontier society. Many individuals, and on at least one occasion, a whole family, disappeared, never to be heard from again. Whether they were robbed and murdered for their possessions or were forced by lawless elements to flee for their lives remains as a matter of conjecture.

The haunting presently under discussion, by the ghost my family has known for 40 years as "Williams", received its impetus on a small homestead located in an area of our ranch considerably hostile to productive cultivation. The house itself was located on a bench between scabrock and sage-covered hills to the south and similar rugged terrain to the north. Oldtimers are vague as to the date the farmstead was established, but believe it was sometime between 1890 and 1900.

The homesteader was compelled by the nature of the land to seek employment elsewhere, leaving his wife along at home for long periods. During her husband's long absences, the lonely woman often entertained neighboring men, and, since her home was located on a main wagon road, passing strangers also found a welcome and a respite from their travels.

"Williams," it seems, was a frequent visitor to the lonely homestead, and became quite interested in the woman who occupied the house. For some reason, however, he murdered her one day in the house and buried her about a quarter mile away. His eventual fate after this is not known to the oldtimers' knowledge.

When my grandfather acquired the site of the homestead in 1926 as part of his ranch, it already had a reputation among his neighbors as harboring the shade of the murderer.

On many occasions Williams was seen in the area, sometimes near dusk, often even in the daytime. My father and my uncles often encountered him during the heat of the day seated in the shade of a sarvis tree about a hundred yards from the site of the house. When approached, he either gradually faded from sight or spoke a few angry words before disappearing. These words were often, "Leave me and mine alone!"

For a time after my grandfather's arrival, the haunting was rather moderate. My grandfather, however, moved the house about a mile's distance to a new location close to his house for use as a shed and unwittingly brought Williams home with him as an unwanted guest.

For the next thirty years Williams' presence was often discovered at night in the vicinity of "his" old home. Most of the time he was discovered sitting part way up a utility pole by the bunkhouse, about a hundred yards from the present site of the building in which the murder occurred.

My father has often observed him at night sitting in midair some distance up the pole, but, whenever he has attempted to question the ghost he has received the same dark admonition to "Leave me and mine alone!"

Then Williams walks through the air to the chickenhouse, through it and thence into "his" house. Never has he given any indication of the reasons why he remains either at the house itself or at the house's former site.

In 1956 an aunt from West Virginia visited the family, and, since she lives in an area where ghosts seemingly abound, she became quite interested in the tale of Williams.

One night my aunt and my father proceeded to the homestead site to attempt to establish some sort of contact with the ghost. Standing atop a small cliff overlooking the foundation, they began calling to Williams by name, beseeching him to speak to them and confide to them his reasons for remaining on the ranch to haunt his former abode.

For awhile there was no answer. Finally they heard some fearsome growling from the blackness below that seemed to gradually approach them. Then they were ordered in no uncertain terms by a voice originating close by to go home and stay there. Although my father will not admit that he was frightened by a ghost he had often encountered before this, they "got."

In January 1968 I was home on a 30-day leave from the Army prior to reporting for my new assignment in the Republic of Vietnam.

My encounter with Williams was the result of treasure-hunting activities in which I had been engaged. I had decided even before coming home to spend most of my leave hunting for treasures rumored to be in the area.

Accordingly, I borrowed a metal detector from a treasure-hunting cousin and proceeded to check the foundations of all abandoned homesteads and ranches to which the unpredictable winter weather allowed me access.

My search for hidden wealth finally led me to the site of the house in which Williams had murdered his mistress. The foundation of the house and a nearby cellar yielded me many rusty cans, tools, bottles and several well-preserved pots.

My efforts marked the second time that the cellar had been excavated by treasure seekers. One of my uncles had dug out part of the cellar in 1956. He states that, as a result of his digging, Williams was very much more in evidence around our house than was usual.

Therefore I suspected that, if the stories I'd heard concerning Williams' desire for privacy were true, I might be visited by Williams himself with a warning to halt my search.

On the night of January 23, having spent the greater part of the day with my father digging in the cellar, I began preparations to retire about 10 o'clock, which was an early hour for a soldier on leave. My father had stopped in the doorway of my bedroom to discuss the day's treasure-hunting activities.

During the course of perhaps 45 minutes, we discussed such aspects of the oldtimers' recollections of Williams as whether there could have been any valuables secreted in the vicinity, whether Williams knew what I'd been doing, and the possibility that he might take some sort of action to halt my activities.

Directly behind my father, as he faced me, was a hallway along which are located three bedrooms, including mine, and a bathroom. The light from my bedroom dimly illuminated the hallway.

Several times during our discussion I thought I had glimpsed something behind my father and to the right, partly hidden by the door jamb, as I was not seated in a direct line with the hallway.

I leaned sideways on these occasions to obtain a better view, but since I didn't believe there was anything out of the ordinary in the hallway due to my father's presence in the doorway, I didn't try to obtain a good view along the hallway.

We finally concluded our discussion and my father turned around preparatory to retiring to his room. Just as he turned, he stated soon afterwards, he found himself face-to-face with Williams, not three feet away from him. As soon as his presence was discovered, Williams immediately disappeared. My father, who had seen Williams on many previous occasions, was quite positive of his identity.

Thus ended my excavation of the foundation and cellar site. I had practically completed my work there that day, and, since Williams had shown so much interest in my work, I decided to call it quits.

The only plausible conjecture I can derive from his appearance during a time when he was the subject of discussion is that he was eavesdropping on our conversation to find out any further plans I might have concerning the cellar.

To me this experience proves that at least some ghosts possess great interest in temporal affairs concerning their former abodes and are both willing and capable of exerting a not insignificant influence upon these affairs. In the light of Williams' strong disapproval of anyone's tampering with what he so obviously considers his property, I sincerely believe that he would have taken strong measures to intervene had I persisted in my activities.

THE PATH TO PERFECTION

A Symbolic Painting

And Its Meaning

by COLUMBA KREBS

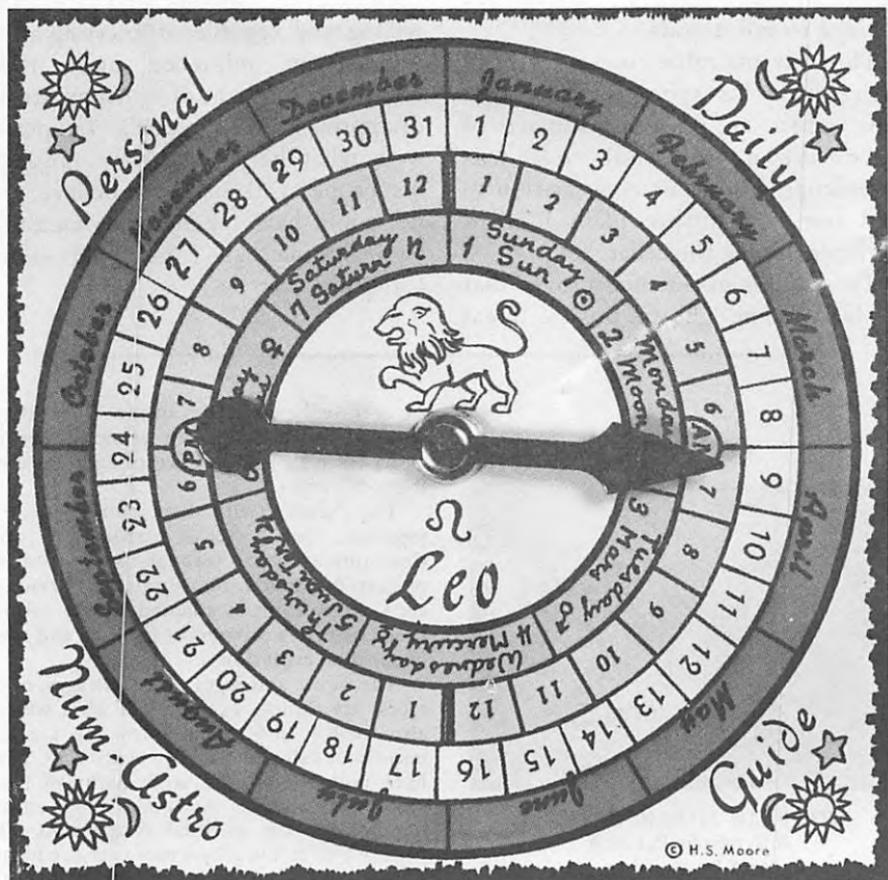

As mankind climbs the winding path (from cycle to cycle) that leads to spiritual development, and in their efforts to reach the pinnacle of perfection, their ideas about God expand. This comes from their increasing understanding of themselves and the universe. We must go (at least) halfway to meet our infinite Creator (Who is Ever Present in All Persons). So, while looking for Him outside (under any Name we give Him) we eventually meet Him inside. We must get "heaven" inside us before we can get inside of it, through the practice of righteousness (right-use-ness).

The "trees" (with their many branches) represent man's eternal striving to reach God-consciousness, through some form of religion (orthodox, unorthodox or personal, etc.). Each form is adapted to the various needs of man's progress at that age and stage of spiritual evolution.

The saints and sages down the ages, of all races, are shining examples of what we can also evolve into to perform the greatest miracle of full perfection in every way. They have pointed out the same paths of basic moralities, which is the fundamental ethical requirement for spiritual progression. The path of perfection grows narrower the higher it goes, and fewer souls are upon it, because of the stricter conditions, to test their mettle.

The millinium can come only when enough souls have risen above the "underground" of evil and ignorance, etc. that held them down; and reach the heights that lead even beyond the stars! The "lotus-flower" (symbol of all the virtues in full bloom) at the top, projects rays of all the highest powers to those who make the grades.

ARE YOUR DREAMS IMPORTANT? HERE IS A FASCINATING LOOK INTO OUR CONFUSING DREAM WORLD!

Eight-year-old Mary Smith had a dream that laid a finger on the killers of her father! She claimed that her father appeared to her in a dream and named his killers (plural) and also told where an empty shotgun shell and her father's billfold could be found. The murder occurred on the night of January 9, 1942 in Wadley, Georgia.

The police not only found the incriminating evidence where the little girl said that it would be found, but the two men guilty of the brutal slaying of a filling station owner as well. The killers had not even been on the suspect list!

Ervin Scott, a relatively young man in Indianapolis has nightly dreams of recall and writes them down for future reference. Some, doubtless, stem from certain emotional stresses, but how does one rationalize his dream foretelling the failure of a great bridge in West Virginia? The bridge collapsed some three weeks later during a rush hour, killing in the neighborhood of fifty persons and with great monetary loss.

And, too, how did Ervin Scott come by the dreamed-predictions of three assassinations, each prediction coming almost exactly one year in advance?—the late President John Kennedy; his brother, the late Senator Robert Kennedy; and the Voice of the Black Man, Rev. Martin Luther King.

It is possible to imagine the past with considerable facility but for imagination to pinpoint those fated to die while in the pink of health, in a society which normally does not kill its members indiscriminately, is something the imagination is not supposed to do accurately; and the same is true for the theory of “decaying images” of past events. But, among others, the now legendary Edgar Cayce was exceedingly good at this sort of thing—even though his “dreaming” was via self-induced sleep (trance). The same laws may apply in all cases of unconsciousness.

So many have taken poor old Morpheus to task! They are so sure that the material substance is all there is. Yet Albert Einstein pointed out that there must be other dimensions than our own (and, in my opinion, no dimension would be complete without “substance” of some sort).

EVERYONE DREAMS

Even the day-old infant and the lower animals dream. Since the beginning of time (presumably), man has been speculating on this sometimes startling phenomenon. You would think that anything universal would be clearly understood by all men, but very little of a concrete nature is known about dreams and dreaming.

While casually observing a sleeping pet, perhaps you have noticed it twitch and make snuffling or growling noises while its eyelids fluttered in an exaggerated manner. He was dreaming. This eyelid twitching, with man as with beast, is called “rapid eye movement" (REM). It is indicative of the dream state and has been well established by many researchers, notably in New York City, Chicago, St. Louis, Durham, N.C., Los Angeles and certain other large cities. Many colleges and universities either have well organized or are preparing to organize parapsychology departments. It is the "in thing"! And the occult—including dreams—is being investigated in a more than casual way by the University of Moscow.

For some reason, as yet unclear, concise recall of dreams is neither necessary nor particularly common. Everyone, though, dreams several times during the course of each night's sleep, except those caught up in drug or alcoholic stupor. The newborn child does more dreaming than anything else for the first six months. And those born blind also dream. Of what the very young and the congenitally blind dream is a moot question, but it would seem right to assume that they "visualize" abstract forms. Yet dream we do; the electroencephalogram says so!

Even though much is being learned about dreams and dreaming in general, all scientists are justifiably cautious when issuing statements anent progress. They usually preface their remarks with, "In my opinion. . ." or something enigmatic. But it is becoming increasingly clear that good health depends much on the process of dreaming, calling to mind that old rule about eight hours sleep per night. It is suspected that dreaming is a form of instruction on the conduct of the physical life. And it is now known that the body produces a toxic substance which is dissipated ONLY during periods of real dreaming.

Ancient philosophers mostly assigned spiritual connotations to dreams, but modern philosophers, such as Emmanuel Kant, David Hume and others (from the 17th century A.D. onward) felt strongly that dreams were cast-off portions from aware thought, a kaleidoscopic potpourri of human experience.

Sigmund Freud, the first great psychologist, supposed that dreams were generally a hodge-podge of nonsense, a clearing-house for all sorts of guilt feelings, yet, occasionally were amazingly logical. He opined that all dreams could be interpreted in an ordinary, material sense, provided the stimuli was known. Above all, he believed that all dreams dealt with sex, or at least something pertaining to the primitive procreative force, as with an infant's dream being the desire for shelter and nourishment in the arms of its mother as a means of alleviating inherited guilt complexes.

If science would spend half the time searching for controlling laws which it now spends in debunking, it might join together all of the loose ends we now have with regard to the dream paradox. This would the more quickly answer some of the questions now confronting us. For instance: Why do some persons have prophetic dreams while most do not? Are some better able to receive than others?—"on the beam", so to speak, like tuning in a radio or TV...And why.

Let us conjecture, for a moment, that dreams are requisite for renewal of spiritual values and, or energy, as separate from energy absorbed from the food we eat; the one being necessary for the functioning of "mind" or whatever you wish to call the Ego (intellect), and the other being necessary for the operation and upkeep of the material structure.

It is immutably certain that when the Ego leaves, the physical body absolutely ceases to function—and its labors cannot be restored as an operating unit (even though, strangely enough, individual organs may be kept alive, sometimes for long periods of time). When the Ego departs, it is said that there is a sudden drop in body weight, so that, from this, it can be deduced that the Ego is something of a substance—but in WHAT dimension?

Although a dream must be, first of necessity, a psychological experience—a "something" dealing with the human psyche—it is, secondly, in some way yet unknown, also biological—as many philosophers down through the centuries have asserted; primarily biological, they have said. But there are certain disturbances occurring in deep sleep (without REM) which should not be included as part of dreaming. These are somnambulism (sleepwalking), narcolepsy (unnatural drowsiness during the day), enuresis (bed-wetting), and nightmares. These are antagonistic to natural sleep whereas true dreams are "second-nature" to slumber. The commonest form of such disturbance—the nightmare—is said to be associated with hypoglycemia, a condition of low blood sugar, and may be combatted by a relatively high intake of carbohydrates (sugars, starches) shortly before retiring.

Some dreams are said to extend into wakefulness, with the persons involved being aware of it. Sleep is very close to hypnotism. Mental disease or mental instability shows itself quite early in dreams.

"AND THE ANGEL OF GOD SPOKE TO ME IN A DREAM"

A great many confide that dreams seem real and must have definite though often esoteric meanings. In less sophisticated days, this belief was far more prevalent than now. The Bible says: "And the angel of God spoke to me in a dream, saying, 'Jacob!' And I said, 'Here am I,' " (Genesis 31:11) whereupon Jacob was shown how to act with subterfuge.

Legend has it that Pontius Pilate's wife had a dream of warning about Jesus of Nazareth. Long before that, in the heyday of the Roman Empire, Brutus dreamed of extending a helping hand to Julius Caesar—but, instead, he was the first to stab Caesar on that fateful day in March.

Spencer Perceval, Prime Minister of England in 1812, dreamed that he would be assassinated in the House of Commons. Seven days before this, John Williams had the same dream. Perceval's family tried to persuade him not to go near the House of Commons. But the duty-abiding gentleman insisted and paid with his life. He was shot by a madman.

James Watts, inventor of the steam engine, while trying to make shot a less costly process, dreamed of the way this could be done. The sewing machine, as we have it today with the hole at the bottom of the needle, came to Elias Howe by way of a dream in 1845.

On October 11, 1918 Bobbie the four-year-old son of the Beresfords in Buckinghamshire, England had a dream about a Mrs. Timms. The family knew no Mrs. Timms. But the little boy insisted that someone should tell Mrs. Timms that her son was killed—lay dead "in the mud". Actually, Mrs. Timms lived some twenty miles away and had a son in uniform. Three days after Bobbie's dream, Edwin Timms was killed at the

In the early days of our 20th century, Franklin D. Martini enjoyed a great following in astrology, palmistry, handwriting analysis and as an interpreter of dreams. He wrote numerous books on these subjects. He methodically recorded all dreams brought to his attention and added the end-results, where such results were forthcoming. From this accumulation he compiled a large Dream Book.

The contents of this book, though quaint, are interesting. For example, to play a dream organ—Martini believed—meant to enjoy a good life and to have events laid out for one in advance. For a man to dream of a harem meant to waste one's energies in the pursuit of "useless pleasure"; for a woman, it meant that she would become a great flirt. To dream of chickens, Martini decided, was a sign indicating cares and worries—yet all would eventually come out well.

Will the nature of dreams and dreaming at some time become known with certainty? The human race has always exhibited undeniable fickleness—interspersed with much chicanery and dallying—but I would hazard the guess with considerable confidence that some bright day we will know all any human being could ever ask about this great fascination from times immemorial. Yes, I did have a dream about this article. . .

