Isbister's "Pro and Con" Series

This is to be a series of volumes dealing with the more important debated questions of public interest, in which the subjects shall be treated, not, as is usual, from one side only, but impartially by acknowledged authorities on both sides.

Neither will see the argument of his opponent; but each, working independently, has made out the strongest possible case for his side. Most readers, not already extremely well informed on the subjects, will be astonished to find how strong both cases are.

The two essays are bound together—the "con" following the "pro"—in a handy octavo volume, well printed and well bound, to be sold at the very moderate price of 2/6 net. In addition to the arguments themselves the book also contains a very full bibliography of the question, the intention being to make each book of the series not only a most important contribution to the immediate discussion of the question with which it deals, but also a valuable work for permanent reference. The volumes, which are under the editorship of Mr. Henry Murray, are as follows:
