Creative Psychology

A Class under the Instruction and Leadership of

RALPH WYLIE, M. B.

Meeting twice weekly at the rooms of the Psychological Research Society of New York, Inc., Tuxedo Building, 637 Madison Avenue, corner 59th Street. This class is devoted to the study of normal rather than abnormal psychic phenomena, but is considerate of both. A word of human speech is just as great a miracle as a true clairvoyant prophecy, and the revelations of a child are as wonderful as the revelations of the bible. So, without bias, or fear, or favor, this class studies the psychology of simple things with a view to forming sane and sensible ideas about the big things that concern us all, such as habits, social relations, marriage, child-life, religion, preparation and death.

Details concerning this class may be had from the Secretary of above Society. Phone: Plaza 8452.