THE THIRD WAR--PARALLELS

..... Are These Prophecies True?

by ROGER PAINTER

Our two biggest headaches will be the racial problem and Red China. Through the latter's subversion and meddling in the racial strife, numerous African and Asian nations will turn against us and provoke a world war in the decade of the 1980s. Vietnam and Korea will lead us into this 'inevitable' war with the Red Chinese."

A GIFT OF PROPHECY,

William Morrow & Company,

"There is the strongest vibration of a major war in the 1980s..Russia and the United States will become allies and will eventually fight against the real danger, Red China. China will be regarded as the great enemy of mankind."

THE RELUCTANT PROPHET,
Doubleday & Company, Inc., 1968.

"Now we can predict that World War III will begin in 1983, and that the world (cycle) will end (Nostradamus!) in this century!"

FORUM, September, 1968.

"Mr. Lindh has mentioned to us a war with China to begin in 1983 and end in 1897 with victory for the United States."

SEARCH, March, 1969.

"Assuming war does take place during the 1980's, my speculation concerning the dates of such war would suggest 1983 as the beginning and 1987 as the end."

FORUM, January, 1969.

"In 1983 A.D., the U.S. is expected to be at war with China. . .In 1987 A.D., the war is expected to end in victory for the U.S.A."

FORUM, February, 1969.

"October 2, 1983. . .should mark. . .the beginning of the great Armageddon. . .April 15, 1987, should mark the end of Armageddon. . ."

THE TIME OF THE END,

Harvest Publishers, 1951.

"And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun. . . And she being with child cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered. And there appeared another woman in heaven; and behold a great red dragon (Red China?)..and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born. And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne. And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God; that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days. And there was war in heaven. . . And the great dragon was cast out. . . And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child. And the woman were given the two wings of a great eagle (the United States?), that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time (3½ years—October 2, 1983 to April 15, 1987?), from the face of the serpent. . . And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed. . .”

MORE PREDICTIONS

World nations trying to land astronauts on the Moon are sternly warned of a wide disaster which could wipe out much of the human race in 1986, according to Paul Twitchell, spiritual leader of ECKANKAR, the ancient science of Soul Travel; which Twitchell describes as a world-wide movement with more than 150,000 followers.

In an exclusive interview during his recent eastern tour Twitchell told us, "The Moon Plague, which is some sort of a virus, will have the same disastrous results as the Black Plague, which almost decimated the population of the European countries in the Dark Ages.

"Approximately a quarter of the human race will be carried off by the Moon Plague before the scientists can find an antidote to halt it. Perhaps 100 million people will be affected by it.

"The only areas not to be touched by it will likely be New Zealand, Ireland, Iceland, parts of Australia, Mexico, and the lower parts of South America, Alaska, Scotland, Tibet, Northern Canada, Scandinavian countries and the desert areas of the United States, Central Asia and North Africa."

The Moon Plague, as Paul Twitchell calls it, will be some sort of virus never before found in the annals of human history. It will be brought back by those who return from duties on the Moon. These persons returning will be carriers of the virus. It will wipe out millions in Asia, Africa, Russia and parts of the Far East, where the population is heaviest and strike the European countries. Except for the large cities in the United States, most of the population will not be affected.

According to those that keep track of these things, Twitchell has been 85 percent right in his predictions. In another warning he has told the space agencies that they should look into the atmospheric conditions of the Moon and other planets which could be dangerous to the human body, before they are opened for extensive explorations.

Twitchell is considered to be one of the leading figures in the field of prophecy today. However, unlike other psychics, he uses a method called ECK-Vidya, an ancient system of prophecy which can be accomplished during soul travel.

He explains that while "out of his body" he is able to see events long before they happen. To do this he explains all one has to do is travel out of the body and look at the Akashic records of an individual. These are in the form of a deck of cards which can be fanned out and read at will.

"We carry these Akashic records from one lifetime to another, building up a permanent record of events which we have done in each incarnation.

"What a reader will do is look at this fanned out deck of cards, or the Akashic records, and pick out specific points of certain lifetimes which he feels are important and thus when someone else gives the same person a reading it may be different because I will think one thing more important than another."

Twitchell explains that readings more-or-less "depend upon the judgment and the ability of the reader and what he thinks is important. If you have a good reader he will give you some interesting information. If he doesn't know what he is doing, or reads something wrong the information you receive will be of little value."

THERE GOES CALIFORNIA

"I stood atop a mountain and could see the shores of California for many miles. The winds were whipping up the seas sending waves a half mile into the air. Suddenly the earth trembled, the ground shook with a mighty force and I could see the far off villages and towns glowing as fires blazed out of control.

"In a matter of minutes portions of California were slipping off into the sea with only the screams of a million persons filling the air.

"I then awoke in a cold sweat only to know that what I had just dreamed was a psychic impression of what was to come. Prophecy of a day not too far away when there would be mighty earth changes."

This vision is but one of several which has brought the subject of prophecy to the forefront of our lives. The many predictions that California would sink sometime in the near future have received tons and tons of news publicity.

The above psychic dream was given to us recently by a young lady who wishes to be known only as "Helene". And although she uses her psychic gifts in her every day life she refused publicity and shuns those who use their "talents" for unconventional purposes.

Helene however asked us to point out that she does not see California going under right away—although it will happen sometime in the near future. When it does it will happen with little, or no warning and will change the shape of our west coast.

Actually the sleeping prophet, Edgar Cayce saw such events more than thirty years ago while in a semi-sleep like state. In fact Cayce foresaw a complete upheaval taking place that would change the course of the Mississippi and put both the coast of Southern California and New York City beneath water. He also told of seeing the rising from the sea of the legendary continent of Atlantis, as he put it “not so far away”—sometime before the year 2000.

In a recent conversation in the Washington, D.C. office of noted seerest, Jeane Dixon, we discovered that she too foresees many of these same things happening in the years to come. About the sinking of California she pointed out that she did not feel that it would sink now but that it would sometime within the next 50 years. She also told us that when this took place, “In the twinkling of an eye lash”, Atlantis would also rise—in a matter of moments.

Jeane Dixon also pointed out that she was among those who had been recently misquoted in predicting that California would sink in April of 1969. “This is just not the case. I have no idea where this idea started. I certainly didn't make any such prediction.” She was convinced that the late Edgar Cayce also had been misquoted.

In fact checking on this ourselves we discovered, talking with those high in the ranks of the Association for Research and Enlightenment, that Cayce had never set a definite date for California to sink. Several persons in the society we talked with were concerned that their “prophet” would get a bad name because of the publicity which has been given to the subject in recent months—especially after the date set by self-made researchers of Cayce's work who claimed that he had pin pointed the exact date, and even time, when California was due to meet its doom.

Several months ago, in a lengthy conversation, another noted prophet, Daniel Logan author of THE RELUCTANT PROPHET (Doubleday & Company) told us that as things now stand both California and New York would sink sometime before the turn of the century. However on a lighter side he commented that all this could be changed if people would just send out good vibrations and sweep away the negativity that seemingly has taken our nation by storm in recent years.

It is interesting to note that many of the great prophets of our time (i.e. Dixon, Logan, Cayce) all claim to have had visions of similar events which are yet to take place.

Both Jeane Dixon and Daniel Logan (who interestingly enough seem to be of different political ideals) see the next great war as taking place between Russia and the United States who will combine forces to fight Red China.

According to the Philadelphia Prophet, Ted Owens, the next world war will not be an atomic war as would be expected but will be fought with germs. In fact Owens, just like Twitchell, sees a period in the near future which will pit the United States against an attack by germs. However, unlike Twitchell, he sees this as a result of a secret, and silent, attack by Red China.

Another noted psychic, Malve Dee also sees the U.S. and Russia against China but points out that before then all things will not necessarily be all wine and roses. In fact she sees several problems including trouble over Berlin "which seems to cause a flareup of old hatreds and jealousy."

In other world situations the Amazing Canadian Psychic sees the mid-east situation continuing to be explosive. "Peace talks and recommendations put forth by the United Nations will be ignored.

"Moshe Dayan's aura shows that he is in a period of personal danger, and thus he should take care. A warlike man, and the quotation comes to mind 'that those who live by the sword, shall most certainly perish by the sword.'"

England's most publicized seer, John Pendragon through his American representative, Brad Steiger tells us that "The Dragon of China will move south with devastating effects. There is great danger coming from China in the more distant future."

Joseph DeLouise whose prediction of the collapse of the famed Point Pleasant "Silver Bridge", was 100% accurate says that "U.S. troops will be involved in other Asian wars, including one that began in a small way in 1968, and will continue to build up more in 1969 and 1970.”

Elaine Chambers, founder of the City of Light, told us in an exclusive interview that “Before long our cities will be practically destroyed in order that our people will have to learn to live, work and play together, a Brotherhood if you will. Many will come together before the end of the 1960’s to do just that. People will begin to migrate to the Northwest, mountain and valley areas to begin with. Our economic system as we know it now will collapse such as banking, credit systems, bank interest, politics, religions, education, etc.

“Africa will become the United States of Africa and one day will be a leading world power.

“In the next war I believe we will go against Red China and not Russia. In fact as it appears to me it will be the U.S. and the Soviet Union pitted against the mighty forces of the Chinese.”

Elaine also points out that she sees several attempts to overthrow our Government from within the U.S. “They will come close to even destroying Washington but in the end Justice and the Destiny of the United States will win out.”

How will this war end? Well actually “Man will have to give up his war because Nature will begin another war with mankind. Hunger strikes all over the world—many will die of starvation.”

However, according to many of these same seers, the years after these great events and forthcoming wars will show a great change in the attitude of men upon this earth. There will be an awakening of such things as psychic phenomena and a merging between the third and fourth dimensions.

The world as we know it today will no longer exist. For those chosen few who are left there will be amply amounts of the necessities in life. Leisure will then be possible and work will almost be totally unheard of.

Are these visions the work of deluded people or are they actual revelations of what is to come in the years ahead?

In any respect prophecy has always been a subject of fascination since the days of the Bible and we can predict, with 100 percent accuracy that this topic will continue to be just as interesting tomorrow as it is today.

THE ANCIENT ATLANTIC By L. Taylor Hansen

AMHERST PRESS, AMHERST, WISCONSIN 54406

The magnificent biography of an ocean! From the "beginning" when the continents were one, down through the eons encompassing ancient Atlantis and Lemuria, noble Greece and Egypt, to the present when science is rediscovering the peoples who lived prior to the great destruction, before Eden.

Where did man come from on this planet? How long has he been here? Who has he been - who is he now? Was there really an Atlantis, a Lemuria? Were there true civilizations hundreds of thousands of years ago?

THE ANCIENT ATLANTIC is a scientific, scholarly book, being, literally, the story of the Atlantic ocean from the very beginning, with the creation of the continents, the formation of the ocean itself, the tremendous geological events that have culminated in the world we know today. It is also an archaeological and ethnological history of the development of the civilizations of man around that ocean - for it was on Atlantis, in the center of this ocean, where mankind began. Every scientist will want this book; every library, every school. Yet this book is written so EVERYBODY can understand it, ordinary people who know this old planet has had a wonderful and mysterious and tremendous past.

The book contains 440 8-1/2 x 11 pages. It has 96 full-color illustrations and full-color maps.

You've heard the psychic predictions that one day Atlantis will rise again from the sea? Well, it IS rising! Not in any dim future, but now! One of the chief concerns of both our government and that of the Soviet is WHY there is yearly more land UNDER the Atlantic than the year before? Why is the ocean getting shallower? What will happen if the process continues? Do you think the atom bomb is the greatest threat to our continued existence as a civilization? Then you don't know the secrets of the Atlantic, where our destiny is being made!

You students of mythology - where is the ancient city of Ys, of Lyonesse, of Tyr-na-n'-oge, of Hellas? Mythical cities? Not by a long shot! We know where they are now! Did you know that the Loch Ness monster is no longer a folk-tale, but reality - photographed by the British Air Force - and "Nessie", as they call her, is really a plesiosaurus? Do you know where the "Dragon's Morass" is; Brunhilde's Bath; Charon's Crossing (where Cerebus ferried the dead across the river Styx); the ancient "labyrinth"; the Pillars of Hercules; Mt. Atlas; the lost Cassidies? Fairy tales, you thought? What a surprise you've got coming!

THE OAHSPÉ CIRCLE

INFORMATION, PLEASE

Dear Ray:

Your Editorials are always interesting but more than that, they are often uplifting. There's been many a time when you saved my day by your cool logic and sound reasoning. Thank you my friend, "I am glad there is you," a rare man among men, full of compassion and love for others. The suffering you have endured would break a lesser man but you emerged triumphant. May you indeed live long to guide and help us on the path. You are needed and wanted. I speak for a great majority of your readers, who like me, are lax in telling you so. Take it from one who finally got around to it!

I have a newly acquired copy of "Oahspe" and thus far have only read the "Book of Judgements". It has kept me spell-bound (for want of a better word!) and I cannot help but feel that this book will steadily grow in recognition and significance.

Are you still interested in forming an Index for Oahspe? If so, you can count on my assistance. All I need to know is what pages to read and what to record. Such an index is vitally needed and I hope that your many loyal readers will respond to this request. Now for some questions for "The Oahspe Circle."

1. What is meant by the 1st resurrection and how does it differ from the second?

2. I would appreciate more information on the Drujas (evil spirits). Are so called "earth bound spirits" included? and what is their (the Drujas) ultimate destiny?

3. Does the Creator have a form similar to that of man or am I correct in assuming that He is spirit. (In Him we live and move and have our being.)

4. What must we do to attain to the creator's voice and is this "voice" much like the still, small voice mentioned in the Bible?

There was an excellent article in the June 1963 issue of SEARCH. It was entitled "You can control your Health" by Joan Merrill. Some of the shocking conditions mentioned in the article may have been rectified, at least I hope so! Frankly, I am not a flesh eater and my health has not suffered as a result of its exclusion. This does not make me any better or any worse than my flesh eating counterpart, but he may taper off a bit if he reads the above mentioned article!

● To answer your questions:

1) Read chapter XIV of Book of Sethantes. Also chapter XIV, verse 8, Book of Lika. There are many other references, but these will answer your question.

2) All drujas are "earthbound". It is typical of a druja that he remains with the living to obsess them. Eventually they are rescued (or may desire to do something better of their own accord). Sooner or later they catch up with their fellows in the upper resurrections. Nobody stays a druja forever.

3) The Creator, according to Oahspe, has no human form. In fact,

He is forever incomprehensible to man. He is the Ever-present, the All-encompassing. The god with a human form is a false god, once a man on Earth (or other planet) who claims to be the Creator.

4) Any sincere striving toward improving yourself adds to your ability to hear the Creator's voice. He speaks to the soul (that still small voice you mention), through color and perfume, through the lion and the mastodon, in the sound of the wind, the whisper of the trees, in all the manifestations of nature. There is nothing in the universe that is not "the voice of the Creator". Use your senses, and learn. His examples are all about you.

We'll keep you in mind when we decide to make an index. Thanks.—Rap.

Dear Mr. Palmer:

I would greatly appreciate an answer to just this one question: How can or could anyone believe anything in the Oahspe, when they are so utterly wrong on Mormonism?

Helen A. Russell

P.O. Box 648

Beowawe, Nevada 89821

● You are caught in the trap of the concept of "the one true religion". Oahspe tells how Mormonism came to be, but it does not condemn it. Actually, today, the Mormons worship the Creator, as we all do. It doesn't matter what name you give to Him—He knows when you address Him! You must read Oahspe more carefully to know that it is being misinterpreted when you say it is "utterly wrong on Mormonism". If you think that, then Oahspe is "utterly wrong" on every religion. Any religion that claims the Creator to be a man, is in error. It is correct when it says God is a man, however. God and the Creator are two different things. How can you possibly reject 928 pages because you disagree with one paragraph! However, follow your highest light—it will eventually lead you to the proper goal.—Rap.

Gentlemen:

As a student of the OAH SPE (1882 edition), I have found a greater light than I had ever dreamed of in my search for spiritual knowledge. The purpose of this writing is in the hope of furthering my knowledge of what is now being done in the Kosmon Church.

I would like to know if there is an organized society or publication that I should be made aware of. Any assistance that you may give me will be greatly appreciated.

KENNETH PLANQUE JR. DEFENSE FUND

We are Faithists in the Creator because we seek to live Him and practice Him as He has been revealed to us in Oahspe. We seek to identify ourselves with Him through the attainment of internal peace and harmony and through concerted efforts for universal peace so that the world might be a place of rejoicing for humanity and for generations yet unborn.

In order to attain these objectives, the world has been blessed with Oahspe the only known religious book in the western world which has openly condemned war and vigorously condemned the army as a profession for a Faithist. We swear in the privacy of our homes to find an end to war, crime, violence, and poverty. We covenant individually and severally to renounce violence and all weapons of death. We pledge ourselves before the Creator not to war or aid war but rather to search for peace all the days of our lives.

But since the revelation of the words of Jehovih the Creator, in this epoch making book—Oahspe, the faith of the Faithist has never been tried or tested nor has his courage for enduring torture in place of war, been measured. Now, Jehovah the Creator, the only universal Light, Wisdom, Love and Power, has moved that His words should be tested by the Government of man. The Faithists have been hidden in a corrupt and wicked world, but now the Father moves the dawn of public confrontation between the powers that be and the power that brings into being. The Faithists have been inorganic because of their individualistic struggles for their great mission—the founding of the Father's Kingdom on earth. Our religion is a force for peace and a shield for all those who live in the Creator by their Faith, good work, and by their renunciation of violence against whom-so-ever the Creator has created alive.

If Him whom we worship is the highest and the best of human Ideals that the human mind can conceive of, then we should profess Him before any human government that rules by the sword which is masked by the laws of the majority who sanction violence as a supreme authority of the state. If Him whom we worship is the unity of the whole universe, seen and unseen, then we should stand with His power before the limited and temporal power of constituted authority. If Him whom we worship is the Truth and all others are false, then we should take the lead in bringing about the reign of truth in our corrupt human society, which is dominated by false gods who thrive in violent force, war, and the destruction of human lives.

The angels of Heaven have moved that Kenneth Planque, Jr., should abide by the Creator by his refusal to register with any human club or association whose expressed purpose is the taking of the life of any person whom the Creator has created alive. This refusal is not a challenge against the commanding of mortals to slay or to be slain. It is a challenge against the mechanism, the very law which authorizes the registration of mortals in clubs or associations with violent intentions. It is a challenge against the draft law which protects the elders who decide which American youth should be sent to the battle field to be killed without any formal charge of guilt. Many of us must have registered in such clubs before. But Kenneth Planque Jr.'s refusal to register ushers a new era: the reign of truth, peace and the conquest of fear.

You are blessed that this confrontation between human government which sustains itself through war and brutal force and the Eternal power, even the Creator, who alone holds the secret of "peace and harmony among mortals" is to be staged in your time. You are blessed that the angels of heaven have moved that you be contacted in order that you may give whatever you can afford

May Jehovih, the Creator, awaken you to the need and the urgency of the impending case over Kenneth Planque, Jr.'s refusal to register with the draft board.

Fraternally Yours
Dr. Somayina G. Nwoko

● Unfortunately, you will have to use your own personal judgment in this regard. Oahspe also advocates the adherence to man's laws, such as registering for the draft. However, a registered person can still refuse to kill, or fight, as his religious conviction—and this is also a personal matter. Naturally, the draft is not God's law. Further, there are many Kenneth Planques, and the solution is more complicated. You may register for the draft, but “thou shalt not kill”.—Rap.

Dear Rap,

In the 1882 version of Oahspe, page 566, Chapter IX, Verse 3, Kosmon said: “let the wise man and the prophet consider the signs of the Almighty! Two extremes forerun the change of the Gods and Saviors in heaven. These are, extreme disbelief and extreme belief. The one denieth all Gods, and even the person of the Creator; the other becometh a runner after the spirits of the dead, consulting seers and oracles.”

Now, quoting from “The Freeman” (a magazine devoted to the teaching of private property and the free enterprise system) June 1969, Volume 19, number 6, page 323: “More than a century ago, in 1848 Karl Marx and Friedrich Engles, on behalf of the Communist League, issued the Communist Manifesto, one of the most famous appeals for revolution. . . The objective has been realized, in varying degree in the Soviet Union, Mainland China, Cuba and the Soviet Satellite states in Eastern Europe.”

Now back to Oahspe, Page 770, Chapter XIX, Verse 18, “And in Hidesville, in Guatama, on the earth, the angels opened the door in Jehovih's name to be not closed again forever, forever!”

And now I refer you to the Encyclopedia of Occultism, author—Lewis Spence, page 381: “What is generally regarded as the birth of modern Spiritualism took place in America in 1848, in that year an outbreak of rapping occurred in the home of the Fox family, at Hydesville, in Arcadia, Wayne County, New York. . . Spiritualism in America was from the first, intimately bound up with Socialism. The cult of Spiritualism was in fact the out-growth of the same state of things which produced socialistic communities.”

Now look in Oahspe, page 604, Chapter X, Verse 9: “There is also another kind of prophecy, wherein man prophesieth by spirits speaking through him. This is dangerous, for lying spirits may come to him.”

To sum up—we believe that the two extremes spoken of by Kosmon are Spiritualism and Socialistic Communism.

AN ANSWER TO AN INQUIRY

Dear Ray:

I found the other address where one may get The Urantia Book, perhaps for two or three dollars cheaper. It is the 1961 edition published by W.M. Publishing Trust

COMMENTS

Dear Ray:

I'm happy to be receiving SEARCH once again. It's good to see more articles on Oahspe, and to see some real evidence of its coming to the fore. I'm grateful that there is now a magazine acquainting more of the public with this great book. Thank you, Ray, for this service to us. We're all in real need of additional knowledge and better enlightenment as far as the more concrete construction of the Earth and its inner planes are concerned. For the most part people have been in a rut. Old teachings have lost their meaning. The many churches and faiths with their own doctrines, ideas, and interpretations have done little to bring this about. As a consequence our Earth is now in sad condition. But there may still be hope for us all in our time to see some real advancement. Well whatever, please do keep up the good work. Many of us are very grateful to you.

Oahspe has been my Bible for the past 20 years.

Dear Editor:

I have read Oahspe from the front to the back, the first time it was the Wing Anderson edition. If one is to take the book seriously, then one must be prepared to prove it true or reasonably accurate for guidance.

Detroit would fit nicely in the picture as a place where in atmospera, resting on the earth, would be a knot or hell. The Druks are here for all to see, living in confusion. If one chooses to imagine, accompanying them would be the Drujas. The wine and whiskey bottles that are discarded everywhere are a testimony to the state of the general public, or grade below one. Today being a holiday (July 4), the smoke from burning meat fills the air in public parks and back yards. As the Druks feast on burned flesh; so perhaps the Drujas gather to enjoy the vapor from the barbecue ribs and drink to the stupor along with their partners the Druks.

In the book of "Jehovih's Kingdom on Earth", chapter twenty-four, fits Detroit and vicinity also our public officials like a tailor-made shirt.

I am glad to see the Oahspe Circle in SEARCH. Perhaps you could publish a part to the "Forum" called Esfoma.

SO YOU'RE GOING TO HEAVEN?

By M. R. Keith

This is the second book in the trilogy written by Mr. Keith, the first being "WHAT EVERYBODY OUGHT TO KNOW ABOUT HEAVEN". It is now ready for distribution. We, as editors and publishers, have never seen so enlightening and comprehensive a survey of all the literature written on the subject, and we consider these two books already published to be invaluable to anyone who believes in life already published to be invaluable to anyone who believes in life after death and what it must be like. Perhaps the best way to describe what "SO YOU'RE GOING TO HEAVEN?" contains is to list the chapter headings:

Travel Folder - Passport - Luggage - Transportation - Transition - Ports Of Entry - The Solidity Of Heaven - Locomotion - Clothing - Body - Time - Nourishment - Family And Social Life - Work and Play - Government - Flowers, Fruits and Trees - Scenery - Pets In Heaven - The Waters Of Heaven - Houses And Also Mansions - An Administrative Palace - The Cities Of Heaven - Instruction - Art Galleries - Music - Fabrics - Libraries - Science - Children - Spirit Helpers - Worship - Boundaries - A Visit To An Upper Realm - Planes - A Visit To The Lower Regions - Lower Planes - In Space, But Where? - Place Or State, Which? - Look Us Up Some Time - References.

Compiler Keith lists 45 books, tells you where to get them, and briefs the contents of each. Very handy for researchers.

"SO YOU'RE GOING TO HEAVEN?" has 262 pages, is beautifully paperbound in full color, clear and easy to read type.

We on Earth are actually entering the Space Age. Our traditional cosmic isolationism is ending. Earth is in touch with inhabited outer space! What will this mean to us? What are the implications? What changes does it portend for us? How can we prepare ourselves for vast changes that are on the way? As we begin to study the impact of the New Age on our civilization it seems that what is happening to the minds of men on Earth is more important to understand than what is happening in our skies. In other words it is the terrific impact of the space ships on our human norm of life, the challenge which these and similar events pose to our very concepts of reality beyond the very confines of Earth's gravitational pull. What will it do to us and our civilization? What effect will it have on our human institutions, our way of life, our manner of thinking?

An unusual book. Olaf Jansen, a fisherman from Sweden, and his son, sailed by accident through the North Polar opening into the Hollow Interior of the Earth, and lived two years among its people. Olaf Jansen claims this is his true story as told to Willis George Emerson. He tells of a race of Super Giants, fifteen feet tall, far advanced scientifically, who treated them with the utmost kindness. He lived in peace and harmony and traveled all over their country. He claims they returned through the South Polar opening. The book is fascinating reading, with pictures, charts, maps. It's up to the reader to believe or disbelieve their story. They swear it is true.

The COMING of the SAUCERS

By FLYING SAUCER DISCOVERER Kenneth Arnold

The original flying saucer book! It was Kenneth Arnold who gave the saucers their name, and he wrote the best book of them all. Here it is, in print after ten years! This is the famous book that tells the true story of the death-dealing "Maury Island Incident" in which two Air Force Intelligence men lost their lives, and Arnold himself barely escaped with his skin. To those in the know, this story is the key to the whole U.F.O. mystery. Perhaps the entire significance of this amazing adventure will never be told, but what you will read in this book will stagger you. No fiction mystery could ever match this true story.

A truly important book! In all respects the worthiest concept of occult teachings that has yet been written. Fiction? None but the ignorant would believe that! The author was an advanced student of occultism, and in his sensational book he has tried to place before his fellow men a tremendous reality he discovered concerning this earth of ours, and life on it, in it, and beyond it.

Flying Saucer Pilgrimage

By Bryant &
Helen Reeve

They went on a 23,000-mile pilgrimage to meet the people who claimed to have seen flying saucers, even ridden on them! They wanted to know these people for themselves, so they could judge their stories! Here is their factual account of that pilgrimage. Meet them all for yourself: Adamski, Fry, Bethurum, Williamson, Angelucci, Van Tassel, Desmond Leslie, many others. And then they saw a saucer themselves! Read their exciting conclusions, their singular message to you. "The authors have written the account of adventures and experiences in a most readable and delightful light-hearted manner, however, do not be deceived by their gay and happy style. Oh, yes, they want you to enjoy their pilgrimage with them, and you will, too. But this book certainly goes 'deep' and explores saucers, the space people and their raison d'être, from every possible angle."

GODS OR SPACEMEN

By W. R. DRAKE

Paperback -- $2.50

AMHERST PRESS
AMHERST, WISCONSIN 54406

If the literature of antiquity could prove that Spacemen visited our Earth long ago would this wondrous revelation not transform the past, inspire the present, give hope to the future, bring new meaning to Man himself? Our religions, philosophies and culture were based on the belief that our world was the center of the universe and mankind the sole preoccupation of God. Would proof the Earth was once ruled by Beings from other planets not seem the fundamental discovery of our century?

The spaceships now haunting our skies suggest Extra-terrestrials mastering millenia of science, therefore surely it seems logical that they also visited Earth centuries ago, when primitive Man worshipped them as Gods from heaven.

The word 'God' has at least two distinct meanings. The Absolute, imagining the universe in Whom we live and move, and the local 'Gods' or Space Beings, who originate from some advanced planet and from time to time manifest among men.

Today we realize our Earth is not the center of Creation but a grain of dust in a space-time universe including universes of various dimensions co-existing within our own, all paralleled by a possible universe of anti-matter.

Many of our fundamental conceptions are based on false promises. We should sweep away the dust and dogma of centuries and study phenomena as they really happened.

This book is the result of fourteen years of research into those realities as recorded in the history of the ancients.

cross. There is more than one kind of cross—so, forgive them Ray—pray for them Ray—and though they may sacrifice you—have you not already given your lifetime that truth shall set them free? Jesus went down fighting—He did not lose—for He said the Father and I are one. So long as you stick to your beliefs—fight for what you know to be truth, and know that God expresses Himself through you. That you and God are one just as a mother and her unborn child are one. That to enter the real truth of Heaven we must listen to a teacher and learn of truth, then learn to think correctly for ourselves that we may be born again, spiritually, and if we succeed, the truth will set us free. You cannot lose, Ray, so long as you retain your perspective. But should you allow your magazines to become simply the sounding board for every man's thoughts, with no guidance—the purpose becomes lost—except for the readers to see their names in print. Believe me. They would become the only subscribers—and Ray and all the rest of us would have lost.

So let them rage at your comments! They don't hate you. They envy you. They bait you and buy your next issue just to see what you have to say. And Ray! if they do drop out they will probably go to hell anyway—for with you they couldn't learn anything—and they probably will remain just as unteachable.
